GOLF LOVING BRITISHERS CHEER SWEETZER'S VICTORY

United States' Veteran Takes Match From Simpson 6 and 5.

AT MUIRFIELD.

Championship Leaves Britain For Second Time in History.

MUIRFIELD, Scotland, May 31 (Canadian Press).—Jess Sweetzer, veteran of the links of the United States, was too much for Alexander Frederick Simpson, a Scottish civil engineer, new in the championship tests, in the final thirty-six hole round of the British amateur golf tournament on Saturday. The score was 6 up and 5 to play. Thus the championship passes from British hands for the second time in its history.

The defeat of Simpson, while not unexpected, was a blow to the hopes of golf-loving Britishers, who felt that their representative in the final round had come through the event by too easy a route. Britons were the first to concede Sweetzer's deserved triumph, however, the result of consistent play which became brilliant at frequent periods and which stood the test of several hard-fought battles in the early rounds, including a sensational struggle with his own team mate, Francis Ouimet.

The conclusion of the tournament is a triumph for the young New York banker, who had been reluctant to interrupt his business career for the invasion terminated what in many respects was the most remarkable British championship ever staged.

There fell in the tee-side the men on whom Great Britain chiefly pinned her hopes, including Robert Harris, Cyril Tolley, Major Harlet, Sir Ernest Holderness and Roger Wethered, and with them went the members of the United States Walker Cup team, including Bobbie Jones, amateur champion of the United States.

Coming through the semi-finals Friday by cleanly defeating the picturesque London Irishman, W. H. Brownlow, in a thrilling twenty-one hole battle, Sweetzer outdid himself on Saturday by his clean-cut performance in the thirty-six hole test. His powerful driving was ever in evidence, while his irons seldom failed him. On the greens he was safe and sure, although seldom brilliant.

Loser Outlucked.

For his opponent, the cavernous bunkers with which the Muirfield course is thickly spotted, yawned for many shots and penalized him cruelly. He was caught in the jaws of one of them at the twelfth, and after failing to escape in two shots, gave up the hole.

At the thirteenth, another trap caught his tee shot, and although he came out perfectly with a niblick and holed a long putt for a par three, all the good it did him was to make the score six and five, instead of seven and five. He was dormie six at that point, and only miraculous golf could have saved him from defeat at the hands of the machine-like Sweetzer.

There was unprecedented enthusiasm when Sweetzer won on the thirteenth. Crowds rushed to congratulate him, for a good golfer is a good golfer with Scottish crowds, let the strokes come from the clubs of an invader or a home star. Sweetzer was hoisted on the shoulders of spectators at the winning green and carried a quarter of a mile to the club-house through a lane of cheering links devotees.

The championship was played throughout under ideal weather conditions. The sun shone brightly every day, with enough rain at night to keep the putting greens in excellent condition.

While the final holes of the match were being played, the widespreading eighteenth green was set like a great green carpeted stage, with the beautiful trophy won by Sweetzer gleaming in the sunlight on a table in the centre. Crowds massed twenty deep circled the green, and near the cup gathered members of the honorable company of Edinburgh golfers, officials of the U. S. G. A., and famous figures of the golfing world.

Sweetzer's appearance on this scene was somewhat delayed by Scotch lads and lassies, who presented autograph books as soon as he emerged from the club-house. Finally a lane to the green was opened for the new champion, who was welcomed by S. Gillon, captain of the Honorable Company's team.

"Are We Downhearted?"

"My lords, ladies and gentlemen," said Gillon, "are we downhearted?"

Cries of "No, no," came back from the crowd.

"The amateur championship has gone to a citizen of the United States," he continued. "It's happened before and, I fear, will happen again, unless the youth of Scotland take to-day's result as a lesson, and in the future devote more time to the ancient game.

"There is no doubt that the best man won. Sweetzer is a complete golfer, armed with every possible stroke a golfer should have. I hope he will come back to Britain and defend his title, and I hope that we will beat him."

As Gillon presented the trophy to Sweetzer, cries for a speech from the crowd brought modest response from Sweetzer.

"I will come back and I will be beaten," said the new champion, who paid tribute to his opponent's effort to carry on when apparently beaten. He asserted that Simpson's remarkable recovery from a trap at the thirteenth and his wonderful putt would ever be remembered in the history golf.

Sweetzer said the galleries at Muirfield had been very fair, and declared that "my good shots were applauded more than my opponents were."

SCORELESS DRAW.

Toronto Scottish Make Debut —Tie Canadian Nationls.

MONTREAL, May 31. Canadian Press. — The local "Premiere" of the Toronto Scottish at Alexandra Park here on Saturday, where they engaged in a scoreless draw with the Canadian Nationals in an interprovincial soccer league encounter, was a mild affair, witnessed by less than 500 spectators. On play the Torontonians were worth one or even a couple of scores, for despite play that was ragged in spots they gave ample evidence of possessing a good combination. Lack of finish, however, was their chief fault. In open field play they showed themselves superior to the locals, but in front of the goal their efforts fizzled out.

Crescents Win Lacrosse Game at Brooklyn, 5 To 3.

BROOKLYN, May 31 (Canadian Press)—The Crescent A. C. lacrosse twelve defeated the Montreal A. A. outfit, 5 to 3, here on Saturday. Trailing 3 to 1 at the end of the third quarter, the New Moon players came from behind with four goals in the first ten minutes of the final period.

Using the famous old Canadian mode of play which ruled in the United States more than a score of years ago, the Crescents brought the entire team down on the attack in staking the winning rally. Ten players were used in the onslaught which landed the ball in the net four times, setting aside all the skill of the tubby Bellrose, who played a sterling game for Montreal.

CAMPBELLFORD OUT OF SOCCER FINAL

De. Laval Eliminates Opponents in Phelan Cup By 4 To 1.

In ideal weather at Campbellford, the DeLaval soccer team eliminated the Trent Valley boys from the Phelan Charity Cup by the score of 4 goals to 1. From the outset the Campbellford boys showed the lack of practice and training to stand the full ninety minutes. DeLaval boys made the trip in two hours and report a splendid outing; also no mishaps.

First Half

Campbellford fielded a ful eleven against the Peterboro DeLaval who only gathered the quota of ten men and played throughout the tussel with that number. The game started at 4 o'clock with Peterboro facing the sun and slight breeze. The Trent boys visited DeLaval territory for Wilson to clear. After eight minutes' play, J. Smith opened the scoring from close range. A few corners fell in succession to DeLaval. Then Campbellford tried to force the issue but their anxiety while on the ball made them lead up to a series of miskicks in front of goal. Two corner kicks in "Trent's" favor were unproductive. Exchanges continued throughout until Shannan, at inside left, made no mistake when he registred the second goal, just before half time. Peterboro 2, Campbellford 0.

Half Time

On resuming, Campbellford attacked, Cooper having to clear a splendid shot by Bolton. They replied again and found the net through the efforts of Blackwood on the left wing. Thereafter, play run from end to end without any success in which corner kicks were in abundance. A break-away by Cross terminated in him making no mistake in his run in upon goal. Two minutes later he repeated the same performance. Campbellford and DeLaval confined the play to mid-field although Fowler, DeLaval goal, made some brilliant saves in the closing minutes, while Rev. Clark had no chance whatsoever with the shots that beat him. Peterboro 4; Campbellford 1.

Goal scorers—DeLaval, Cross 2, Sharman and Smith; Campbellford, Blackwood.

Campbellford—Rev. Clark, goal; Fitzpatrick and Romaine, full backs; Bell, Cleverley and Bruce, half backs; Heal, Bolton, Sargeant, Gay and Blackwood, forwards.

SPLENDID, SCIENTIFIC SOCCER BETWEEN QUAKER AND THISTLE

Reynolds Hits the Uprights Twice in Succession—Bellamy and Ward Thistle Scorers.

SCORE 5 TO 2.

Quakers Had No Breaks But Got Two Penalties—Mayette's Great Goal.

Finer weather conditions for the soccer league match than those obtained on Saturday afternoon could not have been wished. A good attendance of spectators was present to witness one of the most scientific games ever played in this city. Every player was a sportsman in every sense of the word, although Anderson's and Wade's greater experience earned the honors, to their teams advantage. The Thistle won by five goals to two. Joe Mayette's goals were the features of the day.

Opening Very Slow.

The Thistle started against the sun and they initiated a movement on the left wing that Logan repelled with a pass up the wing to Reynolds, who made a raid on goal, but Wade nullified his good work when he let his forwards pay a visit to their opponents goal. Maker punted back up field again. His half-backs carried the attack close in upon the Thistle defence. Close checking followed in around the goal area until Anderson conceded a fruitless corner. In a mid-field tackle, Reynolds gained possession from an accurate pass by Logan. He carried the ball right down on to the touch line and feinting a kick, slipped it forward to his centre-forward, who was two yards in front of goal, but to his surprise the parting shot was wide of the mar...

Thistle Opened Scoring.

Each side was putting plenty of vigour into their play. Lively tackles between Bromley and Quakers right wing resulted in scientific soccer coming out. An intercepted pass favoured Thistle when the Thistle left half-back fed his outside left at the opportune moment. He was checked closely, then lifted the ball over his head, touched it forward, and while on the run, his left foot drive went for the vacant spot not guarded by Curtis, but his brother Harry aided its progress for the opening goal. The Quakers almost equalized the next minute, a fine drive by Reynolds hitting the cross-bar. Wade punted clear, then Mitchell and partners made it very interesting inside the Thistle's goal area. Shots after shots were ranged at Griffine, but they made no impression upon him, it only seemed to give him more confidence, as a little later, he grabbed a clever effort from Mitchell's well-taken try. At the other end, the whole Thistle forwards missed the ball from Bellamy's beautiful centre. H. Curtis cleared to mid-field. The Quaker forwards kept fiddling about, instead of making tracks for goal, if they had had followed their outside right's example, goals would have counted. It was disheartening to the Quakers to see the ball rebound back again into play after he had again hit the upright with a perfect shot. Griffine had a fine clearance from Geo. Logan, who shot with great force. Scott just tipping the ball out of Mitchell's reach in the nick of time. The Quakers were displaying more method at this period while the Wade, Broomley, Hutton half-back line were more steadfast in tackling. Ward broke away; Maker held him nicely, but Buchan lobbed the ball into goal to cause W. Curtis' unlucky defeat.

Ward's Snappy Goal.

He jumped into mid-air to avert disaster, but Ward was in upon him like a flash to touch the sphere through. There was no more reliable player on the field of play than Anderson, who was showing lots of his old craftiness in tactics which spelt disaster to the left-wing opponents. It was a real fast contest so far, and there was little to choose between the sides, in fact, the "Jags' gaining the breaks to their benefit as half-time made them two goals up.—Half-time: Thistle 2, Quakers 0.

Second Half.

After the usual respite, the Quakers became the more aggressive, thereby bringing out the perfect qualities of Anderson and Scott, the latter being in his element playing against his old team-mates, in defensive tactics. It was very evident that the Quakers were out to gain a goal, but it never materialized any further than testing the Thistle custodian with long distance shots. Wade transferred the ball to Curtis' charge, which went under a scrimmage in front of goal, Carmichael preventing Ward from scoring when in the act of shooting. Joe Mayette returned along the wing in a burst of speed with the ball at his foot and finished with a lightning drive past the upright.

Ward's Rocket Shot.

The game was contested with such keenness that interest never flagged, and, although the Quakers were putting more work than their opponents, it was the latter eleven who went ahead. Mayette beat two men in the corner flag section in close tackling and, rounding the full-back, he passed over to Warde. Three men closed in upon him but the Thistle man deceived them all when at a first chance he banged a right foot grounder into the corner of the goal. Curtis threw himself the full length of the goal to pounce upon the ball as the force carried him and ball through. The Quakers now took the game in hand, and for a time kept the Thistle defending more or less. Reynolds was always dangerous when near goal; so also was Mitchell, who made good openings to score, but the defense never let him get steadied at any time. A foul against Scott, for handling, met with a splendid save by Griffine. A break away by Bellamy, aided by Bromley, along the left wing, proved that Quaker's full back was dodged nicely. The Thistle forwards moved up in a body as Ward harassed defense to gain possession; finally he beat the two men when he tapped the ball across to Mayette, who made it an easy four goal lead.

Penalty Lost and Scored.

Through Reynolds the Quakers again gained a footing on Thistle territory which had the full defense in a quandary. After a few exchanges in the goal-mouth, Scott conceded a penalty kick that failed to be converted by Mitchell. Two minutes later, the referee awarded another penalty that made amends for the previous failure, Geo. Logan being the marksman. Carmichael sent his right wing men up to annoy the Jags again. The Thistle half-backs responded well in close tackling, but Reynolds lifted the ball over the bunched players' heads to Burgess, who ran in from the left to rap a low, fast 'hot past Griffine.

Mayettes Great Goal.

Excitement was now at a very high pitch when the supporters, encouraged their favourites to gain any verdict. The ensuing minutes was followed by a continuous bombardment against the "Jags" goal, but Grifine was unbeatable, while the post and crossbar kept his goal intact from further defeat. At this point, Joe Mayette gained possession from a well-placed pass by Wade. Like a flash of lightning, he travelled down the wing, with Alf. Maker keeping him company. Harry Curtis was well-placed to meet the oncoming onslaught, but both were foiled when the old Quaker player sent in a rising shot in below the bar at an awful force, to give a fifth goal for the Jags. As time rolled on, now and again, the loser's forwards were seen in more favorable light, but, generally speaking, Thistle halves were their masters, in one of the best scientific games seen here in many years. Thistle 5, Quakers 2.

PHELAN CUP TIE TUESDAY NIGHT

Replay Between Thistle and Masseys at King Edward Park.

KICK OFF AT 6.

A replay Phelan Cup soccer match takes place tomorrow eveing at King Edward Park between the league leaders, Thistles and the Masseys. Kickoff at 6 o'clock prompt. Wm. Rickard will be official referee.

In the previous tussle both elevens could not split the difference last Thursday evening after seventy minutes hard battling. Each goalkeeper—C. Griffine and T. Montgomery—gave a brilliant exhibition of goalkeeping. A very liberal response in collection was donated by the spectators the last time and again the clubs request it to be known that the whole proceeds goes to charity—players and referee giving their services free.

A ground playable report was given by the committee chosen to go and inspect the King Edward Park before the association would allow the game to be played there, which was found to be dangerous to players. The members also report that the City Council intend levelling up the ground to a higher level. It would be a great benefit if they could manage to trim the tree that obstructs play at the north side of the field.

The Thistles will pick their team from Griffine, Anderson, Bellamy, Bromley, Wade, Warde, W. Hutton, Scott, McPhate, Gore, Lamb and Mayette.

A definite lineup of Massey players will be chosen from T. Montgomery, D. Grantam, Mann, Blowers, Halliday, J. Montgomery, Westlake, Clark, Laidler James, Roberts, Foster and S. Willis.

MOVIGRAPHS

HOLLYWOOD, May 31.—Realism in pictures has its penalties as well as putative profits. To wit an episode on the Reginald Denny picture, "Take It From Me," for which $75,000 in department store merchandise was spread on counters while 500 extra players were working. Two shoplifters made way with a bundle of shirts, despite the vigilance of ten plain-clothes sidettes. And, incidentally, movie companies pay 10 per cent. of the value per week on such borrowed properties.

HOLLYWOOD, May 25.—No matter with what pretty publicity speeches they may disclaim it, most producers do largely cater to that "ten-year-old-intelligence" with which the average movie audience is accredited.

And since that is true, the producers might well preview their efforts before an audience of real youngsters who are picture wise, and whose preferences are explicit. I refer to the Hal Roach "Our Gang Comedy" kids. Hear then, their commend on the "art" of the cinema:

"These million dollar pictures are a lotta 'applesauce'," contributes Joe Frank Cobb with the finality of a fat, tired young business man." I saw one the other night, and there wasn't a good fight in it—just a lotta kissin' and cryin'."

"What for all dem big sets?" inquired smoky Ittle Farina of a movie "classic." "They all cain't do no excitements in dem pretty houses."

Micky Daniels, Johnny Downs and Jackie Condon like horse stuff, cowboy action and adventure. Skippy Lowry, the new kid from New York, firmly maintains that knockouts constitute the old real drammer.

Mary Kornman, true to her six, delights in lavish gowns, and in scenes with babies, she recently having become an elder sister.

Action, thrills, suspense, chases and fights—that's the ticket for your true ten-year-old intelligence. And, to be frank, most of the heavily promoted stars are on the "Gang's" taboo list, locally known as the "raspberry class." Do they, in this respect, perhaps show more than ten-year-old intelligence?

New York, May 25.—Your property man just has to be able to do everything, the poor, versatile fellow! Which is to say:

"Aloma of the South Seas," Gilda Gray's first starring picture, was being filmed in the Paramount Long Island studio. A number of scantily clad girls, playing the parts of South Sea Islanders, had to hurry hither and thither, serving patrons of a native cafe.

The girls began to pick up splinters in their feet. The downtrodden property men had to pick the splinters from each comely foot and treat with court plaster.

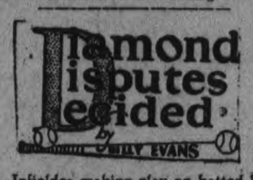
NEW YORK, May 25.—Three thousand feet of film picturing Theodore Roosevelt in actual life have been shipped from the New York headquarters of the Roosevelt Memorial Association to the west coast where "The Rough Riders" is being filmed.

The earliest of this film shows Roosevelt in 1901 when he became president following McKinley's death. The old pictures will be used for screen tests in picking the man to take the role of Roosevelt.

Many suggestions have been received, urging that one of Roosevelt's sons, either Theodore or Kermit, be chosen to play the part. Hundreds have been tested but found lacking.



Infielder making play on batted ball takes one step back so as to be in better position to handle it, and thereby comes into contact with base-runner, losing the play. What about it?

The fielder always has the right of way in making a play on a batted ball. The base-runner must avoid him or suffer the penalty.

While in the case cited it might seem the fielder was at fault because he took the unexpected last minute step backword, no consideration can be given this act.

The baserunner must be called out for interference, since he failed to avoid the fielder in the act of making the play.

SEASON OPENS AT CROWE LAKE

Cottagers Contemplate Early Invasion of Summer Resort.

FIRST DANCE.

MARMORA, May 31.—The Crowe Lake season practically opens this week. Monday evening has been decided upon as the opening date of the Marble Cliff Pavilion dances. A. T. Neal, the proprietor, has secured the Jazz Syncopators (consisting of five pieces) as the dance orchestra for the occasion.

Cottage holders at the lake are considering an early occupation. Mr. and Mrs. James Rice and family have already taken up residence at "The Cedars." The bee and flag raising at the Booster Club Park on Wednesday afternoon will also add to the popularity of the lakeside. Numerous applications are being received for cottages from American visitors, and the season gives promise of being one of the best.

BILLY EVANS Says

Grove Delivers.

Connie Mack is beginning to cash in on Southpaw "Lefty Grove." This year he is pitching as if worth the $100,000 and a bit more the Athletics paid for him.

Someone is responsible for a drastic change in his delivery and I might add it is all for the better.

Grove is pitching overhand entirely this year. Last year he shifted to suit his fancy between the sidearm and overhand styles. His greatest trouble was controlling his sidearm ball.

In all the games I have seen Grove work this year he has used nothing but the overhand style and, as a result, his control has improved at least 50 per cent.

Another change in Grove's style from that of last year is a near-stop as he reaches the top of his swing, instead of a quick follow through as formerly used.

This also appears to have greatly helped his control. That is all he needed, for he has always had plenty of stuff.

Grove should win a lot of ball games for Mack this summer.

Golf Popularity.

Recently someone asked me why golf was so immensely popular with major league ball players.

My answer was that I believed that the two games had something in common, particularly as to the desire to get distance to the drives.

However, I decided to get first hand information and, selecting a dozen stars whom I knew were keen for the game and good players as well, I put the question of why they liked golf to them.

"It's the long game that appeals to me in golf. I like to hit them a mile from the tee. It's a great thrill."

That in substance was the reply that I received from all the players to whom the question was put.

"Say, I get about as much pleasure out of driving a long ball from the tee in golf as I do hitting a home run in baseball," was Babe Ruth's reply.

It's the long driving in golf that makes the game so popular with major league ball players. That's the big appeal.

Not a single player said he cared for the short game and all admitted their weakness was on the greens.

Sacrifice Era.

While home runs continue to be made in the majors, the records prove the swat game is on the decrease.

If you would have proof of this fact give thought to the sacrifice hits that are daily made in the big leagues as you peruse the summary of the box score.

Of course the new rule that permits the scoring of a fly ball that is caught as a sacrifice, provide a runner advance a base on the out, has increased the sacrifice totals, but it fails to accurately account for the greatly increased figures in this style of play.

With pitching much improved, many ball games are being won by one-run margins this year, in which the sacrifice hi tas a rule plays a prominent part.

Early Upsets.

Major league pennants are won on October percentages, rather than those of May and June.

With one month of the season completed, the club standings of the two major leagues reveal some interesting facts.

In the American League three clubs picked by a majority of the experts for first division berths were trailing along in the second section. The clubs referred to are the Athletics, Detroit and St. Louis.

In the National League New York and Pittsburgh, generally picked as the outstanding teams, were running fourth and fifth.

The biggest shock was the reversal of form shown by the St. Louis Browns, who held down last place.

Although the United States has far more automobiles per head of population than any other country in the world, it falls far behind Great Britain where motorcycles are concerned. The latest British figures show that there is one motorcycle for every seventy-five people in the Kingdom.

HELPFUL HINTS GOLFING STARS

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH GOLFERS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO

JOHN DUNCAN DUNN—GET BENEFIT OF LESSONS.

Anybody can play a good game of golf, if he is earnest and ambitious, provided he will work along right lines and practice sufficiently. Sad to relate most people when they practice alone are so bored that they get little good out of it.

That is why it is better to practice under professional supervision, provided you don't have a professional who talks to you all the time. Something that is necessary to do this to earn the fee.

Too many ideas mean none at all—only confusion. Repetition until you eliminate the fault is the only way. You may get tired of hearing the same old thing dinned into your ears all the time, but then you have the remedy. Get busy and cure the fault and cure it permanently.

When you take lessons and when you practice is the only time to think of method. When you play the course you must only think of hitting the ball to the place where it ought to go. The man who talks about having 25 things to think about will never make a golfer.

FRANCIS OUIMET—THINK OUT METHODS OF PLAY.

Most golfers are not going to spend many hours in practice, much as they need to and as much as it is bound to improve their games. It is all right to tell them to do so and mighty good advice, but the trouble with it is that it will not be followed. Men play golf for the fun of it and you can make up your mind they are going to play. The average club member gets off two or three times a week, and it's a moral certainty he's going to take on a friend for 18 holes on such afternoons. It is not human to suppose he is going to hie himself off to a practice field to work on his strokes.

Now, how can this sort of golfer help himself, how may he improve his game, so he will get a great deal more fun out of it and still not have to practice? That is the big problem of golf.

My tip to such golfers would be to do a whole lot of thinking about how to play the various clubs. The average man certainly has all the mind required to work out all the problems of the game. But he does not apply it.

SECRETS of STARS on INSIDE BASEBALL

as told to BILLY EVANS

BY RAY SCHALK.

A catcher must carefully protect his signs.

In these modern days there are a lot of smart ball players who quickly get your stuff if you are inclined to be at all careless about giving your signs.

It means much to the opposition to be able to get a catcher's sign for a waste ball. At such times baserunners and batters never try to pull the hit and run or steal. The batter takes the ball and the runners make no attempt to advance.

That means the batsman gains the edge of one ball on the pitcher without the catcher or team in the field having a chance to make a play on the base-runner. It is a waste ball in every sense.

Incidentally it is a great advantage to the team at bat if the hitter knows just what is going to be pitched—a fast one, slow ball or curve. This knowledge enables him to so shift his stance that he will be in the best possible position to hit the anticipated pitch.

The catcher is not always responsible for this condition. A lot of coachers at first and third, if unable to get the catcher's signs, can figure the pitcher by the various mannerisms peculiar to the pitcher.

Invariably the curve is delivered just a trifle differently than the fast ball. And few pitchers can throw a slow ball with exactly the same motion as the fast one. A slow ball is most effective when so delivered.

Thus a catcher must use great care in giving his signals to the pitcher. Too many catchers do it in a slip-shod manner. If finger signals are used, these ar the most common, the fingers should be well covered by the mitt and the feet and legs should be kept as close together as possible to keep the next batter up from deciphering your code.

BY ROGERS HORNSBY.

I am often asked just where a second baseman should play to be in the best possible position to handle a majority of the situations that arise in his territory.

I have always replied that it is simply impossible to answer that question with any degree of accuracy. There is no certain spot that a second baseman should play for all batters.

With the possible exception of the shortstop, no infielder must shift his position more or go to as decided extremes in play as the second sacker.

A second baseman should bear this in mind. It is impossible to be what is called a stationary second baseman, a term applied to players who move only slightly and meet with any great success. You must move around to suit the situation, the mannerisms of the batter and the style of the base-runners.

Of course, if the batsman is known as a right field hitter you must move over in the direction of first base and attempt to station yourself in the batter's groove, so to speak.

If the batsman is a notorious left field hitter, or a player known to hit directly through the pitcher's box a great deal, the second baseman must move in the direction of the bag.

The truly great second basemen all differ slightly as to style because they have originality in their play. I first came to the majors under Miller Huggins, now manager of the New York Yanks. He inclined to playing on the edge of the grass back of the skinned portion of the infield and rather close to second. Johnny Evers used such a style and it is also favored by Eddie Collins of the White Sox on all batters except those who invariably hit in the direction of right field.

Since these three stars like that manner of playing, it is a pretty good recommendation for style and position.

R.G.C. TEAM WINS CLOSE BALL GAME

Defeats Taggarts 8-7, Coming From Behind To Win.

The R. G. C. baseball team and Taggarts met in a lively battle at Queen Mary School grounds on Thursday, May 27. The R. G. C. won by a score of 8 to 7. With the score 5 to 2 for the Taggarts, the home team made a rally in the fifth and tied the game. In the last of the seventh the R. G. C. team again tied the score and then made it 8 to 7. All the games of the Peterboro West-End Baseball League last only seven innings, thus the R. G. C. won with only two out. Although the Taggarts were in the lead most of the time, the R. G. C. showed a much higher class of fielding. With the exception of McCulloch, who batted well, this was an off night for the homesters' slugging staff. The teams were:

R. G. C. Mowery, c; Mc-Culloch p; Clarke 1b; M. Clarke 2b; B. McWilliams 3b; J. McWilliams ss; Barns rf; Roseborough cf; J. Turner lf; Patte, sub.

Taggarts—B. Bishop c; Robertson p; Doukas 1b; Wagar 2b; Widdess 3b; Thirnbeck ss; Mesley rf; Chesler cf; Asquith lf; H. Bishop, sub.

During the racing season in the United Kingdom, which began in March and lasts until the end of November, something like 5,000 horses compete for stakes, ranging from $500 to more than $50,000. The owners who win the Two Thousand Guineas, run at Newmarket, the Derby at Epsom and the Eclipse Stakes at Sandown will all net approximately the larger figure.

Owing to the length of this picture it will start promptly at 8:10 each evening.

PURSE IS FOUND IN RECORD TIME

News of Whereabouts Received Within Three Minutes.

"AD" ON BULLETIN.

What is probably one of the speediest returns on record to an advertisement took place in The Examiner office on Saturday. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon, a lady called at the business office and related the circumstances under which she had lost, a short time before, her purse containing $35, two bank-books, and a Victory bond belonging to a relative. She had visited the Post Office and one of the stores and was under the impression that she had lost her valuables at the former place. An advertisement was placed on the bulletin board. Within three minutes a caller at the office reported that a lady's purse had been found at Cressman's store, which from the description given, was readily recognized to be the one advertised The loser of the urse, intending to go out of town, had given up hope of recovering the lost articles for a week at least, but the good news was communicated to her before her departure.

CHILDREN DO NOT INJURE THE PARK

Principal of Central School Says Elders Are Offenders.

"So far as we are concerned we are taking no steps beyond the measures we have already adopted, and the children will continue to play in the park, unless, of course, they are warned off by the Parks Committee," said Mr. K. S. Wightman, principal of the Central School, when approached to-day in reference to a report that the teachers of the school had forbidden the children to use he paths through iVctoria Park in coming to school. Mr. Wightman said that the children of Central school set an example that might well be followed by many of their elders in the behaviour in the park. "In the spring of every year," he said, "the children are kept off the park altogether while the ground is soft and easily injured. They are not even allowed to use the paths. Yet during that time they see their elders crossing the grass in droves on their way from the factories. It is pretty hard for children to obey a prohibition when they see their elders in the act of doing damage through carelessness. The crowds who go over the park in spring do more damage than an army crossing at any other time would do. I have been here for three years and have never seen anything done in the park by the children of this school that could not be attributed to mere thoughtlessness. Of course, there are bad eggs in every basket, and if we did find any of our pupils engaged in pilfering or destruction in the park we would deal with them severely. The children are instructed to play quietly when in the park and they are not allowed to go near the bandstand. It is impressed on them that they are being granted a privilege in being given the use of the park. We do not permit them to play an organized game of baseball, football or any sport likely to injure the turf. As a matter of fact most of them content themselves with sitting on the grass. On the whole I am very pleased with their behavior in the park and often wish their elders would follow their lead.

The funeral will be held on Monday from the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Joseph Dickens and will leave the house at 12 o'clock, and proceed to West Huntingdon, where service will be held in the church he had always attended, namely St. Andrew's Presbyterian. The pall bearers will be three sons and three sons-in-law, namely, George, Charlie and Hiram Ashley, James Lake, William Kelly and George Harris, who officiated in the same capacity 15 years ago when the wife of the deceased was laid to rest in the family plot in the cemetery of West Huntingdon. On Monday all that is left of a kind and loving father will be interred by the side of his departed wife, until the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised.

Have won their immortality,
And they can die no more.

BOYS' WORK IS DISCUSSED BY C. F. PLEWMAN

Ontario Boys' Work Committee Secretary Addresses Rotary Club.

PLEA FOR LEADERS.

Urges Rotarians To Put Their Personality, as Well as Money, Into Camp.

That Rotarians, in addition to putting their money into the boys' camp and in boys' work generally should also put in some of their personality, was the earnest plea made by Mr. C. F. Plewman, secretary of the Boys' Work Committee of Ontario, in addressing the members of the Peterboro Rotary Club at the weekly luncheon at the Empress to-day.

It was boys' work day, and the programme was in charge of Rotarian Tom Dutton, chairman of Rotary's Boys' Work Committee, who most acceptably presided.

It addition to Mr. Plewman, other guests interested in boys' work were Trevor Miller of the Public School teaching staff; Adam Sands, Peterboro member of the Boys' Parliament of Ontario, and Earl Legget, young pupil of the Collegiate Institute.

Three new members were given a warm reception into Rotary to-day. They were Dr. A. Moir, introduced by Rotarian Dr. A. W. McPherson; Max Sauer of the Wm. Hamilton Co., introduced by Rotarian Peter Westbye, and Douglas Loomis, physical director of the Y.M.C.A., introduced by Past President John Seels.

The speaker of the day was introduced by Trevor Miller, who paid a tribute to the work done by Mr. Plewman.

The latter stressed the importance of boys' work, pointing out that the period of adolescence was the time when habits were formed, ideals conceived, and the foundation built upon which life would be construcoted. It was the teachable period when the future career of the boy was determined, and, as Mr. Plewman saw it, the chief mission of the boy at this age was to grow. It was of the greatest importance, therefore, that this growth should be directed wisely so that the boy developed a powerful body and strength of character. Many a man saw none of the beauty in the stars or in the wonders of nature, because when he was a boy no one had interested himself in seeing that the youngster got a proper background.

Quoting Dr. John R. Mott's opinion as to the strategic importance of boys' work, Mr. Plewman suggested that this opinion had been given by Dr. Mott as he surveyed the problems of to-day, as he viewed a civilization that had no other better means of settling international disputes than blowing out each other's brains, a civilization that was marred by the warfare between capital and labor, by the clash of color against color. In his opinion, Dr. Mott meant that these problems could not be solved by the men of to-day, but would have to be solved by the new generation. It was only a matter of a few years until the boys who were wearing knickers around the streets to-day would be controlling the destinies of the nation and of the municipality.

Mr. Plewman urged fathers to remember that what boys really wanted was not more money to spend, fancier clothes to wear and better things to eat, but rather more of their fathers, and it was a test of parenthood to investigate just how much parents permitted their children to share in the worth-while things of life. The speaker pleaded for more leaders for boys' work.

In conclusion, after paying a tribute to the Peterboro Rotarians for establishing such a splendid camp, and commenting upon the value of a camp of this kind as a university in which the rough angles were often worn smooth by the give and take of boy camp life, Mr. Plewman urged the members to put more of themselves as well as their money into the camp.

Following Mr. Plewman's address, Earl Leggett contributed a very timely recitation, "Where are the men to lead?" that was much appreciated.

Among the guests to-day was W. Prindible, manager of the Rotary baseball team, who was given a hearty recention when introduced to the meeting.

Crippled Girl Writes With Pencil In Teeth

NEW YORK, May 31 (United News).—Henrietta Eidelsheim, 19 years old and a student at Hunter College, uses her teeth to write.

When she was a year old she became crippled from infantile paralysis. Unable to use her hands she learned to put a pencil between her teeth and in this manner did all her written work in the grade and high schools.

Peculiarly enough, Henrietta plans to be a journalist or a designer, two occupations which would require considerable use of the pencil.

LONDON, May 31 (Canadian Press)—King George held his third levee in St. James' palace this morning. The Duke of York, Prince Henry, and Viscount Lascelles were present.

COMEDY PRESENTED YELVERTON CHURCH

Young People From Stewart Hall Put on Play.

On Friday evening, the Young People of Stewart Hall presented thei play in the United Church, Yelverton. The church was crowded with an appreciative audience to hear the three-act comedy, "The Colonel's Maid." This same play which was given in Peterborough and Hastings recently, scored another big hit, as was shown by the hearty applause of the audience.

Colonel Rudd, a bachelor of South Carolina and son, Robert, find their kitchen in a turmoil the morning of the story, due to the lark of a maid and Ching-a-ling, the chinese cook, burning up the breakfast.

In the midsts of the trouble, Aunt Emmaline, a former sweetheart of the Colonel and her daughter Julia arrive, much to the displeasure of the Colonel and his son.

Marjory Byrd, the daughter of Colonel Rudd's worst enemy, but in love with Bob, arrives as a maid under the false name of Hannah Katenjamber. She hopes to win the affection of the old gentleman and then to marry Bob.

The plan of the Colonel and Aunt Emmaline is to have Bob marry Julia, neither of whom are willing.

Ned Graydon, Julia's friend and an old college friend of Bob arrives under a false name. His memory is faulty, and hence adds much humour to the play.

Marjory's father arrives at the home of Colonel Rudd, accusing him of kidnapping his daughter. Things become terribly complicated, but in the last act the tangle is straightened out. Old enemies forgive one another and the young folks have managed affairs to their own liking.

Ching-a-ling, the Chinese, keeps the audience in roars of laughter, and the part is well played by Dick Stewart. Lynn Stewart plays the role of a hot-headed father to perfection, while William Dawson acts the firebrand. Ned Graydon, the fellow with the faulty memory, always mixing affairs up, is capably taken by Willan Hutchison. Harold Dawson, playing as the son, Bob, gains the favour of the audience with the cool, but persistent way he deals with his father and others. Fred Chambers takes the part of Lawyer Baskom in his own clever way.

Grace Stewart acts the role of maid, with her charming and winning ways, while May Thorn plays the part of Julia in a most becoming manner. Aunt Emmaline, the old aunt, taken by Edith Thorn, well displays her feminine ideas and succeeds admirably in marrying Colonel Byrd.

Miss Violet Buckham added much to the enjoyment of the evening by singing several beautiful selections between the acts. Miss Vera McGill being her accompanist.

After the play was over the ladies of the church served a sumptuous lunch to the cast which was much enjoyed.

The play is being presented in Keene and Bailieboro in the near future.

IN MEMORIAM.

PILLING—In loving memory of Mrs. Wm. H. Tedford, who departed this life May 31st, 1924:

A precious one from us is gone,
Her pain and suffering past.
And all her work on earth is done,
She is numbered with the blest.

Dear mother she is gone to rest,
We miss her from our home,
She's gone to dwell where angels dwell,
Where sickness ne'er can come.

Her relatives far and near may meet
To spend a social hour,
But mother's face will not be there
To meet us any more.

PETER SMITH, RELEASED, IS RUSHED HOME

Former Provincial Treasurer Is Freed On Ticket-of-Leave After Serving Half Sentence

Jovial But Reticent, He Tells Reporters He Feels Fine and Fit For a Scrap—Was Model Prisoner Without Single Black Mark.

HAS PHOTO TAKEN AT PRISON GATE AND BIDS WARDEN TEARFUL FAREWELL.

Legal Officers Await Details Before Saying Whether $100,000 Fine Is Remitted By Release—Marriage of Daughter Held Up Awaiting Smith's Freedom.

KINGSTON, June 1—Peter Smith, ex-Provincial Treasurer of Ontario, was released from Portsmouth penitentiary yesterday afternoon, and rushed to his home in Stratford. He was freed on ticket-of-leave after serving eighteen months in prison, just half of the sentence imposed upon him on October 24, 1924, on charges of conspiring to defraud the Province. The car in which he returned home was driven by Jack Grosch, his prospective son-in-law.

The former treasurer of the province was wearing the same suit that he had on when the grey walls of Kingston shut him from freedom two years ago. He appeared about thirty pounds lighter, and was much paler than the robust though worried man who entered.

With tears in his eyes, he shook the hand of Warden Ponsford, and thanked him for the kindness he had shown him as an inmate. Smith had previously bidden good-bye and thanked the other attendants for their humanity displayed in dealing with him.

Makes Good Speed

His face radiating with pleasure, Peter Smith flashed through Napanee at fifty miles an hour this afternoon, exactly forty-eight minutes after being released from Portsmouth penitentiary.

Leaving the prison gate Smith consented to pose for his first photograph.

"Have you anything to say for publication?" "Not a thing," he smiled back.

"How are you feeling?" was the next uestion. "Fine, fine,' he ejaculated. "If any of you reporters want to take a round out of me, now is your chance, although I will not say anything for your paper."

"How about your fine?" Laughing heartily, he said: "Oh, some of oyu newspapermen will pay that for me."

Up until this time Smith had been comparatively composed to his unexpected freedom, but as the warden moved away tears welled in his eyes and he plumped into the back seat of the car.

Stepping on the accelerator, the driver immediately shot away, but not before Smith waved to his former guards.

Hits Up 65 Miles an Hour

Speeding down the main thoroughfare the ex-treasurer's car circled around the central portion of the city in what appeared to be an attempt to shake off several press cars which followed closely upon his wheels.

Then he struck out for the open road and his pursuers were forced to speed up their cars to 65 miles an hour to keep within distance of him.

At 1.07 his automobile pulled away from the main gates of the penitentiary. Twelve minutes later he flashed out of the city of Kingston. Twenty minutes later he stopped in the town of Oceeda for gasoline and oil.

"What's the idea of all the speed?" he was asked.

"Oh, we weren"t doing much over forty," the driver laughed back, and disappeared in a cloud of dust.

Shaking Reporters

It was quite obvious that while Smith was jovial with the reporters he wished to shake them off. From the minute he drew away from his former prison he had apparently only two desires; to shake off the newspaper men and reach his home as quickly as possible.

His first move was to dash furiously down the street car tracks at Kingston closely followed by two large cars. Swerving dangerously northward he was almost lost in a maze of traffic. Then he circled slowly around the city and several times could be seen turning to see if he was followed. It then appeared as if he tired of these tactics and retraced his course in the direction of the jail and then disappeared up the street leading to the Kingston road.

No sooner had he reached the limits of the city when his car spurted forward and his followers were forced to step on the accelerator until the speedometer recorded 45

Breaks all Limits.

For almost 20 miles he sped along at this rate and slowly increased his speed until his pursuers were going 60 miles an hour. Even then he did not stop and slowly the dial crept up to 65 mile. Here smoke was seen to come from a rear wheel on one of the chasing automobiles which necessitated a slowing up and almost dropping out of the race.

Gradually the other two automobiles disappeared in the distance. Although the automobiles never went below fifty miles an hour they had not been able to reach Smith's car

Derby Tips Uppermost In Minds Of All British

LONDON, June 1. (United Press.) — Lady Astor, whose husband's "Swift and Sure" is one of to-morrows Derby entrants, has her own idea of the probable victor. Asked by South Wales miners to "tip" the winner, she named Sir Abe Bailey's "Lux."

George Bernard Shaw was interviewed by the correspondent of an enterprising newspaper: — "What is this Derby that its so important?" he was asked.

"My opinion is worth plenty of money," replied the celebrated author.

Premier Ahmed Ziwar Pasha, who has been in office since 1924, has presented the resignation of his Cabinet to King Fuad and the King has requested him to remain in office to carry on routine business until a decision is reached as to whether Zagloul Pasha, Nationalist leader, or Adly Yegen Pasha is to be called is to form a Ministry.

THE WEATHER.

The first day of June, the most pleasant month of the year—when nature shows its most smiling aspect. During May the highest temperature was on the 2nd, with 81 degrees; the lowest was two days later, with 24 degrees. The two warmest days of the month were the first and last Sunday. The rainfall totalled 1.69; this is little more than one-half the usual quantity. Of the seven showers we had only three could be considered "good." The rainfall Monday gave .32 of an inch. While the season is undoubtedly late rapid progress has been made during the last ten days, and should warm weather follow the showers of yesterday and to-day the growth should be fast.—W. P.

POLAND ELECTS PROF. MOSCICKE AS PRESIDENT

Pilsudski's Nominee Is Chosen at Second Meeting of Assembly.

MARSHAL RETIRES.

Will Continue, However, To Be Power Behind the Throne.

WARSAW, Poland, June 1 (Canadian Press). — Prof. Egnatz Mosciciki is the new President of Poland. He was elected by the National Assembly to-day to succeed President Wojciechowski, who resigned, following the recent military coup led by Marshal Pilsudski. Marshal Pilsudski was elected by the Assembly yesterday, but declined the post because he said the constitution did not protect the chief executive against Parliament by giving him power to dissolve the Legislative body even in case of urgent necessity. Prof. Moscicki, elected to-day, was his choice for the place. Pilsudski, it is said, will continue to be the power beside the throne.

REV. MACKINNON GOES TO PERTH

St. Paul's Church Call Is Accepted By Local Minister.

WITHOUT HEARING.

St. Paul's United Church, Perth, has extended a unanimous call to Rev. M. C. Mackinnon of Knox Church to become its pastor. The call came to Mr. Mackinnon without hearing him, and solely on the initiative of the congregation. Mr. Mackinnon has accepted the call, and will leave his present charge this month. The calling of a man upon his record in the ministry as in this case rather than upon the basis of a trial sermon is likely to be largely followed in the United Church.

Mr. Mackinnon has also a call to Sudbury, but it will not be accepted. Central United Church, Edmonton, also wired Mr. Mackinnon this week regarding a call to that city. It is seldom that three such fine opportunities for service are offered to a man all at one time. The Perth church has a membership of about 900.

Indications are that Dartmouth College may follow up its last season's marvelous success in football by finishing first in the Intercollegiate Basketball League. So far the Green never has won an intercollegiate championship in the cage game.

BURNED IN HOME LOCAL WOMAN DIED LAST NIGHT

Mrs. Rutter, 544 Downie Street, Was Subject To Epileptic Fits.

FELL OVER FIRE.

Discovery Made By Husband and Son on Return To Dinner.

Mrs. Ivy Rutter, 554 Downie street, died last night in Nicholls' Hospital after being badly burned shortly after noon yesterday.

Mrs. Rutter was alone in the house; consequently the exact circumstances leading up to the tragic end are unknown. Mr. Andrew Rutter, husband of the deceased woman, stated this morning that Mrs. Rutter was subject to epileptic fits, and it is thought that she was overcome by one of them while cooking, and fell over the fire, igniting her clothing. She had evidently been carrying a pan of newly cooked food. She came from the kitchen into another room where she was overpowered by the heat.

A horrifying sight greeted the return of Mr. Rutter to dinner from work at the Canadian Woollens and of her boy from school. Mrs. Rutter lay on the floor, her body scorched and singed and much of the flesh burned off her hands. Her marriage ring had dropped from the roasted fingers; the couch was already smouldering; the curtains and blinds were ablaze; and several burned patches on the floor told of the intensity of the flames. She was still conscious and in intense pain.

Assistance was immediately rendered, the flames were extinguished and Mrs. Rutter was attended by Drs. D. W. Clark and J. A. Morgan, but she passed away shortly after 6 o'clock at Nicholls' Hospital.

Mrs. Rutter had been slightly burned on previous occasions as a result of epileptic fits. She was 39 years of age and was born in England, coming to Peterborough in 1914. Besides her husband, she is survived by one son, Andrew, aged 14, and a daughter, Alice, aged 10. Neither Mr. or Mrs. Rutter have any other relatives in Canada. Mr. Rutter who is a native of Bolton, Lancashire, is a veteran of the 93rd battalion and in ordinary circumstances would have attended the reunion last night.

Mrs. Rutter's remains will be brought to the house this evening. The funeral will take place tomorrow at 2 o'clock, Rev. J. D. Richardson conducting the ceremony. The remains will be interred in Little Lake Cemetery.

U.S. Navy Makes Attempt To Raise Sunken Sub S-51

NEW YORK, June 1 (Canadian Press).—The United States Navy, aided by a flotilla of tugs and derricks and a corps of 200 divers, will attempt this week to raise from the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean Submarine S-51, sunk off Block Island on the night of September 25 last.

When it comes up it, in all probability, will bear to the surface the bodies of the twenty-four members of the crew.

RAINFALL HELPS MAKE CHANGE IN CONDITIONS

Farm Crops Are Much Improved Throughout Province.

GRAINS LOOK GOOD.

Peaches Spotted in Some Areas But Other Fruits Are Promising.

TORONTO, June 1 (Canadian Press). — The rainfall throughout the Central and Western portions of Ontario during the past two days has produced a considerable change in the condition of farm crops in these areas. During the month of May there was a great lack of moisture in the Province, with consequent retention of growing crops. Fall wheat was reported by the Ontario Department of Agriculture to be growing rather slowly, especially in Kent County, but reports from that county would indicate that crop conditions are improving rapidly. Clover and alfalfa are reported to have wintered well in many of the districts throughout the Province. Indications point to a promising crop of pears, plums and cherries in the Niagara Peninsula district, but on the other hand peaches are said to be spotted in many areas.

NEW MINISTER COMING TO KNOX

Rev. William McDonald Has Had Successful Pastorate at Sudbury.

OUTSTANDING MAN.

One of the settlements effected yesterday by the Conference Committee at Kingston was that of Rev. William McDonald, B.D., of St. Andrew's Church, Sudbury, who is coming to Knox United Church, Peterborough. The settlement will take effect at the end of June, and it is expected that there will be a regular induction service as in the former Presbyterian Church. Rev. Mr. McDonald has had a most successful pastorate of twelve years in Sudbury. For most of that time he has been convenor of the Home Missions Committee of the Synod of Toronto and Kingston. He is one of the prominent ministers of the Church, and his coming to Peterborough is a distinct acquisition to the Bay of Quinte Conference as well as to Knox Church and this city.

Captain J. H. Burnham Throws Down The Gage To Pacifist Ministers

Scathing Criticism of Bay of Quinte Decision Against Military Training From Ex-M.P. at Re-union of 93rd Battalion Last Night.

WAS CANADA RIGHT IN ENTERING THE WAR?

A characteristic speech from J. H. Burnham, Captain and Paymaster of the unit during the war, in which he denounced the resolution against military training passed by the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church, was the outstanding item on the programme of the reunion of the 93rd Regiment, in the G.W.V.A. Hall, last night.

After the National Anthem and two minutes' silence, Mr. Burnham opened his address with a rare tribute to Lt.-Col. T. J. Johnston as a commander, who at all times made the welfare of his men his chief consideration.

A hush passed over the entire assembly as Mr. Burnham, in impressive tones, said: "Two hundred and forty-six men of the 93rd lost their lives in the war No one need expect so many here tonight as when we came together to leave for the front Some have died since the war. Ten years from now, our numbers will be fewer. They will become less and less until, bye and bye we shall all have passed to join together once more in the great army in the beyond."

Silly or Traitors

Mr. Burnham then launched into an attack on the views expressed at the Bay of Quinte Conference. "Yesterday and the day before at the Bay of Quinte Conference, and at other meetings of those who know more of life than anybody else and who are bossing the lives out of us, a resolution was passed that would do away with all military training More than one military chaplain was among those who passed this resolution The best way to get at those who talked in this silly fashion, those who nevertheless had wives and daughters who would be exposed to the worst elements in the world—Russia, for example—is to ask them a point blank question. The best way is the direct way."

He was going to ask that some of those present would formally move that the following questions should be put to the Bay of Quinte Conference Mr. Burnham said the questions were "Do you disapprove of the action of the 93rd in going to the war? Do you think they should have funked and not joined up Do you suggest that Canada should have stayed out of the war?

"I suggest that if they decide that Canada should have taken part in the war, then their silly talk vanishes into thin air and leaves them as laughing stocks. If they decide that Canada should not have entered the war, they are traitors. I, for one, would be inclined to go for men who say that we should not have taken part in the defence, not of Canada, not of Britain, but of civilization. They would betray the cause for which the whole Empire fought. You can't let these people go. They have got off long enough. These parsons like to talk of what they know nothing about. Will someone make the motion?"

Motion Passes

The motion was moved by Sergeant-Major Miller and seconded by R. Lynch and was carried without a dissenting voice.

"There is one battalion that will not stand for this sort of thing," remarked Mr. Burnham. 'We belong to the Bay of Quinte district and will have something to say about this."

Col. Johnston

After some community singing of old time songs, led by Quartermaster Sergeant Cotterell, with Sergeant Calladine as accompanist, Col. Johnston made a short speech, in which he congratulated the committee on the succesful issue of their

Private Soldier In a Mess Helped Out By Col. Johnston

A story which illustrates Col. Johnston's readiness to help all his men was related in conversation at the re-union last night. One of the men appeared at the Colonel's tent in great agitation, and on being questioned by his commander, confessed he had deserted from his original regiment and had enlisted under another name in the unit under the Colonel's command. "That is to say," remarked the Colonel, "you left a regiment that had no immediate prospect of going to the front for one that was due for active service." The soldier then said that as a result of his desertion of his first regiment, his wife, living near Brantford, had lost the allowances she had been receiving from the Government and from the Patriotic Society. Colonel Johnston exerted himself in the matter, and had representations made in the proper quarters, with the result that the allowances were restored. Some day the full story may be told of the battles the Colonel had with the "higher-ups" in defence of the rights of the rank and file, whose general verdict of their chief is "A grand old Colonel."

COMMITTEE IS PROPOSED TO EXAMINE CATTLE INDUSTRY

Raising of Live Stock is Unprofitable Now, Commons Told.

FREIGHT HIGH.

Embargo Should Be Wholly Removed, Colonel Mullins Declares.

OTTAWA, June 1 Canadian Press —A resolution proposing a special committee to examine into the cattle industry with power to recommend measures which might further the development of that industry, was moved in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon by G. G. Coote (Prog.-MacLeod.)

Mr. Coote said that the facts of the cattle industry would indicate the need of such action as was proposed in the resolution. He then proceeded to review the statistics of the live stock trade in Canada. Revenues from farm animals had fallen from $194,000,000 in 1918 to $80,000,000 in 1923. The value per head of cattle in Canadian stock yards had fallen $73.15 in 1920, to $43.50 in 1924. This was typical of the difficult times through which men in the cattle trade had passed. The value of exported cattle last year was just half what it was in 1921.

There had been a drop of approximately 400,000 head of cattle in the province of Alberta in the last five years, Mr. Coote said.

The raising of cattle was important to the western farmer because it provided him with a means for fertilizing land which was becoming poor. The growing of cattle required cultivation of grasses and clover and such cultivation enriched soil which had been devoted to the production of grain exclusively.

The raising of cattle at present was unprofitable, said Mr. Coote. Canada must export a large percentage of her cattle, her markets being the United States and Great Britian. From the United States market this country was practically barred by a high tariff and also by excessive freight rates. Competition by Canada in the British market was made difficult by the excessive cost of getting Canadian cattle across the ocean. He asked the members to support his proposal for the appointment of a committee.

Colonel H. A. Mullins (Cons., Marquette) declared that the cattle industry was most important. What Canada needed was reduced rates so that her cattle could get into the British market. He doubted the statement of members of the government that it was impossible to convert vessels of the Merchant Marine in cattle carriers. He had shipped cattle by the boats and found them excellent. Canada had the cattle, Great Britain had the market, but "we have no boats—nothing but promises from the Honorable Minister of Agriculture." Col. Mullins said, while Canada shipped 100,000 cattle to Great Britain, Ireland and the Argentine shipped a million. Colonel Mullins was opposed to Canada shipping dead meat. Her only hope was to continue in the life stock business.

Farmers Need Cheaper Rates

Thomas McMillan (Lib.-South Huron) supported the resolution.

Canadian farms, he said, needed cheaper rates on land and sea to make profitable the raising of cattle in every part of the Dominion. Mixed farming had become necessary to keep the farms fertile and profitable. He compared the profits made in farming with those of the city man and referred ironically to the men who were successful in business and professional life who solemnly advised young men to stick to the farm but who failed when the time came to give any support to any movement which would make farming profitable.

Every effort should be made to come to terms with the people of the United States in respect to the cattle business, Mr. McMillan said. Members of the Conserv tive side of the House feared such efforts. They said that if you treated with the Americans you might injure Canadian industry. It must be remembered however that agriculture was, and must continue to be, the greatest industry in Canada. Farmers should be encouraged to keep the very best class of animals obtainable in order to secure the highest prices.

Remove Restrictions.

In the evening Colonel Mullins spoke of the removal of the cattle embargo. It was not entirely removed yet, as Canadian cows were still excluded from the English market, although Irish cows were admitted. This restriction should be removed and both countries, as dominions, should be on the same footing. With very little exertion Canada should be able to have this restriction removed and its cows admitted to England.

SAVE YOUR TEETH

Prepared by the Oral Hygiene Committee of Canada, with which the Peterborough Dental Society is Collaborating.

FREEZING THE GUM.

When your dentist told you that your tooth must come out, your first question was, perhaps, "Are you going to freeze it?"—and having it frozen, you experienced probably no pain at all.

Now, just how was this accomplished?

What your dentist did was to employ a local anesthetic to prevent any pain. There are two types of local anesthetics —paralyzant and refrigerent.

The refrigerant as its name implies is a substance that causes rapid extraction of heat from the tissues—thereby producing diminished sensation: the temperature of the tissues is rapidly lowered and thus the nerve endings are rendered incapable of receiving painful impulses.

The paralyzant—as it suggests, is a drug that has a paralyzing action upon nerve tissue, and which, when injected into an area, possesses the power of rendering that part insensible to pain. This is the type of local anesthetic most commonly employed and following an injection into an area, the tissue becomes white or blanched, the peculiar tingling sensation, followed by numbness, such as you may have experienced in frostbite, and so, 'freezing.'

Local anesthesia is growing in popularity steadily and surely since, employing it, the promise of painless dentistry can be made and kept.

Where the person presents for dental treatment whose ill-health may not allow the employment of a general anesthetic agent or who is nervous about losing consciousness, local anesthesia may be used with perfect confidence and without fear of harmful results. It should be, however, stressed that the person seeking such service should do so without nervousness or is no longer an ordeal that need be feared.

Now, remember that your dentist may employ a paralyzant anesthetic deeply to 'block' a nerve, renderin. parts far removed from the area of injection quite numb or dead,' which hasn't bungled—but is merely employing the mode of injection that the exigencies of the case called for.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

George F. Milton, editor of the Chattanooga (Tennessee) News, says:

THAT Emerson was wrong when he said that if a man builded a better mouse trap than there had been before, the world would beat a pathway to his door to buy it, even if he were in the middle of a dense forest.

Had the great transcendentalist lived in the present century, he would have put it: "If a man build a better mouse trap than ever before builded, and let the world know about it, the world will beatr a pathway through the densest foest to buy it of him."

Advertising may be dened as th art of making people know what they need. It may likewise be defined as a science of speedy and inexpensive distribution.

The industrial revolution has put at the command of the average man conveniences and accoutrements two centuries ago was denied kings. It has stretched the income of the average man to include a myriad of marvelous things. Advertising is the hand-maiden of science. Advertising brings into every home the achievements of the laboratories, the fruits of the loom, and the creations of mankind.

"BOOTS AND HER BUDDIES"

CANADA WILLING TO REDUCE DUTY ON U. S. CATTLE

Government Prepared To Adopt "Brick For Brick" Policy.

IF U.S. DOES SAME.

Minister Makes Statement While Discussing Appointment of Committee.

OTTAWA, June 1. — (Canadian Press). — Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, announced in the House of Commons last night that the Canadian Government was prepared to adopt a "brick for brick policy" with the United States in the reduction of duties on cattle.

"Every step taken by the United States Government," he said, "in the way of a reduction in the duty on Canadian cattle will be met by a corresponding reduction in the Canadian duty against American cattle. We have a brick for brick policy. That is to say, every brick the Americans take off the tariff wall against us will be met with the removal of a corresponding brick from our tariff against American cattle."

The policy indicated by Mr. Motherwell is embodied in an Order-in Council passed by the Dominion Government and made public late last night. It recites the reciprocity offer, contained in the Fielding budget of 1922 of reduction "as may be deemed reasonable" in the Canadian tariff on imports from the United States in return for reductions in the American tariff on imports from Canada of cattle, wheat, wheat flour, oats, barley, potatoes, turnips, hay and fish.

The question of the cattle trade between Canada and the United States arose during the discussion of a motion by G. G. Coote of MacLeod for the appointment of a special committee to look into the Canadian cattle industry. In view of the lateness of the session, the question was referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

KIWANIS CLUBS SPECIAL EVENT

All Clubs To Hold Simultaneous Meetings on Monday.

BIG CONVENTION.

Joining in with all the 1530 Kiwanis clubs in the United States and Canada, all of which will meet simultaneously, the Kiwanis Club of Peterborough will hold a special occasion to observe "All Kiwanis Night" on Monday, June 7. At this time the opening session of the Annual Kiwanis International Convention will be held at Montreal, Canada. The meetings throughout Canada and the United States are to be observed for the unified consciousness of devotion to the ideals and objectives of Kiwanis.

All clubs have arranged the time of their meetings so that the "Zero Hour," when 98,000 Kiwanians on the continent assemble to observe the "Fellowship Moment of Silence," will be held simultaneously with that in the convention city. The message to the clubs by the president of Kiwanis International, John H. Moss, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, will be read to the club at Monday's meeting. This will be the third time in the history of Kiwanis that such a meeting is held. At the Denver and Saint Paul Conventions similar observances marked the opening activities.

Kiwanians Dr. John J. Craig and Isaac P. McNabb from the Peterborough club will be delegates to the convention, and will send telegraphic messages to the meeting on Monday night from Montreal. President Moss' keynote speech at the convention's opening will be broadcast from station CHYC, Montreal, the powerful Canadian station.

The vote stood 54 to 53. The resolution under discussion, moved by Gen. A. E. Ross (Conservative, Kingston) advocated the safeguarding of Canadian industries with respect to competition from other parts of the world.

Greater Demand For Money Stops Bullish Operations

NEW YORK, June 1 (Canadian Press)—Stiffening call money rates tended to restrain bullish operations in today's stock market, which advanced briskly at opening and then lapsed into dullness. Call money was marked up to 5 p.c., highest rate in two months after renewing at four per cent due to heavy calling of bank loans.

Renewed selling of some of motor shares reflected speculative disappointment over failure of the Mack Trucks directors to declare special dividend distribution at today's meeting, only regular payment being authorized. General Motors showed independent strength. Steels displayed firm undertone on buying influenced by action of some of the independent companies in following the lead of United States Steel Corporation in advancing the price of steel bars. Oils were quiet Rails were mixed but mostly higher.

Trading Light In Volume On Dull Mining Exchange

TORONTO, June 1.—(Canadian Press.)—Without any definite trend, and trading light in volume, this morning's session of Standard Mining Exchange was inclined to be dull. Teck Hughes gained four at 369 and Hollinger fifteen at 19.25. Argonaut firmed 1 1-2 at 24 1-8 and Beaver a like amount at 78, while Keeley was three cents higher at 150.

ULTRA FEMINIST PARTY DEFEATED

Resolutions Turned Down By International Suffrage Alliance.

PARIS, June 1. — (Canadian Press).—The voting down of a resolution calling for unreserved equal rights for women and men in industry by the International Woman Suffrage Alliance congress yesterday afternoon, after a diverse vote upon the question of admitting the National Women's Party of America to membership in the alliance, completed the defeat of the so-called "Ultra Feminists." A decision not to adopt a resolution declaring against protective legislation for women leaves the minority in Congress without an expression as to their purpose, according to minority leaders.

IN POLICE COURT

John Fitzner hit a police officer over the head with a whip yesterday afternoon and this morning heard himself sentenced to ten days in jail at the price of the privilege.

The story was related by P. C. Puffer, the first witness for the Crown, examined by Inspector James F. Reid before Magistrate O. A. Langley.

Constable Puffer said he saw accused drive a horse and rig along Sherbrooke Street, shortly after 4 o'clock. He stopped and went into South Central School, leaving the horse standing outside, without having a weight attached—contrary to the city bylaw. Scarcely had he got in, when the horse turned directly round and moved across the street stopping opposite to where witness was standing. It stopped in the way of several horses and wagons, which had difficulty in getting past. The horses started two or three times. Witness yelled at it to stop. When Fitzner came out, witness inquired of him where he had put his weight. Fitzner told him to mind his own business. Witness, who had not hitherto said he was a police officer, then told this fact to Fitzner, adding that if he found Fitzner again in the streets with a horse without a weight, he would have a summons issued. Accused then jumped into the rig and changed his direction in the middle of a block—which was another breach of a city bylaw. After getting a few feet away, accused again shouted to witness to mind his own business. Witness started after Fitzner, stopped his horse, and told him to give a civil answer when spoken to civilly, whether addressed police officer or civilian. Fitzner then struck witness over the head with a whip. Witness pulled Fitzner out of the wagon, took the whip from him and placed him under arrest. By this time, Fitzner had blocked up the traffic again. He refused to move the horse, and interfered to prevent witness from moving it. A man who was watching the affair telephoned at witness' request to the Police Station. P. C. Wheeler arrived, and accused was taken into custody.

Asked by Inspector Reid, witness stated that he believed accused knew him in plain clothes. He had had dealings with accused before.

At the time of the occurrence there was a number of school children on the street. Sherbrook street, he stated, was a through street for the Hydro buses. No later than yesterday he had received a complaint that Fitzner had left his horse on Lake street, where it had wandered on to the lawn of a resident.

Accused denied that witness had told him he was a police officer before they came to the corner of Sherbrooke street. If witness did say it, he said, the words must have passed his ears, for he never heard them. His weight was too light, and was broken, so he never used it.

A resident of Frank street corroborated the evidence of Constable Puffer, upon which His Worship found accused guilty.

SUNDAY FOOTBALL.

The President of the Dominion Football Association has resigned from his office because an exhibition game of soccer was played in Montreal on Sunday between Carsteels of Montreal and the Wanderers of Brooklyn.

The bulk of public sentiment in this country will support the action of the head of soccer's governing body.

While the Examiner has always taken the view that an amount of harmless and reasonable recreation for workers who have little time but Sunday for such things was justified, and therefore supported Sunday bathing and band concerts, the holding of football, baseball and other competitive sports of that nature on Sunday is going a step too far.

The Ontario Baseball Amateur Association has taken a strong stand on this question, and every player or every team participating in a regular game of baseball on Sunday is barred from further playing in organized baseball in this Province.

Public opinion supports that attitude, and will support Mr. John Easton, President of the Dominion Football Association, in his resignation from the association as a protest against the introduction of Sunday football.

VICTORIA PARK.

Principal Wightman's defence of the children of the Central School in connection with their use of Victoria Park was scarcely necessary—at least to those who are familar with the conditions.

The conduct of the pupils of Mr. Wightman's school indicates that they have received careful instruction from the members of the staff, and any damage that may be done to the park will on investigation be found to have been the work of other youngsters to some extent and of adults to a much greater degree.

It is true, as Mr. Wightman points out, the greatest offenders in misusing the lawns of Victoria Park are people old enough to know better, who pay no attention to warning signs and trample over the grass at their own sweet will.

As a result of this indifference, a path resembling a cow-path has been worn diagonally across the southeast corner of the park, detracting considerably from the appearance of that section.

This scurvy treatment, coupled with the manner in which many adults walk over the lawns in the spring when the ground is soft and the greatest damage is done, make it doubly difficult to give Victoria Park that trim and beautiful appearance that its location justifies.

THE CASE OF WALLACE'S GROVE.

The Examiner has been pleading with Peterboro people to be more considerate in their treatment of the city's parks and of private property in the country.

In this connection Wallace's Grove, that beautiful woods just west of the city that for many years has been a favourite spot for picnic parties, naturally comes into mind.

This natural park, with its uplands shaded by splendid trees and a picturesque stream wandering through its valley, is, of course, privately owned.

It is the property of a Peterboro citizen who is delighted to know that the grove is still popular with the people of the city and to have them make use of it as often as possible.

Yet his kindness is rewarded by a litter of paper bags, banana peels, the remains of picnic luncheons and other rubbish scattered over the grove.

Few people apparently have the decency to gather up the souvenirs of their repast and to deposit them where they will not destroy the beauty of this picturesque piece of woodland.

If the owner were to erect "No Trespassing" signs and forbid the public to visit his property there would be a loud chorus of complaint.

Yet what fair-minded person could blame him in the view of the manner in which his hospitality is violated at the hands of those who make use of the grove.

This is but one of many beauty spots in the district that deserve better treatment from the people of this city.

THE COST OF GOVERNMENT.

Figures as to the case of government in Canada, presented by the Citizens' Research Institute, tell a story that should be of interest to every Canadian inasmuch as this cost comes out of the pockets of the people.

The Institute has been delving into the combined per capita costs of the national, provincial and municipal government for seventeen Canadian cities, among which Peterboro is not numbered.

It finds that while the per capita cost is high enough—in Toronto, for example, it amounts to $106.89 for every man, woman and child in the Queen City—the combined costs, without considering Federal trading deficits, decreased in 1924 in all but three of the seventeen cities studied, Hamilton, Montreal and Quebec alone showing an increase.

It is well to remember that per capita costs are not an infallible guide in judging of the efficiency or inefficiency of various governments; their main value is the indication of the trend of costs.

Problems in each portion of the country vary, and naturally the costs of their solution vary as well.

Services may be given in one Province or municipality which in another may be supported out of private funds or not carried on at all, and it is quite possible that citizens in the municipality with the larger per capita costs may be getting the greater value for the money expended.

On the other hand, a service may be desirable and yet the business and industry of the locality may not be in a position as yet to afford it.

Is it not better to count the cost before undertaking the service than to make the plunge and then bewail the cost after the service has been established?

In government business, as in private business, proper planning pays dividends; in the case of a government in lighter taxation, more and better service or both.

RACE TRACK CROOKS.

As long back as the oldest reader of the sport page can remember, horse racing has been called "the sport of kings." The phrase has stuck long after it has ceased to be a sport and become a sordid business. There are sportsmen of splendid type in Canada and the United States to whom the breeding of thoroughbred racing stock is a hobby and to whom the winner's price in the mutuels is of minor consideration. Unfortunately for horse racing as a sport and for the public that patronizes the courses, the sterling sportsmen are outnumbered by the crooks who infest race tracks. Down in Kentucky a few months ago there was a sensational expose of a syndicate of jockeys. Some of the most prominent riders on the continent, on whose mounts the public wagered with confidence, were proven to have been riding for their own bets and not for the public nor for the good of the sport. They were barred from the turf for life, but nobody thought for a minute that this summary action by the Kentucky stewards completely purified the game. A few days ago at Aurora, Illinois, an hour before an important stake race, the feature of the day's card, was scheduled to be run, a trainer noticed that his entry was acting queerly. Examination by a veterinary surgeon disclosed that the animal had been tampered with. Four other horses entered in the race were also suddenly taken ill. The stewards called the event off and the police were sent for. A pretty company of gamblers and touts was rounded up and it was confessed that strychnine-treated sugar cubes had been fed the horses to incapacitate them and make certain that another horse, on whom big bets had been made, would win. Two of the horses tampered with have succumbed to the poison and the others will be useless for racing in the future. It has been fairly conclusively demonstrated over a period of many years that it is impossible to have horse races without betting and impossible to have betting without crookedness. The answer would seem to be apparent.—Hamilton Spectator.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH THE FLAG?

The London Daily Press in giving a review of the historical background of the Union Jack scouts the fussy ideas of the minority in this country, who would emulate the move in South Africa, from where the latest information comes that the Government is likely to withdraw its proposed new design on account of the storm of protest which has been raised.

Premier Hertzog and his followers, under the assumption that a flag peculiarly South African would draw the people of various sections of that country together, have been agitating for a flag design from which the Union Jack shall be completely absent.

On the other hand, General Smuts, the former Premier, together with his followers, believe that such a flag would cause confusion in place of cohesion, and it might be tumult. In an eloquent speech the "war Premier," whose position during four years of world struggle has taught him the value of the closest possible Empire connections, called attention to the recent flag episode in Canada, where, as he pointed out, after a commission of inquiry, whose business it was to probe public opinion, had reported to the Government the question of a new Canadian flag, was left in abeyance.

There will always be fussy politicians, just as there will always be fussy people.

When fussy people can find nothing else that will bring them into the limelight, they fuss; it satisfies in a manner the inferiority complex from which fussy people suffer.

When fussy (or sometimes astute) politicians want to satisfy the public that "something is doing," however little, they start to fuss about some insignificant thing like the design for a new flag. It occupies public attention. Or it throws the public off the scent of more important happenings. In either event the fuss is useful.

What most of us would like to find out is: What's the matter with the flag as it stands? And if there is anything the matter with it insofar as the pride of the outposts of Empire are concerned, why not continue to develop the Union Jack so that it will suit all concerned?

Some people seem to think the Union Jack is the original flag of England. It isn't. The Union Jack is a combination of three flags, English, Irish and Scotch. The Union Jack in proper terms is an evolution of the three national crosses of three nations, superimposed upon three national colors. The object of that evolution was to show the world that those three nations had thrown in their fortunes together and, for defence at all events, had become one people.

Originally the English flag had only one cross, a red perpendicular cross on a white field, the Cross of St. George, the Patron Saint of England. English crusaders wore that cross on their breasts when they went out to deliver Jerusalem and win from the heathen the sepulchre of our Lord.

Originally the Scotch flag had only one cross, a white diagonal cross on a blue field, called the Cross of St. Andrew, Patron Saint of Scotland. When England and Scotland came together under James Stuart, the two crosses were united on one flag, the original Union Jack. Under that flag the foundations of the Indian Empire and of the Dominion of Canada were laid, Gibraltar was taken and Great Britain did much of her finest empire building.

Once more, the original flag of Ireland had only one cross, the Cross of St. Patrick, a red diagonal cross on a white ground, the sign and symbol of the Patron Saint of Erin.

When Great Britain and Ireland became the United Kingdom these three crosses and their three fields were united also to form the grand old bunting under which millions on millions of men have marched in the cause of human betterment and human liberty.

Think of the contribution to history England, Ireland and Scotland have made under their respective symbols.

The British dominions overseas have made some contributions to history also. Why not simply add their particular symbols, a symbol for each dominion, to the flag as it flies and float it over the dominion represented?

In process of time, were this thing loyally done, some artist, surely, will arise who will be able to combine the whole into a yet newer Union Jack, the Flag of the Empire.—St. Catharines Standard.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

TIMELY SUGGESTIONS FOR BUSINESS MEN WHO AIM TO PLEASE PATRONS.

1. To treat each customer with the courtesy that springs from genuine friendship and respect.

2. To have more thought for the customer's final satisfaction than for the amount of the immediate sale.

3. To know my stock and to be accurate in statements about merchandise.

4. To be an attentive to the purchaser of an inexpensive article as to one whose needs are more elaborate.

5. To be patient with the customer who is provoked; prompt with the customer who is hurried; sympathetic with the customer who is puzzled; considerate to those who are difficult to satisfy; and hospitable to those who are strangers in my store.

6. To seek a fair understanding of my customers' exact requirements that I may present merchandise which is precisely the thing desired.

7. To be friendly, but not familiar; cheerful, but not boisterous; to give information, not advice.

8. To keep my service up to the standard of my merchandise.

9. To increase my sales, not by means of persuasion or trickery; but by making my customers feel that this is the store in which they are served pleasantly, capably and promptly; so that they will wish to do as much of their buying here as their needs will permit.

10. To be loyal to my employer, considerate toward my associates and therefore keep true to myself.

WINNIPEG LIVESTOCK

WINNIPEG, June 1 (Canadian Press).—Arrivals yesterday, 1,140 cattle and calves; 1,605 hogs; 49 sheep and lambs.

There was a moderately good demand for killers on the cattle market here yesterday. All other classes found a ready outlet at firm prices.

Hogs were stronger, thick smooths weighing up at $14 and select bacons $15.40.

Spring lambs brought 16 cents a pound and a few sheep sold up to $9.50.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, June 1 (Canadian Press).—Trading in May and July futures was moderately active in yesterday's session of the wheat market, but values slumped, closing 1 1-8c to 2 1-4c lower.

A small volume of export business in evening-up trade in the May future accounted for the bulk of business. Elevator companies with hedges in May were transferring to the July, while there also was some liquidation of "long" May wheat by Eastern interests.

May, which passed off the boards yesterday, closed at $1.48 7-8, representing a loss of 2 1-4c. The high point was $1.68 1-2 and the low $1.20. July closed at $1.47 3-8, and October at $1.29 7-8.

Outside of a fair demand for barley there was very little doing in the coarse grains. Flax and rye continued quiet.

There was very little doing in the cash markets, and only a moderate demand existed for wheat and coarse grains.

LAKE ONTARIO STEAMER SUNK

Grain Boat Lost in Collision With C. N. Steamer Dalwarnie.

CREW SAVED.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., June 1.—(Canadian Press).—The steamer Nesbit Grammar, loaded with grain from Port Colborne to Montreal, was sunk in Lake Ontario off Thirty Mile Point, near Charlotte, N.Y., after being in collision with the Canadian National steamer Dalwarnie in a dense fog.

The Nesbit Grammar which was owned by the Eastern Steamships Co. was rammed nearly amidships and brought to Port Dalhousie yesterday afternoon by the Dalwarnie, which is lying at the coal dock awaiting orders.

The captain of the Dalwarnie refused to discuss the wreck beyond stating that all hands were rescued and that a fog was prevailing.

His steamer is bound for Port Arthur with a cargo of steel. The Nesbit Grammar left Port Dalhousie at 10.30 on Sunday night.

WILLIAM DAVIS FIGHTS BATTLE FOR HIS LIFE

Police Sergeant Recognizes Him as Old Criminal of Fort William.

KILLED CLERK.

Rooming House Owner Wounded in Fray is Recovering Quickly.

WINNIPEG, Man., June 1 (Canadian Press).—William Davis, a criminal of international record, and slayer of Maurice Garvie, 19-year-old junior clerk, shot to death during the $2,000 robbery of the Logan Avenue branch of the Royal Bank of Canada here Friday, is fighting a battle for his life on a cot in the General Hospital.

Suffering from six bullet wounds received during the ten-minute gun battle which preceded his capture a few hours after the murder and robbery, Davis is in a critical condition. He has little chance of recovery, according to hospital reports.

Weakness through loss of blood and after-excitement of the sensational gun-fight with the police are working against his chances of recovery.

George Miller and George Little, held by the police as possible associates of the bandit, appeared in the City Police Court yesterday. No charges are yet laid against them, but both are being held as material witnesses. They will appear at the Garvie inquest later in the week.

GIRL IS TAKEN FROM HER BED TO OPEN BANK

Bandits Leave Her Tied on Floor of Burning Building.

NO ARRESTS.

Lay For Four Hours Outside Door Till Fire Drew Crowd.

PREECEVILLE, Sask., June 1 (Canadian Press).—Police yesterday continued their investigations of the attempt to rob the local branch of the Bank of Toronto, on Sunday morning. No arrests have been made.

Miss Emma Lindolum, teller of the bank, who was forced to accompany the bandits to the bank, is suffering from shock, and has been unable to make a complete statement concerning the affair.

The police, however, are in possession of the following facts.

Miss Lindolum, sleeping at her room in a house half a block from the bank building, was awakened and dragged from her bed at 3 a.m., Sunday. She was forced to walk in her night attire to the bank, and after opening the door, was bound and gagged.

The bandits, believed to be three in number, then attempted to open the safe. Their attempts failed and in endeavoring to blow the door, they left a smouldering fire. They departed empty handed, leaving the girl tied on the floor.

While the bank was burning, Miss Lindolum pushed herself along by working with her heels and collapsed outside the door. There she was found four hours later when the fire was discovered by villagers. The bank was badly gutted and many records destroyed.

It is thought that the attempt was made by persons who have lived in the vicinity and are aware of the customs and routine of the bank.

Plea Of Stepmother At Whom She Fired Revolver Persuades Judge To Be Lenient To Mrs. Bergeron

MONTREAL, Que., June 1.—(Canadian Press.)—When Mrs. Doris Bergeron appeared before Judge Perreault yesterday for sentence on a complaint of discharging firearms at Mrs. H. M. Saumeur, her step-mother, she was condemned to provide a bond of $200 to keep the peace during the next twelve months or spend a month in jail.

The case created a small sensation when it first came before the courts here recently. Mrs. Bergeron, it was then alleged, called on her father and step-mother, who had only been married a few hours, and after a quarrel, produced a revolver and fired a shot at her new step-mother that passed so close that it blackened her right cheek. At first a charge of attempted murder was brought against Mrs. Bergeron, but it was later reduced to one of discharging of firearms.

Mrs. Saumeur pleaded for her stepdaughter and asked the Judge to be lenient.

NEW PROPOSAL MADE BY HYDRO TO TOWNSHIPS

More Attractive Terms Than Before Offered Are Under Discussion.

LOWER RATES.

Agreement For Twenty Years Necessary—Detailed Statement Requested.

A light and power proposition containing more attractive terms than any hitherto offered has been laid by the Hydro Commission of Ontario before the townships of North Monaghan, and Otonabee.

Under a revised statute of 1925, the Provincial Government makes a graft of 50 per cent of the total cost towards the construction of primary and secondary lines in approved rural areas. The Hydro proposes to buy, at a valuation, the city owned power lines that are outside the civic boundary in the township territory. Due to the fact that half of the cost of this purchase will be borne by the Government, the Hydro is enabled to quote lower rates than those offered by the Utilities Commission last year in their effort to induce the townships to become users of Utilities power and light.

The Hydro Commission has made arrangements with the Utilities Commission whereby the latter organization has agreed in return for an annual payment, to become responsible for the collecting of Hydro rates in the townships.

Undre the proposed arrangement the townships will require to enter into an agreement in which they will join the Rural Area system for twenty years. Similarly, users of light and power will be called upon to bind themselves to take Hydro power for 20 years from the townships; this to be charged against property.

The Utilities Commission as well as the townships concerned has asked for a detailed statement from the Hydro. Until this is forthcoming there will be no further developments.

RHEUMATIC PAINS GO SWOLLEN JOINTS VANISH

Thousands of sufferers have freed themselves from the bondage of rheumatism; rid themselves of the torturing pain; reduced the swollen joints; thrown away canes and crutches, and from helpless beings became able to work and be of use to themselves and their families.

They took Rheuma; the modern enemy of rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, arthritis, and chronic neuralgia.

Don't be skeptical about Rheuma. You will know in a few hours after beginning the treatment that the poisonous waste matter is leaving your system through the natural channels. You will feel better in a day; you will know you are going to be helped in less than a week.

There is no guess work about Rheuma bringing you back to health. That's why McDermid & Jury and druggists everywhere sell it with guarantee of money back if it does not give quick relief.

QUEBEC STRIKE IS DEADLOCKED

No Intermediary Found For Shoe Workers and Manufacturers.

SERIOUS OUTLOOK.

QUEBEC, June 1 (Canadian Press).—With both sides claiming satisfactory results from their respective stands, the unions to the effect that none of their members have returned to work and the manufacturers that the amount of production in their factories has increased from twenty-five to thirty-five per cent. of their normal daily output, there does not appear any possibility of bringing the members of the Quebec Shoe Manufacturers' Association and Shoe Workers Unions to a settlement of their differences.

It is claimed that approximately one hundred new workers have been taken on by the manufacturers since they started their campaign for men to replace the strikers. There is also a rumor that some of the strikers have decided to return to work, against the orders of their unions, but such reports are emphatically denied by Pierre Beaule, head of the National and Catholic Unions.

Mr. Beaule admitted that the situation was very serious, and that it was causing an exodus of shoe workers from the city to Montreal and New Jersey. To date at least fifty men had left town. A shoe representative from Montreal was looking for hands for his factory. This was to be expected, he said, as the Montreal factories were overwhelmed with their own work and the orders which should have gone to Quebec factories. He predicted that unless an understanding was reached within the next eight days, both the manufacturers and workers in Quebec would suffer the loss of the whole summer season's work.

A peaceful settlement and one which would be satisfactory to both sides could be reached, he said, if both the manufacturers and the workers consented to put a little water in their wine. The workers were willing to negotiate but now it seemed that no intermediary capable of bringing both sides together could be found.

Urges Printing Stamps In French and English

OTTAWA, Ont., June 1. — (By Canadian Press).—P. A. HE DEFIES CONSTIPATION!

J. H. Michols of Winnipeg ready to carry ALL-BRAN in his baggage to Britain, if necessary.

When a Canadian going abroad is ready to carry in his baggage a sufficient supply of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN to cover his needs during his journey, he is indeed an enthusiastic booster for that product. Yet that is what was contemplated by Mr. J. H. Michols, of Winnipeg, who wrote to ask if ALL-BRAN could be secured in Liverpool; if not, he would carry his stock with him.

His letter stated that if he had to choose between One Million Dollars and ALL-BRAN he would "much rather do without the million." Mr. Michols realized that Kellogg's is the original ALL-BRAN—and a necessity in the permanent relief of constipation.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to bring relief in the most chronic case of constipation—permanent relief, if eaten regularly. Only ALL-BRAN can bring such 100 percent results. Eat at least two tablespoonfuls daily; in chronic cases, use it with every meal. If relief does not follow, your money will be refunded.

HARRY MORTON'S home in Peterborough is filled with chorus girls, invited there from Toronto by AUDREY, his adopted daughter. Morton, middle-aged, attractive, wealthy and unmarried, is loved by Audrey and by NONA, a Toronto stage girl, who also is of the party.

JOHN PARRISH, Morton's secretary, brings word to the house that his employer must leave for Arizona that night.

As this chapter opens, Morton has just told Audrey of his approaching trip.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XL

"But, daddy, you can't go with your nose that way!" Audrey gasped, coming into the room and closing the door.

"And what will I do with the girls?"

Parrish had been eyeing his employer's reddened feature. "I noticed your face, sir," he interrupted. "Is it a boil?"

Morton put his hand to his nose. "It's just those fool girls. They daubed a lot of lipstick on me, and it won't come off."

Parrish stared, and then his face expanded in a laugh. "What a queer prank!" He continued to chuckle.

"Glad to see you break loose and laugh about something," commented the older man. "You're so infernally solemn."

Turning to Audrey, he continued. "I'll have to go with this illumination the way it is. And you're not going. The girls can stay here, and Parrish will look after you."

Parrish's face suddenly fell.

"I can't stand those girls!" he protested.

"But daddy, I want to go along," wailed Audrey.

Morton ruled against them. "I can't take Audrey, for various reasons," he told Parrish, "and you'll have to stick around and look after her. Those girls won't do any more than kill you. And Audrey—" the girl, woefully, had sunk into Morton's armchair—"I'm sorry. I'd like to take you. But I can't. You must stay here and keep house. Let the girls stay—you won't have any dull times, then."

He tossed his mail to Parrish, who stowed it in his brief-case.

"Get me a drawing room tonight, and a ticket through to Yuma," Morton directed.

He went to the door, and opened it. The girls were clustered in the hall outside, bare-legged, their brief dancing costumes moist with perspiration. Parrish moved into a corner of the study, where he could not be observed.

"I've got to leave Audrey alone here," Morton told the girls. "You're to stay and be her guests. The house is yours—but don't take it entirely to pieces."

He paused, and smiled. "Mr. Parrish will be in every day."

There was a squeal of delight. "Is he the boy who danced with us upstairs?" cried the little blond girl.

Morton nodded.

"Happy days!" she caroled.

The study door behind Morton was shut abruptly, from within. He jerked his thumb rearward.

"That's Parrish inside there now," he informed them.

As they danced around the door, and pounded upon it, he went upstairs. His clothing was scattered among all the rooms, and he was patiently gathering it together when Audrey joined him.

"Mr. Parrish got loose and ran away," she said. "The girls chased him clear out in the street."

"In those costumes?"

She nodded. "It looked as if the entire neighborhood turned out to see," she told him.

"Well, we're disgraced properly now. I hope you have a nice time while I'm gone, Audrey!"

He went ahead, packing his bags, the girl helping him. She did not ask him why he was going away. His long habit of silence about his affairs, had accustomed her to accept, without question, any movement he chose to make.

When he returned to the lower floor, Audrey herded the girls back to their rooms, to bathe and resume their normal clothing.

Nona, in the music room, was softly strumming on the piano. Morton entered, and quietly took his seat in the corner.

"Please go on playing," he told her.

She complied. Her mood was tender, and she played old, simple songs: "Juanita," "The Last Rose of Summer," "The Spanish Cavalier."

Then she swept into the strains of a hymn—"Lead, Kindly Light."

"Where did you learn that?" Morton asked her, as she finished.

"I wasn't always a jazz baby," she responded, a sorrowful twist to her mouth.

She began the strain again, singing the words, softly.

"Harry, I'm sorry you're going," she said, turning from the piano. "I'll have to go back to Toronto, I guess."

"Can't you move over to the house, and stay with Audrey?" he asked.

She shook her head. "They're just playing, here," she said, "and I think I'd better go back to work. I'm trying for a career, now, you know."

She crossed to where he was sitting, and laid her hand on the back of his chair.

"Do you know what makes me want to work, and accomplish something?" she asked. "It's the thought that it will please you."

She sat down, her hands crossed in her lap. "I want you to see me dance—really dance, and I want you to hear the people applaud, and to have you come back-stage, and say: 'Nona, you were good tonight'!"

Tears came to her eyes, and rolled unnoticed down her cheeks.

"I've just been—nothing, all my life," she went on. "Maybe I can be something, now. Harry, you won't go away and forget me, will you?"

He shook his head, and looked kindly at the girl whose dark eyes wistfully searched his own.

Two of the guests were clattering down the stairs. "I can't ever forget you, Nona," he said, hurriedly, as the girls appeared at the door

Audrey, Nona and Parrish saw Morton to his train that evening. There were stares of curiosity at his nose, from the little group that waited at the station.

"Those chorus men are going back to Toronto this evening," Parrish said.

"Because I'm leaving?" Morton asked.

"I don't think they know it," responded Parrish. "They just came and got some money and said they were going home. They seemed very unhappy here."

"Poor things," said Audrey. "The girls tease them, and the men don't talk to them. I'd hate to be a chorus man."

She kissed Morton, as he turned to the train. Nona offered her hand, and then, on impulse, kissed him, too. They waved, as he mounted the steps of his car, and disappeared inside.

An unwinking sun beamed down upon Yuma as Morton alighted from his train. The porter deposited his bags on the platform, and beamed as he inspected the tip that Morton had left in his hand.

The man glanced curiously at the Indian woman who squatted on the platform, an array of beads and bags before them, for sale. With shawls over their heads, they waited impassively for trade. An Indian girl, in civilized dress, leaned against a post behind one of the women, talking to her in swift gutterals. The woman responded from time to time, without turning her head.

Morton listened a moment, and then joined the conversation, in the woman's own tongue. Sudden animation lit her face, and she responded.

"Still chattering Choctaw," said a voice behind him.

Morton turned, to face a tall, solemn-faced man, in overalls and high boots, who had come up behind him.

"And I tell you again that isn't Choctaw," said Morton, as if continuing a casual conversation. "I should think that after thirty years in the desert, you'd learn the difference."

The man picked up Morton's bags, and the two walked to a battered automobile that was drawn up beside the station. Morton climbed in, and the overalled man sat beside him, at the driver's wheel.

"Eighteen or nineteen years since you've been over this road," said the driver. "But you'll recognize all the bumps. I wish it would rain here sometimes, and wash some of them old ones away, and make new ones."

"How are you, anyhow, Eli?" inquired Morton.

"Can't complain. You haven't changed much, Harry. Little gray on the temples. How's the baby?"

"Young lady now," Morton told him.

"And pretty as a picture, I bet," said Eli. "Looks like her mother, don't she?" There was a moment's silence. "I hadn't ought to have said that, I guess," the man supplemented. He changed the subject. "Tom Burry got bumped off about ten years ago and Miss Meeter, who married the ranch boss at Bar K has twins—they're about twelve years old, now—and that new shaft we sunk is going to be a winner, all right."

Morton said nothing, as they left the paved highway and turned into a trail that led across the abrupt rises and sharp depressions of the sun-baked desert, over a range of hills.

"How're your Nevada mines doing?" Eli asked at length. "The ones that syndicate took, that went busted?"

"They've cashed in," Morton told him. "Settled at seventy cents on the dollar. They're working the old drifts now."

"You must have made a million," commented the other man.

He steered the car expertly through an arroyo, and up the steep bank on the opposite side. Then, reaching into his hip pocket, he drew forth a plug of tobacco, and bit from it a generous chew.

"I'm glad you made it," he continued. "Remember when you first came down here, hungry as a pup?"

"I remember," assented Morton.

"You didn't know nothing," pursued the other. "Greenest hand that ever hit these parts, toting a canvas and a box of paints. Ditched 'em all, when you got rich, didn't you?"

"Long before I got rich," Morton said, soberly. "I couldn't pack them on my back across the desert. Threw them away, long before I ever located that first mine."

Eli mounted a hill, topped with rotted lava, and carefully began the steep descent.

"Queer how you find bad luck, sometimes, and tackle it, and there's good luck waiting underneath," he philosophized. "You find Audrey, laying there—and right behind the cabin there's your mine, waiting!"

Morton winced. "For God's sake, talk about something else!" he begged.

The machine churned through a patch of soft sand.

"Too bad you didn't locate here," Eli resumed. "You ought to have come and visited, anyway, being that they're your own mines."

He lapsed into silence, and the little car bumped on, dipping and rising as the trail wound its way across the barren waste.

They stopped at noon, for a bite of lunch that Eli drew from the toneau, and for a draught from the water bottle that swung from the tire carrier at the rear. The heat was intense. Morton had thrown his coat into the rear seat, with his collar and tie, and sat, his shirt open down the front, perspiring heavily.

It was evening before they reached the mines. A little cluster of buildings stood on a steep hillside. Brown Mexican children played in the dust of the narrow, rutted road. The mine offices were in a shed, that stood apart from the other buildings.

"That fellow you're looking for's in there," said Eli, jerking his thumb toward one of the tiny shacks beside the road.

SCHOOL NEEDED BY MISSIONARY

Visitor From China Tells Lakefield Audience Natives Must Learn.

W.M.S. MEETING.

LAKEFIELD, June 1 —The W. M. S. of the Regent Street Church held an open meeting on Thursday evening in the basement of the church, with Mrs. (Rev.) S. A. Kemp in the chair. After the opening exercises Miss Marion Coon, returned missionary from China and formerly a "daughter of the Lakefield parsonage," gave an interesting talk on her work in China. Miss Coon has been a missionary in Chunk King in the Province of Si Chuan and has had many interesting experiences.

Miss Coon expressed her pleasure at being once more in Lakefield where she had once lived. In China there are two schools of thought, one which affirms that missionary work consists only of preaching the gospel and that the educational and medical phases of the work are expensive and useless side-lines.

These people believe that Christ's second coming will be almost immediately, and they don't see any need of preparing for the future work. Other people believe that Christianity must usher in a new social order, and this can only be done by a band of Christian Chinese men and women consecrated to service; the latter is the idea of the Canadian Methodist Church.

Need Education.

The missionary could not give the gospel without the Bible and to be most efficient it must be translated in Chinese and the people taught to read it, so wherever there is a Chinese Christian church there is a school beside it. Also, with so many people living in superstition and amidst unspeakable filth, disease is prevalent, and here the medical branch is necessary, for we can't have a strong Christian organization without raising social and economic conditions.

In China the church believes in preaching the simple gospel. Buddha said that religion was a device to preserve peace of mind under conditions as they are. Thank God Christianity is not like that, and we must progress and have a living organization. The hope of China does not lie with the few missionaries we are sending over, but in the young men and women of China. Chung King is a city of about 800,000 inhabitants, occupying about half the area of Peterboro. It is surrounded by high walls, in which are eight gates, all but one leading to the river, as the city is on the river bank. There is no sewage in the city and no wells, and only a few cisterns, all of which are in the foreigners' compound. Water is sold by the numerous water carriers and is a very precious commodity.

The W.M.S. Girls' Boarding School is a four-story building, situated on very high ground and looking over the city. One would think it was one vast roof, for the houses are built so close together and the streets are mere slits. One day Miss Coon saw a family moving over the roofs.

In an upper room over a rice shop, kept by a native Christian, there is a little sprout of a Christian church. It is used as a girls' day school and for mothers' meetings and services are held there on Sunday. Another is over a carpenter's shop, and each Saturday the speaker held a mothers' meeting and taught the women the gospel story and a simple prayer, and also how to read, as most of them are anxious to learn, and it is a proud day in a woman's life when she has conquered her first page of reading. Ignorance and Christianity do not coolesce.

A foreign pastoral worker is in charge of all churches in the city and the suburbs, and the work is carried on under his direction.

Self-Supporting Church.

There is at Chung King a self-supporting Chinese church, and they became very independent and at one time wanted to throw off entirely the foreign yoke and be entirely native, but they have not done so, and there is a splendid spirit of co-operation, and last summer during an anti-foreign rising when all foreigners were starved out and had to go down by the river, by consular orders, this church remained loyal and true. The exterior is of composite architecture, the roof is Chinese and made of golden tile, while the building itself follows the architecture of the foreign church. This church has its boys' and girls' day school and last year the Chinese erected a boys' boarding school. They have a missionary society for home missionary work and have one man and two girl missionaries in West China. At first the order in the churches was very poor, but it is better now, as they are rapidly learning. The work of Christianity in Chung King is hindered and not helped by the foreign business men, English and American, who are located there to the number of about 200.

The church in China is training teachers, preachers, honest business men and incorruptable state officials, and also future Christian mothers. A well-known American educator said in Japan that a country was never better or higher than its mothers. The level of any country is no higher than its womanhood. The girls in the boarding schools are given clean, airy bedrooms and are taught sanitation and how honorable and dainty womanhood can be. They are taught teaching and nursing and are fitted to be Christian mothers, not the mere chattel which for generations was the lot of Chinese womanhood.

Chinese Girls Progress.

The Chinese girl is fighting for her opportunities of girlhood, as in China a girl was a child, then a woman, with no girlhood intervening. The girl teachers are replacing men in the Government schools. The latter are in great need of funds as the money which should be used for them is used to keep up a vast army of soldiers. During the speaker's residence in China the longest period of peace was fourteen months.

The work among the women of China is the great opportunity of the W.M.S. as the foreign men cannot hope to touch the lives of the women of China.

Mrs. Kemp briefly welcomed the ladies and gentlemen present from other denominations and assured them of the pleasure it gave the W.M.S. to have them present on this occasion. A vote of thanks to Miss Coon for her inspirational address was moved by Mrs. J. H. Sherin and seconded by Mrs. Wesley Sherin.

Mrs. McMillan and Miss Edna Harrison sang very much appreciated solos during the evening.

The ladies of the W.M.S. served refreshments to their visitors, after which the gathering dispersed, having spent a pleasant and profitable evening.

SEYMOUR TOWNSHIP BASEBALL SCHEDULE

Season Will Open on June 9 and Close on July 16.

BURNBRAE, June 1. — The schedule of the Seymour Township Baseball League for the season is as follows:

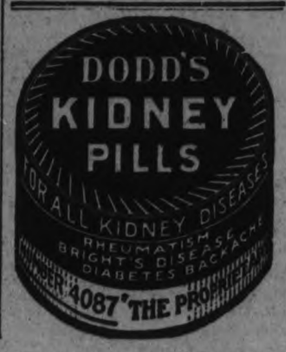
June 9—Burnbrae at Rylstone.
June 11—English Line at Trent River.
June 16 — Rylstone at English Line.
June 18—Trent River at Burnbrae.
June 23—Burnbrae at English Line.
June 25—Rylstone at Trent River.
June 30—English Line at Rylstone
July 2—Burnbrae at Trent River.
July 7—Rylstone at Burnbrae.
July 9—Trent River at English Line.
July 14—English Line at Burnbrae.
July 16—Trent River at Rylstone.

Of the games scheduled for June 30 and July 2, either or both may be played at the Trent River celebration on July 1st. The original plan was to have Burnbrae and Trent River meet in a morning game with English Line and Rylstone at 1 p.m. and a final non-league game between the winners at 3 p.m. This plan, however, was not suitable to the Eastern players, and the matter now rests with the Trent River park management to make plans regarding the games. Burnbrae with three cheese-makers on the roster, is in a poor position to play even an afternoon game at 3 o'clock on account of the distance involved, while some members of the other teams are not in favor of the trip. Further notice will be given of this at a later date.

The home team furnishes two balls, one new and one in good condition for each game. The visiting team arranges for the chief umpire, and the home team provides his assistant.

All postponed games must be played within five days of scheduled date if at all possible. Postponements only allowed for bad weather.

The managers of the teams will present their complete list of 18 players to the secretary at the first game played, and also their entry fee of two dollars. All lists will be subject to the approval of the executive, who have power to strike off the name of any players not considered eligible.



REBEKAH LODGE HOLDS SUPPER

Campbellford Ladies Celebrate Anniversary of Lodge's Founding.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 1—The ladies of the Loch Lomond Rebekah Lodge No. 248 held their regular business meeting on Thursday evening in their lodge rooms. This meeting was preceded by a supper and programme to celebrate the third anniversary of the lodge in Campbellford. Several guests from Picton were present.

The ladies served a delicious supper about eight o'clock. A birthday cake gaily lighted with candles in honor of the occasion was the centre of the table. Toasts were proposed and responded to, to the King and the Rebekah Lodge. The company then all joined in community singing after which the programme was given.

Solos were sung by Miss Kathleen Connor, Robert Dunk, A. Hazell and John Storie. Mrs. Montgomery gave an interesting reading and Mr. Montgomery gave a mouth organ selection. Mrs. Norwood of Picton, past district preside : of the lodge, gave a short address which was enjoyed by all present.

FAREWELL SAID IN NORWOOD CHURCH

Miss Ora Finlay is Leaving For Western Canada.

NORWOOD, June 1.—The service in the United church on Sunday morning was conducted by Mr. Ross Fennell in the absence of the pastor, Rev. R. F. Stillman, who is attending the conference at Kingston. A very interesting address was given by Miss Greta Clarke, who spent four years in China doing mission ary work. There was a large congregation and all were delighted with Miss Clarke's address. A solo was rendered by Master Wilson Riseborough, and his sweet voice reached the hearts of all.

The evening service was in charge of Mr. H. A. Thistlewaite who gave a very eloquent address. Miss Ona Finlay, who has held a position on the staff of the local branch of the Royal Bank and who leaves the first of the week for her home in Sudbury to spend a short time prior to leaving for her future home in Saskatchewan, sang a solo which will long be remembered by all present. Before the close of the service Mr. G. A. Brethen, chairman of the music committee of the church, read a letter of appreciation of faithful services rendered to the church by Miss Finlay during her residence in the village.

The following was the letter:

Dear Miss Finlay:

We, members of session of Norwood United church, have learned with deepest regret that circumstances makes it necessary that your connection with this church and community must soon be severed.

During your stay in Norwood your strict adherence to duty, unassuming demeanor and high type of Christian womanhood exhibited, have made you worthy of the love and esteem you enjoy, of every member of this community.

You early identifed yourself with our church here and the service you have rendered in the choir, the young people's meetings, the Sunday school, and in fact in every organization of the church, have been productive of much good, and although you are leaving us it can be well said, "Her works do follow her." In the choir particularly you have always been a valued member, and your singing has ever been a joy to this congregation, and of real assistance in advancing the Master's Kingdom.

The session of this church, acting for the congregation by unanimous agreement wish to convey to you their appreciation of the splendid services you have rendered, and, we feel that any community in which your lot may be cast, will be the richer by your presence.

We want you to feel that in leaving this church and people you carry with you our sincerest wishes for joy, hapiness and success for you and yours, and above all that "the peace which passeth all understanding,' may be ever present with you.

"Like barks on life's ocean,
We meet, we greet, we sever,
Drifting eternally."

And if not in this world we hope to meet again. Good-bye, God speed.

Signed on behalf of the session, by the music committee.

G. A. Brethen
E. C. Squire
R. G. Lawlor.

The "At Home" given by the Catholic Woman's League in the Government Armouries on Friday night last was a great success financially and socially. The music for the occasion was provided by a local orchestra composed of Ralph Elliott, piano; Gordon Fry, cornet; Oliver Riseborough, saxaphone; Charlie Copen, violin, and Claude Ball, drums.

An exceedingly fine lunch was served about midnight by the ladies of the league.

A number of the members of the Norwood Lodge A.F. and A.M. were in Havelock on Sunday, attending the funeral of the late Mr. Elias Williams, a well known resident of this district. The deceased was for a number of years a county constable and license inspector. His wife predeceased him about a year ago.

MACLEOD TRAIL FATAL.

Child Killed, Another Injured When Car Turns Somersault.

CALGARY, Alta., June 1.—(Canadian Press)—Pitched from a motor car, which turned a complete somersault into the ditch on the Macleod trail, about a mile south of Turner siding, Aileen Grange, 10-year-old daughter of Mrs. Effie Grange, was fatally injured on Sunday.

Her baby brother William, 18 months old, lies in the hospital with concussion of the brain, and his condition is serious.

Mrs. Grange and three other girls escaped with a slight shaking up. The car was damaged considerably and was towed back to the city.

Solomon, of Toronto, had been received at the village. The district through which they travelled on their way to the portage is only a short distance from Whitney where a game warden and his guide where burned to death last January.

INDIA QUIETER TO-DAY THAN AT ANY OTHER TIME IN LAST DECADE

Gandhi's Dreams Shattered, Says Sir Alexander Frederic Whyte, Kt., in Address To Montreal Canadian Club.

DEMOCRACY MAY PROVE SUCCESS.

MONTREAL, Que., June 1. — (Canadian Press).—India today was more quiet than it has been for ten years past, and Gandhi's dreams lie shattered, but despite his political failure wherever Gandhi had influence that influence was for the good, declared Sir Alexander Frederic Whyte, Kt., addressing the Canadian Club here. Sir Alexander was President of the Indian Legislative Assembly created by the legislation of 1919, resigning that position last year. As to whether the effort to superimpose the democracy of the west upon an Asiatic country had proven a success it was yet too early to say, and the knowledge would be obtained only after the scope given to the natives was enlarged. Sir Alexander also emphasized that the success or failure of the plan would depend not on what Englishmen may or may not do, but on the Indians themselves.

In approaching this situation it had to be remembered that to the Indian, and especially the Hindu, religion was all important, as contrasted with the western conception of working out one's salvation in company with one's fellow-men.

The roots of India were in religion, and since all religions come out of Asia the Hindu looks upon the westerner with a sense of superiority, At the same time, because of the command by the westerner of material things, the Indian is at the same time bound to look up to him, a condition of things which creates irritation.

Macaulay's Dictum.

Sir Alexander recalled that 100 years ago it had been Macaulay who had laid it down that English was to be the language used, and the result of that had been that for three or four generations past young Indians had turned to western universities for education, and there, in addition to learning professions, had imbibed of western political principles.

"The ferment of modern India began in Macaulay's inkpot," said the speaker. If in Britain there was an autocratic government conditions in India would not have changed much, but since the Englishman had succeeded in establishing democratic government for himself, he had felt it to be logical that the Indian should be given the same chance, hence the establishment of the Legislative Assembly in 1919, and the granting of power to Indian ministers over education, public health and local government.

Control of these public departments did not mean to the Indian what it would to Canadians, said the speaker, for after the war there had been no money to spend for education or public health, hence no progress had been made. The Indian politicians, deprived of that outlet for their energy, had turned to agitation. He felt that for a long time to come administration would have to be held by British officials.

Gandhi's Results.

Referring to Mahatmas Gandhi, Sir Alexander said that it was because of his self-sacrifice for Indians in South Africa and India, and, on their part, of their belief that he was the reincarnation of one of their gods, that the Hindus were swayed by him. The non-co-operative movement, despicable, mean, and carrying with it bloodshed, had yet done more good than harm, said Sir Alexander.

"He was essentially an enemy of government, and that led him into conflict with government, and the only thing government could do was to close his mouth. The trial which led to his imprisonment was probably the most remarkable which has happened in 2,000 years."

There was a prisoner who did not challenge the right of his judge to try him, who admitted he was guilty, and who told the judge when the latter suggested a minimum sentence that he would be failing in his duty if he did not impose the maximum sentence.

"The course of that trial revealed more than anything else to the watching world the difference between the philosophy of the East and the view of established government. That was a quarrel for which there was no solution." Gandhi was subjected to a hard fate, and the motives he expressed deserved commendation and admiration.

fused to divulge any information concerning the two men until an investigation had been completed. It is known, however, that Davis and Miller were together last Thursday, when they spent the day at Winnipeg Beach, a summer resort near here. They motored into Winnipeg on Thursday night.

Robert Segal, owner of the rooming house where Davis sought refuge, is recovering from his wound. His condition was reported good yesterday.

Identity Fixed.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., June 1 (Canadian Press).—Sergt. George Marr, of the city police force, who has just returned from Winnipeg, identified the bandit, Davis, who killed Maurice Garvie in the hold-up at the Royal Bank branch in Winnipeg, as Wilfrid Bonnin, a Fort William boy, who has had a criminal record for years, having escaped from the Toronto Reformatory and the Fort William prison farm and who was sentenced to three years for robbing a home in this city.

Sergeant Marr visited him in hospital and Bonnin recognized him and spoke to him by name, asking after others whom he knew in Fort William.

Bonnin greeted Sergeant Marr with "What the hell are you doing up here?" Later he asked how Chief Dodds and Inspector Watkins, of the local force, were getting on.

Bonnin was born at the head of the lakes. He was a newsboy for a time, but soon after he entered his 'teens he became well-known to the Fort William police for petty crimes. He was constantly in trouble. His parents, old-time residents of Fort William, found the lad difficult to discipline

Sent to a reformatory, he later escaped. He drifted back to Fort William, and it was not long before he was convicted of shop-breaking. He had only partially served his sentence when he broke away from the industrial farm. Theft of an automobile placed him in the police toils later, and in June, 1919, he was convicted of robbing a Fort William residence and sentenced to three years in Stony Mountain Penitentiary.

efforts. Reference had been made to what he had done for the men under his command. He had done nothing in comparison to what the men had done for him. They had never failed him and had supported him at every turn. Later, in general conversation, Col. Johnston spoke of the splendid backing given to the 93rd by The Examiner.

The entertainment provided was of a high order. Messrs. Parkin Sr., Parkin Jr., and Taggert rendered some instrumental selections, in fine style. F. Clark sang a solo, accompanied by the banjo. Art Thomas performed some card tricks in a manner, which, had he lived in the Middle Ages, would assuredly have led to his incarceration as a sorcerer or magician.

About eleven o'clock a call was made for volunteers for fatigue duty —to carry out the refreshments, on which the company fell with great gusto. Votes of thanks to the committee, and three cheers for Col. Johnston brought the evening to a close.

MEN MISSING IN HALIBURTON

Two Prospectors Believed Lost in Ayre Township.

GONE OVER WEEK.

LINDSAY, June 1.—Information was received in the village of Haliburton on Saturday that two prospectors have been reported missing since Monday, May 24th.

It appears that the missing men and a companion came to Haliburton from Toronto a little over a fortnight ago. They were taken to Redstone Lake, and last Monday the two men started out to find the portage from Greezie Lake to the Madawaska river. They were making the journey on foot and as they did not return, the third prospector left camp on Tuesday morning for Redstone Lake to secure the services of Mr. Fred Austin in the search. The two men searched the woods as well as the shores of the lakes Wednesday and Thursday without success. Mr. Austin hurried back to Haliburton to give the alarm, and Reeve W. R. Curry ordered out a search party, the members of which started out Sunday afternoon. The two men are supposed to be lost in the township of Ayre, twenty-five miles from Haliburton village.

A record is believed to have been established at a church in Bristol, England, in the recent christening of Mrs. Maria Davies, who is 102 years old.

FORMER PROVINCIAL TREASURER IS FREED ON TICKET-OF-LEAVE

when they passed through Napanee.

Special Order.

A special order was sent to the authorities at the prison to release Smith on ticket of leave, pending the arrival of the license from Ottawa. Instructions were given at once to prepare him for his departure. He was notified by Chief Keeper Walsh a few minutes after the order arrived that he was "going out."

The original arrangements up to the arrival of Mr. Grosch, were to send Smith out on the train, the usual procedure, in charge of the prison escort, who delivers all released inmates to the station for their destination.

Was Model Prisoner.

It was Smith's wish to leave by motor. Several times he has mentioned to inmates, since released, that when his time came to leave the prison he was anxious to get away quietly, to avoid newspapermen and the curious crowds which gather at the station when well known men are released.

It is stated that the wedding of Smith's daughter to Jack Grosch was held up until Smith was released. The former cabinet minister has earned the name of being a model prisoner, and left without a single mark against his record. He first worked in the library as an assistant and later was transferred, early this year, to the accountant's office, taking the position left vacant by John Doughty, when he departed. Smith worked beside W. W. Dunlop, former inspector of provincial prisons, who is serving a four year sentence.

It is stated that Smith is in good health, despite reports to the contrary and that his cheerful manner in carrynig out his duties along with his sanguine temperament, was an inspiration to the inmates.

Smith was convicted and sentenced on Oct. 24, 1924, to three years in Portsmouth Penitentiary, Kingston, on charges of conspiring to defraud the province of Ontario in connection with the purchase of bonds when he was provincial treasurer. He is 49 years old, was born at Stratford, Ont., and has farmed most of his life. He was prominent in municipal affairs in Downie township, when he was elected U.F.O. member for South Perth, in the general provincial election of 1919. He was appointed provincial treasurer on Nov. 13, 1919, and in the election of 1923, he was defeated by 46 votes, by McCausland Irvine Conservative.

TORONTO, June 1. — Legal officers of the crown at Queen's Park state that there is a difference between releasing Peter Smith under a pardon or under a ticket of leave. A pardon would wipe out all the remaining sentence and nullify the $100,000 fine against the former provincial treasurer. Release under a ticket-of-leave will all depend upon the terms of the release. It is explained that a ticket-of-leave may only refer to the first three year sentence and not to the five years additional sentence if the fine is not paid. At the end of three years Peter Smith would still be in default if the $100,000 fine was not paid. The legal officers are waiting to know the terms of the ticket-of-leave to clear up this point.

HAPPY TO BE HOME.

Stratford, Ont., June 1.—(Canadian Press.)—Peter Smith, former Provincial Treasurer, who was released from penitentiary yesterday, arrived at his home, 66 Brittania street, from Kingston, at 8.40 o'clock last night, tired, but happy to be again in his home town and with his family. No ceremony heralded his coming and he was met at his home only by members of his family, friends evidently wishing not to disturb him.

Mr. Smith was accompanied on the homeward trip by Jack Grosch and R. A. Innes, both close friends of the Smith family. The trip, which was made in the former's car, was uneventful and practically no stops were made en route. Mr. Smith declined to make any comment last night. Mrs. Smith stated that he had enjoyed the trip and was quite well, though a little thinner.

NEW LIGHTING SAVES EFFORT

No Inside Cleaning Required By Powerful Lamps Now Installed.

ARCS DISPLACED.

The Utilities Commission is at present displacing half the magnetite are lamps in the city in favor of incandescent lamps. The lights are thousand candle-power series, 20 amp lamps with refractors, and rippled glass canopies as well as rippled glass globes. The work of changing the light is half-completed and the comparative costs of the two lamps are being carefully studied. It is expected that the new lamps will be more efficient and will involve less cost of upkeep. One of the chief defects of the old magnetite lamps arises from a brown dust which comes from the electrodes used in them, and which settles on the inside of the globes, thus necessitating inside cleaning. In the newer lamps this difficulty is eliminated as they require outside cleaning only.

COSMETICS RUIN THE COMPLEXION

Smoking and Drinking By Women Are Also Condemned at Convention.

EDUCATION URGED.

MONTREAL, Que., June 1. — (Canadian Press). — In an address given at the opening of the American Laryngological, Rhinological and Octological Society here yesterday before 161 ear, throat and nose specialists from all parts of Canada and the United States, who are attending the convention, Dr. Wolff Freudenthal, M.D., of New York City, told of the ravages wrought by excessive drinking of alcohols and the use of cosmetics, on the respiratory apparatus of young girls and women of to-day.

Smoking, Dr. Freudenthal said, accentuated the upper and lower air tract and also the throat, seriously. Excessive smoking was bad for men and women, but especially for women, because the linings of the throat and nose were so much more delicate than those of men.

Cosmetics were strongly condemned by the speaker, who said "they affect the nose and throat, irritating the membrances and may also cause 'vasomotor rhnitis' and asthma, because some of them are unadulterated."

"I have no good word for cosmetics," he continued. "They destroy the complexion of any woman and injure the membrane."

Alcohol in excess was bad for the throat and breathing apparatus, the speaker maintained, but he favored its use medicinally in certain cases.

"I consider alcohol in the wasting diseases, such as tuberculosis and diabetes, very helpful. It counteracts the waste of tissues."

Dr. Freudenthal denounced prohibition, saying among other things that "morals of young girls in the United States were being spoiled through prohibition." Formerly, he said, "a young girl never touched whiskey. Now she drinks with the boys."

"Prohibition is not preventing the ills of alcohol," he continued, "because you can get it if you have the money. The only way to prevent drunkenness is to educate the people. Prohibition in the United States has done no good—it has done harm and it is going to do more. Crime has increased, venereal diseases have not diminished, nor have diseases of the central nervous system."

"IT MAY BE LIFE—"

"Jack loves me well enough, I know,
But does he ever bite his lip,
And does he chew his cheek to show
That Passion's got him in a grip?
An' does his gun go pop-pop-pop
When fellers gets familiar? No.
He just says, 'Op it!' and they 'op—
It may be life, but ain't it slow?"
—A. P. Herbert.

HIS LIST!

Suppose that somebody handed you paper and pencil with a sign-on-the-dotted-line expression, and told you to list the things you liked best. That's what a reporter did to Arthur Tuckerman, novelist. He wrote—English hedgerows in May, coming into strange harbors at dawn, palm trees in moonlight, blondes in black crepe de chine, trout fishing, the sound of airplane motors, Conrad's novels, etchings, men's tennis doubles, and rafts to swim out to."

ANY WOMAN'S LIST.

Would probably include her first matinee, her first kiss, her first lover, her first pie or cake, her first baby's first smile, her first complete lingerie set, peach chiffon with real lace insets—rubbish! Not one of it true—that's just the list men would suppose it to be! What really? Not telling!

Any mere male who had once partook of French mushroom soup would lead his list with that. He might throw in the recipe for the joy of posterity. Simmer 3 pounds of knuckle of veal for 3 hours with an onion and small bunch of parsley. Strain and reheat. Cut fine half a pound fresh mushrooms and simmer 15 minutes. Beat together 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup of milk. Take soup from fire, add thickening and 1 tablespoon butter. Reheat, bring to boil and serve with cubes of fresh-buttered toast.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

WHAT THE TWINS SAW IN SHUT-EYE TOWN.

The Twins looked at all the queer people in Shut-Eye Town, going up and down and in and out, and here and yonder, willy nilly, the queerest way ever. They whisked by under their very noses or walked between them, or darted out unexpectedly from nowhere, disappearing just as suddenly into nothing.

The most amazing part of it all, however, was that nobody made a sound. With so much hustle and bustle and hurrying and pushing, you'd have expected it to sound like circus-day. The Twins must have showed how very odd they thought it was, for all at once a tall thin person with long arms like toll-gates, suddenly stretched out one of his arms in front of them and they had to stop.

"My name is Geewhillikins," said he in a solemn voice. "Why are you so surprised?"

"It's so very quiet," said Nick. "Nobody seems to make a sound. Do they all wear overshoes?"

"No," said Geewhillikins. "But our streets are made of rubber. Grade A Number One rubber that never wears out."

"Can't you ever stamp or make noise?" asked Nancy. "What do you do when you're cross?"

"Cross!" exclaimed Geewhillikins. "Cross! What does that mean? Is it anything like whooping cough? As for whooping cough, we have a wonderful invention. Silencers! You can't hear a thing."

"Say, Mister," said Nick suddenly, "we came to this place to look for a couple of friends, so we must be going, I guess. Thank you for telling us so much about everything."

But strange to say, Mister Geewhillikins turned slowly into a great green lobster with enormous whiskers and great green claws like nut-crackers. One of these nut-cracker claws he snapped rudely before Nick's nose, looking as though he should like to say something rude also.

But he backed hurriedly away without any further remark, and Nancy said indignantly, "I know why he did that. He didn't think his thumb would make enough noise if he snapped it, so he turned into a lobster just so he could have those horrible claws to snap."

"I shouldn't wonder," said Nick. "But, oh, Nancy, look at all those queer people!"

The Twins stood and watched the people of Shut-Eye Town go sliding by in their queer noiseless way.

First a lady as wide as a mattress and no higher than a shoe-scraper passed, leading a dog as long as a clothes-line and as thin as a clothes-pole.

Next came a man as high as a church steeple and so narrow he could have walked through a door crack. Without a word the man jumped on a six-legged horse which promptly leaped up on a house and went down the chimney.

The third person was no other than an enormous egg, who seemed to be able to bend quite easily in the middle, for he bowed this way and that to all his friends as he passed, constantly taking pinches of snuff and sneezing without any noise.

The fourth person stopped in front of the Twins and introduced himself. "I'm Upsidaisy," said he. "I'm first cousin to the Lowly Daisy, but I refused to be so humble and changed my name. Now you know why I wear a high silk hat, a pair of glasses on a string, and spats. Good-bye!" And away he went.

"Say, Nick," whispered Nancy. "I feel as though I was asleep."

"So do I," nodded Nick. "But I'm sure we're not."

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

A CALLER.

"I told Mamie about Buddy ordering two hundred dollars worth of handkerchiefs from me that morning and I confess I was a little envious as I saw the tender smile that wreathed her lips. I wondered why I had never loved anyone like that, when I wanted to so much.

"Buddy is going to send for Tortentio to come to Toronto and teach me. I am going to be his only pupil."

"Is Buddy also coming to Toronto to live?" I asked bluntly.

"No. He is going to stay in New York with his wife."

"Then he did tell me the truth," I said quite involuntarily. "He does intend to do that one decent thing."

Mamie didn't ask me what that decent thing was and I asked: "What are you going to do with your mother? What will you tell her?"

"I am going to tell her that I have found a music teacher who will pay me a living wage to be his secretary, and will teach me to sing for nothing, or rather will wait for his money until I am an opera singer.

"I am going to borrow twenty-five thousand dollars from Buddy, and I am going to bring home my little thirty dollars a week to mother. Then I am going to Pay Tortentio his regular price. Buddy and I have figured it out that this money will keep me with strict economy for three years. By that time I will know if I can really amount to anything as a singer.

"Oh, Judy, I am very, very happy," Mamie exclaimed as she burst into a torrent of tears.

"Tut, tut. What is your friend weeping about? If her eyes are as pretty as yours, my dear, it is very bad business to cloud them over with tears."

We—Mamie and —had been so taken up with ourselves that we never noticed there was anyone else in the room. When we heard this speech, however, Mamie began hurriedly to dry her tears, and I looked up to see Mr. Hathaway, Sr., at our table.

"This is the last place I expected to see you, Mr. Hathaway."

"Why, isn't it a good place?"

"Yes, but it isn't a stylish place, you know."

"Well, Miss Dean, I own this place and a chain of about twenty others in the city. I often go to one of them for luncheon. I like them better than the bigger places. How did you get along a Mortons today? Did you get your job?"

TOMORROW: "He Didn't Mean it."

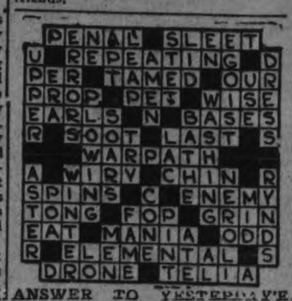
Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 2.

According to the strong influences from the most potent of planetary positions, this should be an unusually active and eventful day. Things long in a condition of stagnation should suddenly take on life and move into active situations which may possibly involve a change of environment. Events radical in their nature may transpire, but all undertakings should prove of decided advantage and substantial benefit. The predominant configurations urge bending the energies in the direction of cherished ambitions with assistance of friends and powerful interests assured.

Those whose birthday it is may look for an active and eventful year, with important change and many advantages, benefits from friends, and an assurance of ambitions fulfilled. Personal affairs also flourish and give pleasure. A child born on this day may be generous, kindly, accomplished and ambitious and should rise rapidly to excellent position in life through its own intelligent efforts and the assistance of powerful friends.



ANSWER TO YESTERDAY'S

UNITED CHURCH TO TAKE STOCK; MOVES FORWARD TO NEW TASKS AT GENERAL COUNCIL NEXT MONTH

Seven Women Are Among 454 Members of Council.

MANY PROBLEMS.

Mission and Financial Plans Are Ready For Discussion.

(Written for The Canadian Press by R. P. Stouffer.)

MONTREAL, Que., June 1. — One year of union finds the United Church of Canada looking toward the place where the duties of a constitutional convention as well as of a deliberative assembly await 454 commissioners to her General Council. Sederunts will be held in the American Church of Montreal, an institution known for generations as "the most Canadian church in Canada," the place of worship for a succession of the nation's honored builders and dreamers. In addition to the former American Presbyterian Church, the facilities of neighboring Emmanuel Congregational Church and of spacious St. James' Methodist Church are being made ready for special uses.

The time is June 10, the first anniversary of the day on which the representatives of three churches—Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational—met to realize their union and to celebrate its consummation; to subscribe to its basis and with prayer and prophecy hallow the deed; to receive the acclaim of the sister churches of many British lands, and, as the first corporate act, partake of the Holy Communion.

Face New Tasks.

This time the summons is to make survey of the first year of united life and to draw up forms within which the immense and potent organism may continue to function. For these onerous tasks the election of ex-Moderators of Assemblies and Synods, Conferences and Unions, has been effected by an intensely interested constituency, which recently assembled in 11 electoral colleges throughout Canada and in Newfoundland.

But first must come the evening hour at which the 447 men and seven women, equally divided between the ministry and the laity, will assemble as worshippers to sit again at their Lord's table. Rev. George C. Pidgeon, D.D., who within a period of 10 days last year was made Moderator of the General Assembly and also of the General Council, will be doubly called to lead in these exercises.

Then Rev. T. Albert Moore, D.D., Secretary of General Conferences of the Methodist Church and now of the General Council, will proceed to call the roll of the second General Council, albeit the first one regularly elected by the United Church.

Thereafter, for probably a fortnight of three sederunts a day, will follow detailed reports of enterprises "on which every hour the sun is waking" as the review follows the missions around the globe. There will be statistical records of a membership never yet completely made up and totals of an unexampled outpouring of wealth for maintenance and extension of the Kingdom of Christ. Meanwhile, the intangible and imponderable factors which have given impetus to an uninterrupted progression will be revealed in addresses and debates.

Office of Moderator.

The Moderator's account of his tour, which has been literally one "of all the churches" in every conference and in many presbyteries, will picture how ministers and people have faced unusual opportunities and problems. Visions of the church's mission in the world have been enlarging. New fellowships have fostered stronger loyalties. Unity has released evangelizing forces. These are the concerns which have engaged Dr. Pidgeon's attention and have healed many wounds.

Succession to the Moderatorship is no foregone conclusion, judging by experience. Great names, however, have been sent forward by the presbyteries and the outcome will interest the whole country.

The secretary, charged with the unexampled task of harmonizing the statistical methods of three churches, will report the total number of congregations which entered the United Church a year ago as 8,699. From the presbyteries he will have returns of the number of local amalgamations by which the total of units have been reduced. As offset, there will be the increases in charges founded by home missionaries in a year of extension in northern Ontario, on the prairies, and in British Columbia.

Difficulties raised by these successes in telling the Gospel in newer areas of settlement will demand much more time than would the piling up and recital of gratifying totals of membership and population. The Council, judging by local preparations and its agenda, will be for business and not congratulations or recriminations. Its issues will be national and world-wide in scope.

Foreign Questions.

What of conditions in the swiftly changing Oriental fields of this Canadian church? There will be no reports of aggrandisement, for the policy inherited from the uniting churches is one of building up native churches on the ground, but it will be noted that the field force of 655 foreign missionaries which the three churches had at June 10, 1925, is practically intact. Six non-concurring missionaries with their wives, and two single women, have continued their work on their old fields and in changed relationships with their colleagues and the native church.

Passionate devotion to historic mission work has played no small part in the record-breaking financial returns of the Maintenance and Extension Fund in the period ending March 31, and this will raise the problem of relationships with the authorities of the non-concurring congregations in carrying on Presbyterian foreign missions. During the 12 months one field, Gwalior, in India, has been handed over by the United Church to the Continuing Presbyterians, for the reason that a considerable number of its staff of missionaries voted out of union.

With Honan, Central India, Korea, British Guiana, and other missions practically unanimous for union, the joint search for the best method of sharing the work has been difficult and its results may require the careful consideration of Council. Congregationalist and Methodist foreign missions, bulking slightly over one-half of the work in the eight countries served by the United Church, have come into union without a dissentient. The desire to prevent any juggling of missionaries' careers by the secular arm has actuated all parties in the churches that are in negotiation.

Canadian Problems.

The home mission problem facing the commissioners is rather one of support and extension, for 2,316 of the 2,566 aid-receiving congregations of the Presbyterian Church in Canada are said to have entered Union. With Congregationalist and Methodist missions added, and with the congregations grouped into pastoral charges, there are 1,407 missions of the United Church serving 3,692 Canadian communities.

With many fields unmanned, home missionaries entering Union numbered 1,175 and there have been besides many transfers of ministers from Eastern Canada in recent months to swell this total. In addition, the home mission secretaries, Rev. Drs. Gunn, Manning and Edmison, will report 312 college students as having proceeded to home fields in recent weeks.

Will these colorless figures exhaust the national enterprises of such a church? Hardly, for all the historic undertakings built up in remote places and for varied nationalities and industrial groups, during a century of separate denominational life, will be made known. For example, amalgamation of the Presbyterian Loggers' Mission with the Methodist "Crosby Marine Mission" of the Pacific Coast will be recorded. Policy for hospitals, social settlements and school homes that have followed the wave of European immigration to Western Canada will require unification. Ideals of nine rescue homes from the Maritimes westward have to be translated at this time into a common policy, not necessarily uniform but certainly complementary.

Primarily, if advance reports from spheres of work are given weight, this will be an assembly which will devise machinery in relation to results to be obtained and will perforce treat of the United Church of Canada as, in the street's phrase, "a going concern." Stewart of West China, MacVicar of Honan, Steed of West Africa, and their colleagues from many a home field will thrust forward the appeals of great continents and peoples. The presence of A. B. Baird and Clarence MacKinnon and George J. Trueman, the only lay head of a university, will prevent any neglect of education, any exalting of institutions above students.

McLachlan and Dobson can be counted on to keep clear the principles of social justice for which the churches have stood and which the last General Council reaffirmed but did not amplify. Mention alone of youth's armies in the schools and the clubs and of the millions of pages of literature provided will keep religious, education and publishing interests forward.

Commemorative editions of a special character will emphasize the value of journalism in the church as represented by The New Outlook and The Record and Missionary Review.

Special committees that have been at work on matters outside the scope of departments will present material on public worship and kindred interests.

Simpler Financing.

Pastors' movements in favor of simplification of money-raising machinery in the interests of these great causes are already bearing fruit in the schemes to be presented on behalf of four commissions which in protracted sessions have been studying organization for administrative, informational and treasury programmes.

Secretaries of the Maintenance and Extension Fund will report that already the tangible results of the first year's financing have silenced prophets of gloom. In deep gratitude, speaking for a foreign mission board, Principal Gandier will be able to characterize the cash receipts of the first year under union as having far surpassed the aggregate of the best previous year in the separated churches.

A financial revolution, by which the Wesleyan plan of financing by special appeals has been replaced by the budget system, will be described and its success noted.

CAR OVERTURNS ONE MAN DYING

Three Other Passengers Injured in Automobile Accident.

NEAR STRATHROY.

STRATHROY, Ont., June 1. — (Canadian Press.)— A. A. Snyder, of Flint, Mich., is in a local hospital very seriously injured and near death. Mrs. J. M. Clark, of Flint, is also in the hospital seriously injured, but with every hope of recovery, as the result of a motor accident at Hickory Corners yesterday afternoon. J. H. Clark and Miss Clark, who were occupants of the car, suffered slight injuries, the latter being cut by glass.

The party was returning to the border after spending the week end touring in Western Ontario. Mr. Clark lost control of the car in some unexplained manner and it went into a ditch, turning turtle and pinning

FROLIC OF THE FROGS.

As we sat in the dark opera house, listening to the organ, and waiting for the main picture to come on, we saw a comical little reel which is worth telling about.

To start with, there was a lovely lagoon, showing reeds and water and frogs in the distance, and something floating out there on the water. Then there was a close-up of the floating object. It was a flat piece of wood, probably a bit of a soap box, and it looked tempting.

Presently, on this wooden and water soaked island appeared a frolicsome frog. It was a he frog, for it had a dirty neck or throat, whereas, I am told that lady frogs nearly all have lovely white throats. It must have been a he, for it was so chesty, with its windbox puffed out like a young Caruso, blibbering and blabbering, as vain singers do.

Anyway, there he sat on the wooden island, blib-blib-blibbering.

The sun was very bright, and must have been hot, thus making the singing of this warbling reptile a dry sort of business, for Mr. Pufthroat Frog would swish his balloon bag-pipes in the water, to keep them either cool or moist. He would hop to the edge of the board, lift his throat in song, give a croaky, off-key note, stop in the middle of it to clear his vocal chords for another try, then lean over and wet his air drum in the water, in order to lubricate the tone a little, then the song would go on.

Mr. Pufthroat Frog had just wet his windbox, and started again, when up came another frog. This fellow climbed onto the board, for all the world like a boy climbing a fence, he got an elbow over the edge, then pulled up one knee, and so on.

Then Mr. Climber Frog faced Mr. Pufthroat Frog, and they both started to blibber in competition. When one wet his whistle, the other did so. It was quite a nice duet, until a Kingfisher laughed and flew low over the pond, aiming right at the board, over which he swooped in a rush of air and wings.

There was a comical gulping of throats and the two frogs deciding to depart in haste before the oncoming Kindfisher, plunged songs and all into the pond, "Blibber-blib-blib!"

Then along came a nature-lover, looking for trouble.

He noticed a frog singing on the end of a log. It was the sort of log that looks grounded on the bottom, but just naturally "aint."

He started to work and feel his way out on the log, to have a close-up view of the frogland bagpipes in operation, but the frog left the log, and the log sank in the bog! and there was silence in Frogland, but an awful uproar in the audience.

of $3,400,000 for the year 1926-27 will be scrutinized in committee and debated in a notable sederunt as summing up in concrete form the church's programme of extension.

Three Main Ideals.

What are the emerging characteristics of the church soon to be in conclave and to which Canada has so recently given birth? From answers to such a question it is possible to estimate the potentialities inhering in her General Council.

1. This is a United Church. Her 8,699 congregations are inextricably interwoven. Her 11 conferences are speaking in memorials and overtures—call them what you will. Her 112 presbyteries are initiating, mediating, ruling. From these her General Council is deriving popular impulse and trained leadership.

2. This is a uniting church. On the foreign field she is in communion with the indigenous United Churches and through them reaches back into other lands where disunion rules. Her ambassadors are to report at Council of embassies graciously received in the supreme courts of the mother churches and sister communions in the Old Land and in the United States.

3. This is a continuing church. Maintaining the principles and enterprises of the churches whose traditions, workers and equipment she has carried over, she may yet vindicate her purpose to be both a united and a uniting church.

In making good these claims of her dreamers and her builders and in solving the varied and unique problems which they entail, the approaching General Council will doubtless bear a crucial responsibility.

Newfoundland Lady Found Relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. L. Best Had Suffered From the Age of Ten Years From Bladder Trouble.

SOUTHERN HARBOR, Nfld., May 31.—(Special).— Once again Dodd's Kidney Pills have proved their inestimable value to suffering women. Mrs. L. Best of this place suffered with bladder trouble since she was a child. She writes: "I have had bladder trouble since I was ten years of age. I was treated by doctors until I was thirty and got only better for a short time. My husband told me how Dodd's Kidney Pills had relieved him so I bought five boxes. I am better now."

It is on account of the good work that Dodd's Kidney Pills do that they occupy such a prominent place in the family medicine chest. So many of the ordinary every-day ills come from sick kidneys. Rheumatism, bladder and urinary trouble, backaches, diabetes and heart disease can be traced directly or indirectly to sick kidneys.

To be assured of real good health keep the kidneys sound by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.—(Advt.)

AUSTRALIANS DISMISSED FOR 489 RUNS WHILE MIDDLESEX HAD 233 RUNS FOR SIX WICKETS

15,000 Spectators Witness Game—Feature Was Collapse of Australian 'Tail.'

LIGHTNING WICKET.

Second Largest Score Made By Visitors in Present Tour.

LONDON, June 1. Canadian Press. — The second day's play in the match between the visiting Australian cricketers and Middlesex was witnessed at Lord's yesterday by 15,000 spectators who saw the Australians dismissed for a total of 489 runs, while Middlesex taking the bat had driven out 233 runs for six wickets when the game was adjourned until to-day.

This was the second largest score made by the Antipodeans in their present tour, their highest figure of 583 for nine wickets against Essex at Leyton, not having been exceeded. Contributing largely to their present total were T. J. E. Andrews, H. L. Collins, the Australian skipper, and C. J. Macartney. The combined total of their scores was slightly over two thirds of the entire result obtained by the tourists.

The outstanding feature of the game was the collapse of the Australian "tail," Grimmett and Everett being dismissed with zeros and oldfield returning to the pavilion with four. Considerable damage was done by G. O. Allen, who, bowling for Middlesex secured the average of five wickets for 63 runs.

From the English point of view the day's play was encouraging and tended to lay the bogey of Australian invincibility.

The weather was fine and warm, and the wicket good. Allen's delivery was magnificent, the ball coming off the pitch like lightning. (His last four wickets, all bowled, cost only eight runs.)

Andrews and Taylor resumed for the Australians in the forenoon. Saturday's play had seen the visitors with four wickets down at 357, with Andrew's holding his ground at 120 and Taylor at 1 run.

Andrews played dazzling cricket. He and Taylor continued to force the score upwards until Hendren caught the latter off Durston at 14. Ryder followed and again the game settled down into a run-getting contest, but Ryder fell to Allen at 22. The next man up was Gregory.

Again the spectators were treated to some beautiful play with Andrews punctuating his smaller totals with occasional fours. But Andrews was unable to outlast the innings and his citadel fell when G. T. S. Stevens caught him off Allen.

With Andrews vanished the Australian stand, for Oldfield, Grimmett and Everett simply paraded to the wicket and returned to the club house. Only four runs came from their batting, although Gregory manfully tried to raise his total. The Australians' innings fell with Gregory not out at 45.

The feature of the Australian tour at bat was the fact that Andrews batted for three hours and fifteen minutes and in that time had hit out 22 fours.

Middlesex began with G. T. S. Stevens and Lee and the latter's wicket fell to Gregory's bowling when the board registered 28 runs. Thereafter Stevens and Hearne played a splendid partnership. Hearne drove heavily and found both Gregory and Everett for many runs. His partnership with Stevens lasted an hour and three quarters in which time he had rung up five fours but his wicket crashed eventually when he tried to turn a ball to the leg.

Hendren, Bruce, Allen and Mann all continued to keep Stevens' citadel intact. Stevens' batting was not brilliant but it was steady and sure. He continued until the close of play, having so far batted for three hours and 50 minutes. Eight fours are included in the overnight total of 114.

Among the others to go to bat are Nigel Haig, A. R. Tanner and Durston.

Motor Classic at Indianapolis Cut Short Because of Rain.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 1 (Canadian Press) — A youthful driving daredevil from Los Angeles won $40,000 and the speed crown of the racing world on the Indianapolis motor speedway yesterday.

Frank Lockhart 23 years old driving his first major race, piloted his little white racer to victory in the motor classic cut to 400 miles because of a downpour of rain.

The event, scheduled for 500 miles, was ended when rain-laden clouds suddenly gathered and let loose a deluge that soaked the track making any further attempt to continue too perilous.

As the flying racers were flagged into the pits, the rain came down in torrents, soaking thousands of spectators to the skin. d

PITTSBURGH, June 1 (Canadian Press).—Cincinnati and Pittsburgh divided the Memorial Day double bill here yesterday, the Reds taking the morning game, 7 to 2, and the Pirates the afternoon contest, 9 to 5.

The visitors bunched hits in the fifth and ninth innings of the morning contest, while Mays kept the local hits well scattered. Seven two-base hits featured the contest.

Timely hitting enabled the champions to win in the afternoon. Lucas who started for the Reds, was driven from the mound, and Rixey relieved him. Morrison was never in danger. The score:

Soon after the start of the supplemental session, Toronto jumped to the fore with a neat goal by Glass, who snared a pass from behind while in full flight in front of the Crescent cage. With ten seconds to go, Herb Scott netted the ball to leave the teams deadlocked.

FIVE RUN LEAD IS NOT ENOUGH FOR WESTCLOX

Woollens, Behind 5-0, Score Six Runs To Win Out 6-5.

MERCANTILE LEAGUE.

Close Game Played at Riverside Park—Losers Weak at Willow.

After being spotted a lead of five runs in the first four innings, the Western Clock Company baseball team tossed away the advantage, loosening up enough to give the Canadian Woollens six runs and a victory. The game was played at James Stevenson park last night, and was the second game of the Mercantile League schedule.

The fourth and fifth were the fatal innings. Seven hits and four errors were enough for the winners to compile six runs, while Art Armstrong, who had been, up till then going rather badly, tightened up and held the clock makers scoreless. The Woollens' fielders also tightened up at this stage and gave their hurler some real support.

On the whole the fielding of both teams was snappy. The infielders made a number of hard stops while some good catches were pulled off by the outfielders, Harvey Smith's running catch on Barrie being a feature. What errors were made, however, came at critical places.

With the willow the winners far outclassed their opponents, ten hits to five being the margin. The losers took good advantage, however, of six walks given by Armstrong, some of the charity customers reaching the counting station. Mahood, with three hits in four tries, A. Smith with two in three, and Dundas with two in four, were the leading batsmen.

The losers started the scoring in the first. Foley was walked, went to second on a wild pitch, and scored on Masterson's single to right. Delahaye forced Masterson and Kitchen struck out.

Four were added in the fourth. With one out Lundy singled and Jones doubled. They held their bases while Curry struck out. Smith dropped Mahood's throw on Wood's roller, and Lundy scored. Barrie struck out, swinging at a low ball, which Vinette took on the bounce. The catcher tossed high to first and Jones scored. Barrie stole second. Woods took a lead off third and Vinette threw into left field, allowing both runners to score. Foley and Masterson walked, and Foley was thrown out at the plate by Yeamen, trying to score on Delahaye's single to right.

In their half of the fourth the winner started Montgomery and Dundas led off with singles. Vinette struck out, but A. Smith sent Montgomery across with a single. He took second on the throw to the plate. Armstrong hit to Masterson, who threw out Dundas at the plate. Hillier's Texas Leaguer took a bad hop in front of Kitchen and went for two bases, sending in Smith and Armstrong. Mahood singled into left to score Hillier. Lundy messed up H. Smith's roller but Yeamen struck out.

The tieing and winning runs came across in the fifth. Montgomery was safe on Jones' error and scored on Dundas' double. The latter went out, Foley to Barrie to Lundy, trying to take three. Kitchen dropped Vinette's fly, the batter taking second. A Smith hit a hot one which Jones knocked down but failed to hold. Vinette didn't hesitate at third, drawing a bad throw to the plate from Jones, and the game was won. Armstrong struck out and Hillier lifted a high one back of first which Masterson took neatly.

In the sixth and seventh the losers had men on bases, Barrie reaching third with two out in the sixth, while there were two men on with none out in the seventh, but Armstrong tightened up in the pinches. The winners had three men on the sixth but Woods struck out two and Vinette forced Yeaman.

WHITEHOUSE IS AGAIN A WINNER IN PRO. LEAGUE

Peterboro Southpaw Wins His Second Start With Grand Rapids.

MAKES TWO HITS.

And Beats Pitcher Who Had Won His First Two League Games.

Frankie Whitehouse has won his second straight victory with the Grand Rapids team. The Grand Rapids Herald says: "Leo Grazer, a stocky built Hoosier from Elkhart, playing his second game in Grand Rapids uniform divided honours with Lefty Whitehouse in a 3 to 2 victory for the Black Sox over the Ludington Tars in 10 innings of a highly entertaining contest yesterday afternoon at Ramona Athletic Park. Feretti, who pitched the Tars to two victories in the first week of league play was on the firing line for Ludington and suffered his first defeat of the season. Whitehouse got himself into a number of bad holes and pitched himself out of all but two of them aided by sensational support, although one of the Ludington runs was scored on an error by Runser."

The box score shows that Whitehouse allowed Ludington eight hits, fanned six and had two singles and a sacrifice in four trips to the plate.

TOWN BOYS WIN SOFTBALL GAME

St. Andrew's S.S. Team Defeats Burnbrae School Team.

SCORE 27-26.

BURNBRAE, June 1.—An interesting and well-contested game of softball was played at S.S. No. 1, Burnbrae, on Friday afternoon at 4.30 when a team of boys from St. Andrew's, Campbellford, Sabbath school met the boys from the local school in a nine inning game that was as full of thrills as any world series contest. The Campbellford boys pulled out a lucky win by the close score of 27 to 26. A ninth inning rally which nettted them eight runs turned the tide in their favor after being apparently well-beaten. The visitors had among their number Owen Hendy and Don Dalgleish, two experienced young sportsmen, and their experience stood them in good stead during the final rally. The local boys were handicapped by the absence of some of their older teammates and one or two smaller, inexperienced boys were put in, weakening the team both at bat and in the field. The No. 1 boys were well-coached by their efficient teacher, Earl Fairman, who has reason to be proud of the perfomance of his young team.

Mr. Allan Watson provided the conveyance for the town boys and acted as official scorer. Mr. Everett Fairman of S.S. No. 2 was chief umpire and gave universal satisfaction.

Diamond Disputes Decided
by BILLY EVANS

Runner on third tries to steal home. Catcher has ball in time to retire him but batter so confuses him he misses runner. What is proper decision?

There are two possible decisions, according to how many are out, provided the umpire rules there was interference, which seems apparent.

With less than two out the runner from third is called out, this being the severest possible penalty, erasing the run.

With two out, the batsman is merely called out and the run, of course, not allowed.

HELPFUL HINTS TO GOLFING STARS

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH GOLFERS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO

JIMMY OCKENDEN—ART OF RECOVERY.

Sometime one is unlucky enough to find one's ball in an almost impossible lie. It may, for example, be tucked up under the near side of a perpendicular bank, or it may be lying near some obstacle in such a position as prevents the player from making a proper swing at the ball. What is one to do under such circumstances as these?

In the first place I advise the player to go over the situation very carefully. Do not be in a hurry to take action. Survey the ground in front, at the side of, and behind the ball. By doing so you may be able to find an unsuspected way out of the difficulty.

If you cannot see a straightforward chance of recovery, there is only one thing left; accept the situation calmly and go out for the recovery that appears to be the least perilous.

If you make a sadness of the hole, try to obliterate its memory before you take your next tee shot—difficult advice, but the best I have to offer.

(Copyright, 1926.)

SECRETS of STARS on INSIDE BASEBALL

as told to BILLY EVANS

HORNSBY

BY ROGERS HORNSBY.

Outsmarting the opposition is the keynote of every good ball club. The smart clubs always get farther than the dumb ones.

Baseball places a distinct premium on brains. The player who hopes to reach stardom must constantly be matching his wits against the opposition and, incidentally, must get the decision in a majority of the cases.

Proper playing of second base is like any other part of the game—you must study the situation in front of you.

Mere mechanical play around second base won't get you very far. Playing all batters and runners in the same manner means failure. The smart batters and the wise base-runners will make life miserable for an— infielder whom they can outsmart. They are quick to perceive any advantage and never fail to profit by it.

The second baseman must have an inside working knowledge of every opposing batter that steps to the plate. He also knows that every pitcher is going to pitch to the weakness of each batter that faces him. Knowing these things, he can position himself accordingly.

It is a baseball truth that some novice is far more liable to put a play over on W infielder than an experienced veteran, simply because neither fielder, pitcher or catcher are familiar with the strength or weakness of the batsman or runner. However it doesn't take long to learn these things.

That explains how some player, new to the majors, gets away to a flying start only to falter and be eased out of the picture just when fandom is about ready to receive the recruit into stardom.

Baseball is a survival of the fittest. The weakness of every player soon becomes general knowledge, common gossip, and the athlete suffers as a result.

DR. J. I. ROBINSON MAKES RECORD FISH CATCH.

To Dr. John I. Robinson, 596 Watchung Road, Bound Brook, N. J., U.S.A., a guest at Wab-Kon Camp Temagami, falls the proud honor of making the record fish catch for 1925. The story is so good we will let the Doctor tell it in his own words:

"On July 27th we set out. On the third day as we trolled near Sandy Inlet my reel suddenly began to sing and the tackle nearly went overboard. I thought I had caught on the rocks. . . but the canoe was already moving backward at a lively rate. I let the fish have his way for about half an hour. . then we got down to business.

"After what seemed a day he broke water. . . my guide's eyes bulged. His teeth began to chatter and he absolutley refused to attempt to land such a fish in a canoe. So we headed for shore, . . soon we were wading and had my fish where we could get him by his gills and heave him ashore. Then only did I realize that I had caught the king of hordes of fish in Lake Temagami. He measured 46 inches and weighed 42 pounds 2 ounces."

Fishing is but one of the vacation enjoyments in Temagami. It has everything that any vacationist could desire, including excellent hotels, cottage colonies, cabins and tents.

A very close softball game was played last night between the Triple Link and the Firemen, the former winning the game by the score of 9 to 6. The Firemen led in the first innings but the other teams tied the score in the second innings, and then no runs were scored until the fifth innings when the winners managed to get one run ahead. They did the same thing in the sixth and seventh and there was no scoring in the last two innings, showing a very close game of softball. The winners scored 17 hits to the losers' 8.

The line-up and score:

Triple Link: Pacey p; Fair c; Munro 1b; Ackford 2b; Miller 3b; Butcher ss; McIntyre rf; Long cf; Long cf; Crowe lf.

ALL STARS HAVE GOOD PRACTICE

East City Team Has Plenty of Good Material.

WORKOUT TO-NIGHT.

The East City All Stars held their opening workout last night as announced. Though late in getting underway, the Stars bid fair to become a promising crew. The turnouts were in fine shape, though some were stiff from softball. There were several southpaw pitchers out. Apparently the All Stars have gained accession to some good hitting material, and the arrival of a good right-handed pitcher and a backstop would set the team in working order.

The All Stars will practice tonight (weather permitting) at the Sacred Heart grounds, at 6.30. This gives the players over the river a chance to be fully represented.

GREATEST NAVAL BATTLE RAGED OVER GHOST SHIP IN NORTH SEA JUST TEN YEARS AGO YESTERDAY

Jutland Combat Ended at Midnight When German Raced Home.

CONTROVERSY WAGED

Anniversary Finds British View Misty—Jellicoe and Beatty Blamed.

By Clair Price.

TEN years ago yesterday, at a point in the North Sea about one hundred miles off the Jutland coast of Denmark, a neutral cargo steamer was simultaneously sighted by the British light cruiser Galatea, eight miles away to the west and by the German light cruiser Elbing, eleven miles to the east. That was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The Galatea closed to examine the neutral and the Elbing detached two destroyers on the same duty.

About 2:20 the Galatea and the two destroyers sighted each other and immediately told their flagships, which were out of sight below the horizon, that enemy vessels were at hand. Ten minutes later the Galatea opened fire on the two destroyers, and the Elbing, closing to support them, opened fire on the Galatea. So began the greatest naval battle of all history.

For the next hundred years naval historians will continue to study the battle of Jutland. Today, on the day after its tenth anniversary, we are still too close to see it in an adequate perspective. Both Commanders-in-Chief, Admiral Jellico and Admiral Scheer, are still with us; both have been retired from active service. One is living at Ventnor, on the Isle of Wight, the other at Weimar, in Germany.

Both the cruiser commanders, Admiral Beatty and Admiral Hipper, are still alive, too. The former is First Sea Lord at the Admiralty in London, while the latter is on the retired list in Germany.

Controversy Rages.

The tenth anniversary find the Germans speaking of Jutland as a "great naval victory." It finds the British view of Jutland still misty with controversy. To our lay minds, little interest attaches to the quarrels within the British Admiralty over the official story of what happened.

Jellicoe is in the last degree untheatrical. Ten years ago he impressed himself upon the minds of his countrymen only by reason of the great command he held and the ripe experience he brought to it. Beatty has always made an imcomparably greater popular appeal. He was a fox-hunting, polo-playing Admiral in the very tilt of whose naval cap his country saw evidence that another Nelson had come to the navy. These are reactions of the average lay mind.

To naval officers, the two men compared in an entirely different fashion. Jellicoe was a naval officer of vastly more experience than Beatty. His record was one of years of work with gunnery, torpedoes, submarines, signals, tactics, manoeuvres, winds, tides and fogs. Beatty, on the other hand, had had comparatively little sea experience as a commissioned officer and still less as an Admiral. At the battle of Jutland he was a junior Admiral, commanding the battle cruisers. His relation to his Commander-in-Chief was that of a cavalry commander to the Commander-in-Chief of an expeditionary force. It was Jellicoe, and not Beatty, who commanded the Grand Fleet at Jutland.

What the Germans Hoped.

We know now that the German plan, which culminated in the battle of Jutland, was to lure the Grand Fleet out into a submarine trap by showing the German Fleet off the Norwegian Coast. We know that the Admiralty in London had learned that something was afoot. The Grand Fleet put to sea late in the evening of May 30, to rendezvous at 2 o'clock the next afternoon at a point 100 miles off the Jutland coast of Denmark. We know, too, that the High Sea Fleet left Wilhelmshaven about 2 o'clock on the morning of May 31 to move up the Jutland coast with orders to show itself off the southern tip of Norway, in the evening.

Dawn on May 31, accordingly, found the two most powerful fleets in the world zig-zagging on converging courses in the North Sea—the Grand Fleet moving west to rendezvous off the Jutland coast, the High Sea Fleet moving north through the swept channel that led inside Amrum Bank and opened out to clear Horns Reef, and thus making the open sea off the Jutland coast.

As early as 6 a.m., Scheer knew, from the reports of his submarines, that the British were out, but his information was too scrappy to be of use, and five airships, sent up along toward noon to locate them, found the visibility poor and saw nothing. On the other hand, Jellicoe had no information that the Germans were out in force. In fact, an Admiralty signal at noon told him that Scheer's flagship was at Wilhelmshaven as late as 11:10 a.m.—a complete error.

It may be of interest to interpolate here a comparison of the numerical strengths of the two fleets:—

	Grand Fleet	High Sea Fleet
Battleships	28	22
Battle cruisers	9	5
Armored cruisers	8	....
Light cruisers	33	11
Destroyers	80	71
Seaplane carriers	1	....
Mine layers	1	—

It was the accident of the neutral cargo boat—simultaneously sighted about 2 p.m. by the Galatea on one side and by the Elbing on the other—that brought the tips of Beatty's and Hipper's far-flung cruiser screens into contact. Jellicoe, with the main body of the Grand Fleet, was then sixty-five miles to the north. Scheer, with the main body of the High Sea Fleet, was fifty-five miles to the south. The field over which the battle subsequently developed was enormous. Before night fell it had covered something like 20,000 square miles of sea, an area about half as large as the State of New York.

Beatty at once sent up a seaplane to discover what support the enemy had, but it developed engine trouble and had to come down. Each side remained in ignorance of the other's strength, though Hipper presently made out the tops of Beatty's masts, rushing to the support of his light craft, and the sight put an immediate end to the original German plan. Hipper turned at once to retire at full speed, and Beatty, when he finally sighted Hipper's battle cruisers fourteen miles away, changed his course and raced to cut them off from Horns Reef and throw them back on Jellicoe, who was hurrying down from the north.

Closing to a range of a little more than 15,000 yards (something under nine land miles), Beatty and Hipper opened fire simultaneously at 3:50 o'clock, and for the next fifty minutes both battle cruiser fleets raced south on roughly parallel courses through forests of dank-smelling water spouts, their turrets rippling with red gouts of flame. A large bark under all sail lay becalmed between the lines like a ghost-ship out of the past, as this opening phase of the greatest naval battle in all history began.

The points under dispute in the Jellicoe-Beatty controversy begin with the very beginning of the battle. The partisans of Admiral Jellicoe say that Beatty's cruising formation was too wide to allow him to form in line of battle in the shortest possible time and that, instead of closing the four battleships that were attached to his command, he raced away with his cruisers, leaving his battleships far astern. Thus they say that Beatty's impulsiveness led him to sacrifice the chance of annihilating Hipper's battle cruisers, and that the poor gunnery of his own battle cruisers, for which Beatty is also blamed, turned what might have been a brilliant success into an expensive defeat.

Death-Dealing Hits.

With the merits of the controversy no layman can deal. The facts, however, are plain. Beatty's flagship, the Lion, was hit almost at once, and was saved from blowing up only by the flooding of a magazine—an act that won a posthumous V.C. for a turret officer. At 4:10 the Indefatigable's stern was blown almost off by an interior explosion and she dropped out of line in a sinking condition. Another hit touched off another explosion forward. After that she turned over and disappeared.

At 4:25 the Queen Mary disappeared in a dazzling red flash and gigantic pall of smoke that shot up 1,000 feet into the air. There followed a dreadful rain of debris, through which the Tiger and New Zealand raced by. In the tremendous roar and crash the Queen Mary's end was barely audible.

On the German side the Seydlitz was torpedoed during the destroyer action that developed between the lines toward the end of this phase, but this ship was able to remain in action.

Wherever the blame may belong, there is no disputing the fact that the four battleships attached to Beatty's command were half an hour late in getting into this battle cruiser phase and that Beatty was very badly mauled before it was ended.

Soon after 4:30 one of Beatty's light cruisers flashed the signal, "Battleships southeast." This instantly changed the complexion of the encounter. Beatty's fight with Hipper lost its importance and Beatty's position became that of a commander of scouts. Jellicoe's friends say that from the moment the main body of the High Sea Fleet was sighted it became Beatty's duty to keep his Commander-in-Chief informed of the enemy's position. Such, they say, is the duty for which battle cruisers were designed.

Loses Sight of the Enemy.

What actually happened, Jellicoe's friends say, was that Beatty very properly turned and ran north, but that again he practically ignored the existence of his four battleships, giving his Commander-in-Chief no information. By 5 o'clock he had lost sight of the High Sea Fleet.

From 5:10 to 5:40 events rushed in silence toward their tremendous climax.

Then Beatty's screen of light cr Beatty himself rounded on Hipper, reopening fire at 14,000 yards after some trouble in sighting his enemy through the mist. So low was the visibility by this time that the battle cruiser Invincible and the armored cruiser Defence, rushing to Beatty's support, blundered into the main body of the High Sea Fleet and were sunk. Both exploded in huge red flashes.

It was a little after 6 o'clock when Jellicoe arrived with the main body of the Grand Fleet, and it is at this point that Jellicoe's friends make their most serious charges against Beatty's conduct.

Jellicoe's position at the moment was, briefly this: His battle fleet was in cruising formation, and to go into action it would have to be straightened out into a line of battle formation. In order that it might be straightened out with the least possible loss of time it was necessary for him to know exactly where the High Sea Fleet was. There was not a moment to lose. But beyond a few miles everything was wrapped in mist.

According to Volume III of Sir Julian Corbett's official history of the war at sea, Jellicoe asked Beatty, at 6:01 o'clock: "Where is the enemy's battle fleet?" At 6:06 o'clock Beatty answered, "Enemy's battle cruisers bearing S.E.," a reply for which Jellicoe had not asked.

At 6:09 Jellico again asked: "Where is the enemy's fleet?" No reply came until 6:14, when Beatty answered: "Have sighted enemy's battle fleet S.S.W."

Jellicoe's friends say that in losing contact with the High Sea Fleet during the run north and in keeping his Commander-in-Chief waiting at the most critical moment of the battle until the High Sea Fleet happened to steam into sight Beatty failed to perform the elementary duty of a battle cruiser commander.

Decisions at Long Range.

Beatty's friends continue their side of the controversy by saying that as soon as the High Sea Fleet turned away, Jellicoe should have chased it instead of merely altering course so as to place the Grand Fleet between the enemy and Horns Reef. To this Jellicoes riends reply that the High Sea Fleet was as fast as the Grand Fleet, and that if Jellicoe had attempted a chase his enemy would have gone straight back to Horns Reef and home.

What happened, however, was that Jellicoe was uncertain what the enemy intended.

It was 6:15 when Jellicoe arrived and 6:35 when Scheer turned and ran. At 6:55 Scheer turned back, probably with the idea of crossing Jellicoe's stern and regaining the road to Horns Reef. In this, however, he was badly fooled, for he ran straight into Jellicoe and had to send his battle cruisers and destroyers on a covering attack, which proved to be a veritable "death ride," while he extricated his battle fleet with all possible speed.

It was 7:20 before the battle fleet was again lost in the mist and the battle cruisers and destroyers were recalled; but before the recall signal went up the Lutzow, Hipper's flagship, was ablaze, fore and aft, and the Derfflinger, blinded by the Lutzow's smoke, was a shambles. Three separate torpedo attacks on Jellicoe's battle fleet had been made by the German destroyers, and Jellicoe had turned his fleet away, first twenty-two points, then another twenty-two points, losing, for the time being, 1,750 yards in range. This action on Jellicoe's part has also been severely criticized by Beatty's friends.

Lost Again in the Mist.

A half-hour later, at 7:50, Beatty sent a signal to his Commanddr-in-Chief that has attracted more attention from civilians than it has from naval officers. "Submit van of battleships follow battle cruisers," he said. "We can then cut off whole of enemy's battleships." Jellicoe received it at 8:04, and at 8:07 he signaled his van to follow Beatty. But the enemy fleet was presently lost in the mist. Jellicoe's friends say that it is difficult to understand the message, for the High Sea Fleet at that moment was already cut off from its road home and there was nothing else from which to cut it off.

For the layman the battle of Jutland ends there. Except for a brief period of ten minutes the battle fleets did not meet again.

In a sense Jutland may be defined as the battle that never occurred. We know now that Scheer crossed Jellicoe's stern along toward midnight and was off Horns Reef by 3 o'clock in the morning. With two great fleets rushing through the night in absolute darkness anything could have happened. What actually did happen was nothing more than a series of destroyer actions, as the High Sea Fleet raced for home across the Grand Fleet's stern.

INSPECTION OF CADETS FRIDAY

Final Preparations For Annual Event Are Well in Hand.

AT CENTRAL PARK.

The stage is all set for the annual review and inspection of the Peterborough Public School Cadet Battalion, which will be held before Colonel S. H. Hill, Director of Cadet Services of Canada, in Central Park, on Friday, June 4, at 2.45 p.m.

Owing to the efficiency of this battalion, it has this year been possible to modify the training from a drill standpoint and concentrate more on the physical training work, which is more along the lines as called for in the Cadet movement. The procedure of Cadet training now being carried out in Peterboro and elsewhere covers one half hour period per week from September 15 to November 1, and from April 1 until inspection, with a small amount of extra work just before and in preparation for the inspection The winter months are devoted to indoor miniature rifle practice under qualified musketry instructors This training is so arranged, though taken in school hours, that it does not interefere with the regular studies The time used is that which is called for in the curriculum for physical training, etc.

The local arrangements are under the supervision of Quartermaster-Sergeant Instructor T. Thomas, to whom the six companies will report on Friday at 2.30 p.m., to be formed up and handed over to Battalion Leader Fred Clark of Queen Alexandra School, who will carry out the following programme.

(a).—General salute and march past in column of platoons.

(b).—Company drill and physical training by each company under its own leader. For the best company in this the Denne Cup, now held by Queen Alexandra School, will be awarded for the next year.

(c)—Formation of hollow square for short addresses, presentation of cup, and best shot medals.

(d)—Final march past and dismissal of parade.

Colonel Hill will be accompanied during the inspection by his personal staff of local militia officers, His Worship Mayor Holloway, and the Chairman of the Board of Education. An invitation to be present has been extended to all Home and School Associations, the City Council, Board of Education, and the Ministerial Association. All pupils, parents, and the public generally are also asked to be present and view this good and beneficial portion of the public school training

The bugle band of the Collegiate Institute have kindly volunteered their services through their principal, Mr. H. R. H. Kenner.

THEATRE

LTON SILLS IN "THE UNGUARDED HOUR"

The entertaining gentleman who writes the "Moviegraph" bits and who said a mouthful recently when he declared that well-known screen actors should stick to the roles that had made them famous, if they wished to retain their hold on the public's affections, would have a striking vindication of this theory in "The Unguarded Hour," the feature picture at the Capitol Theatre for the first half of the week. It is an entertaining picture, very well carried out, from start to finish, but whoever cast Milton Sills in the role of a scientific-minded, soft-hearted Italian duke, didn't quite know his business. The hero of "The Sea Hawk," with his stern face and rather stiff manners, is decidedly out of place in such a part, and he never looked more American in his life, probably, than he does on the screen, essaying the characterization of the Duke d'Arona, fiddling with the mechanism of a radio station and then falling flat at the feet of a pretty girl who makes eyes at him in the most outrageous manner.

With different actors, "The Unguarded Hour," entertaining as it undoubtedly is, could have been made vastly more interesting. Doris Kenyon, as Virginia Gilbert, has flashes of intelligence when she really does act well in this picture, but for the major portion of the time she does the "flapper" stunt, the spoiled American girl act, with tiresome effect.

"In the unguarded hour that comes to all mortals, pause here and gather spiritual strength," is the motto written in Italian on the panel in the chapel of the castle of the Duchessa de Monteverde, and here come Virginia and the other girl, Elena, at the same midnight hour. The denouement of their meeting, tragic for one girl, happy for the other, forms the most exciting interlude of a picture whose interest might have been greater if it hadn't been so widely heralded as a humdinger. Anyone who has seen Milton Sills in other roles has a right to expect more of him as an actor and more also in the way of substance to a picture, than he gives in "The Unguarded Hour."

Curiously enough, the two theatres showing pictures in this city offer their programme for the first half of this week to a musical accompaniment that seems to emphasize, as a special number, the pretty melody of "In the Garden of Today" —Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT

JOHN BARRYMORE IN "THE SEA BEAST"

There is a very interesting picture at the Regent for the first three days of this week, in the big sea story, "The Sea Beast," featuring John Barrymore. It is one of those productions that are outstanding by reason of original treatment and the art of the main actor. John Barrymore brings to this characterization of Ahab Ceeley, harpooner on the whaling boat "The Three Brothers," out of New Bedford, Massachusetts, later captain of "The Pequod," all the art that made him famous on the speaking stage. In fact, his work throughout this presentation is marked by the technical mannerisms of the spoken drama, rather than the usual mimicry of the "deaf and dumb" movies. He appears to live more really in his role than the majority of screen actors. At times, he over-acts slightly, but his presentation of the different moods of the lad who starts out as a jolly youth, playing "monkey shines" on the big whaling boat, and then becomes a hardened, embittered man, to seek revenge on the strange beast, the "white whale" of the seas, is admirable.

When Derek Ceeley, half brother of Ahab, fell in love with his brother's sweetheart, his heart turned bad. He pushed his brother from the whaling boat into the path of the "sea beast," the great albino mammal that had snuffed out the lives of many an adventurous whaler, and "Moby Dick," as the sailors had christened the huge whale, bit his leg off. Then came the cauterizing with hot irons in the hold of the whaler, and the terrible suffering of the wounded man. With a mind unhinged by pain, he came back to face the pity of his sweetheart and to listen later to the lies of his half-brother, Derek. Certain that the girl had turned from him to his brother, he went away, to wander the seas and seek revenge on "Moby Dick." It is not often that a moving picture holds the moral that abides in the screening of "The Sea Beast," and the inner lesson will be lost on many of its observers.

As a picture, it is wonderfuly screened, with every detail of a life that has gone forever, the life of a century back, when dresses and manners and customs were so different from modern fashions, but hearts and feelings and jealous suspicion were just the same, carried out to perfection. Even the smallest detail of the presentation of the whaler, with its old-time fashioning, has not been overlooked. Combined in it are a big theme, one that carries in it love and jealousy, hate and revenge and evil passions, the only real redeeming light being in the faithful love of the girl, a picturesque other-world atmosphere in the filming and backgrounds, the tang and roar of raging elements, the artistic acting of the principals, all together making "The Sea Beast" a memorable and very interesting picture.

CUSTOMS RECEIPTS ALMOST DOUBLED

May Duties at Peterborough Amounted To Over Hundred Thousand.

The customs receipts of the port of Peterboro for the month of May, nearly doubled the receipts for the corresponding month a year ago. This is a remarkable increase when it is considered that the income tax is not included in the receipts this year as the customs department does not handle the income tax as it did last year. The receipts also show an increase over the month of April of this year. Receipts for May, 1926, were $109,358.10, and for May, 1925, $59,893.23, an increase of $49,464.87, and an increase of $18,050.91 over the month of April this year.

WEDDING BELLS.

CANNING—HERON
A quiet but very pretty wedding took place at a quarter-past two o'clock this afternoon, at the Manse of Knox United Church, when Ethel, only daughter of Mr. Alexander Heron, 292 Brock Street, and the late Mrs. Heron, became the bride of D. Vernon Canning of Peterborough, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Canning of Westmount, Montreal. The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. C. Mackinnon.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was charming in a gown of Veronica blue flat crepe, trimmed with silver buttons and collar and cuffs of silver kid. Her hat was grey, trimmed with blue, her shoes and stockings of silver shade, and she carried a shower bouquet of butterfly roses and lily of the valley.

Little Maudie Heron, small niece of the bride, was the only attendant, in a dainty frock of silver crepe, with blue head band and basket of sweet peas.

Following the ceremony, a reception to the immediate relatives and friends was held at the Tiffin Tea Room, on Charlotte Street, where the guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. Canning and Mr. A. Heron. The bride and bridegroom left on the half-past five o'clock train for a honeymoon trip, the bride travelling in a smart ensemble suit of navy and sand, with hat, shoes and stockings to match. On their return, they will reside at 526 Bolivar Street.

GEALE—ROGERS

PHARMACY COURSE MADE TWO YEARS

Sunday Closing Matter To Be Dealt With Locally.

TORONTO, June 1 (Canadian Press).—The degree course lasting two years instead of one as at present, will be instituted at the Ontario College of Pharmacy in the very near future, according to Prof. V. E. Henderson, chairman, committee of pharmacy of the University of Toronto, who addressed the Ontario Retail Druggists at their convention here today.

Prof. Henderson stated that in his opinion, there should be a three year course before the degree was granted.

Sunday closing of drug stores, was urged by the Lord Day's Alliance, will not be discussed by the convention, the executive being of the opinion that the matter is one which should be dealt with locally.

Only Mere Quorum Listened To Debate on Budget That Lasted Five Weeks—All Parties Are Equally To Blame For Delay.

PREMIER KING'S MOTION TO START BUSINESS AN HOUR EARLIER CARRIES

House Could Get Its Work Done In Four Months If It Had Proper Rules Says Macleod Member, Criticizing System.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 2 (Canadian Press)—The House of Commons could get its work done in four months sitting from one until six in the afternoon if it had proper rules, declared G. G. Coote (Progressive-MacLeod) in the House yesterday in protesting against the Prime Minister's motion to abolish the Wednesday evening adjournments until the end of the present session.

Premier King had movd that the House should not sit on Thursday of this week, it being the King's birthday and that the afternoon sittings commence at two instead of three. The motions were carried.

Mr. Coote said he could not hope to have the motion to sit on Wednesday evening defeated but he felt obliged to protest against the unreasonableness of the length of the session. "I know of no other body of men who have to work both day and night. There were five weeks of budget debate, which very few members listened to, and those who did, only to form a quorum," said Mr. Coote. He protested against the taking away of the one remaining night. He did not know why reasonable men could not adopt reasonable rules to facilitate the debate.

Private members, said Mr. Coote, who were conscientious, worked from before nine in the morning until after midnight and were then expected to sometimes take part in divisions. What applied to private members applied more so to the Prime Minister, members of the government and leader of the Opposition. The page boys of the House—"this factory of words and phrases"—were frequently compelled to stay all night despite the fact that there were child labor laws in the province which would forbid it. All parties were equally guilty in the prolonging of the session.

At the conclusion of Mr. Coote's remarks, the Prime Minister's motions were carried without further protest.

They have been receiving six dollars a day.

ALL ANTI-FOREIGN.

Good Chinese Anti-British, He Tells British Member of Committee.

GENEVA, June 2. Canadian Press—"Chinese is sick to death over foreign interference in her domestic affairs."

Mr. Chu, the Chinese Minister to Italy, made the declaration yesterday during a tempestous session of the permanent opium commission, in a violent altercation with the British delegate, Sir Malcolm Delevigne.

Sir Malcolm had criticized the importation of morphine into China. Mr Chu became so excited that he literally screamed. He talked of the readiness of the Chinese to make war on Great Britain.

"If you can find a Chinese who is not anti-foreign and not anti-British, I'll say he is not a good Chinese" exclaimed the minister.

The word battle became so heated that M. Bourgeoise, the president of the commission, was obliged to adjourn the session.

Men May Some Day Live Forever Says Doctor

Idea Of Immortality Not Inconsistent With Science

NEW YORK, June 2 (United Press).—The quest of the fountain of youth may not be entirely in vain, according to Dr. Durant, formerly of the Department of Philosophy of Columbus University and now director of the Labor Temple School here.

There is no reason for not believing that man may some day overcome death, Dr. Durant told the United Press, in an interview today.

Admitting that the age when men will cease to die may have its inconveniences, Dr. Durant said there was nothing either in science or in philosophy inconsistent with the idea of eventual immortality of the body.

"But I cannot say positively that men ever will live for ever," he said, adding that he was merely pointing out that eternal life is not an impossibility.

"Death is a scheme of Nature," he said, "for making room for the young. But I suppose that if man ever conquers death, he will by that time cease to grow old and retain the vigor of youth."

With Caution in Management Should Show Profit in Future.

High Costs of Wartime Building Won't Be Met For Years.

OTTAWA, June 2 (Canadian Press). — "I am very far from regarding the Canadian Government Merchant Marine as it is sometimes lightly and frivously called 'a white elephant'," Sir Henry Thornton said in reply to a question before the railways committee of the House of Commons this forenoon. He was hopeful that, with caution in its management, diligence, economy and due regard to pushing its business, the Merchant Marine would be able in future years to show a substantial profit on its operation, although it would not, at least for many years to come, be able to return interest on the amount of money the ships cost, constructed as they were in the stress of the war."

"For the first five months of this year," Sir Henry said, "the Government Merchant Marine had an operating profit of $62,000.

The election was held in local unions last Wednesday and results were mailed to headquarters.

POISONED LEADS MASTER TO CAR; DIES SHORTLY AFTER

Byersville Miscreant Has Long List of Killings To Account.

MANY INCENSED.

South End Residents Ponder Drastic Action Against Slayer.

The dog poisoner, who made himself, or herself, such a nuisance in Byersville about this time last year, has resumed operations, and several animals have already fallen victims to the poisoned pieces of meat artfully laid out for their destruction.

The most despicable achievement of the unknown coward was effected when the dog belonging to John Brownlee, the blind newsvendor, of Charlotte street, was found poisoned ten minutes after it had, according to its usual custom, led its master to the car. On Wednesday of last week, Mrs. C. J. Alcock of Chamberlen street, lost a water spaniel, to which she and her family were greatly attached. The animal which had left the house in seemingly good condition a short time previously, was found by a neighbor lying panting, unable to get up, and obviously in a dying condition. Mrs. Alcock was informed, and endeavored to help the animal by giving it some heated butter, but her efforts were of no avail, and the dog died. On the same evening Mr. H. Paul went out to a near-by store to make a purchase, and on returning in a very few minutes he found his dog in a dying condition, obviously having been poisoned.

On a single morning last year, no fewer than seven dogs were found poisoned in Byersville. One of them—a long haired terrier, the property of Mrs. G. Panter, was seen by some of the children to eat a piece of meat. Soon afterwards it was affected by convulsions, and other indications of strychnine poisoning. After its death the body was opened by Mr. T. Johnston, veterinary surgeon, who discovered that the dog had eaten a piece of sausage which had been split open and had been smeared with strychnine. The strychnine had been absorbed by the heat of the stomach and the action of the gastric juices, but Mr. Johnston had no doubts as to the cause of the animal's death.

In order to replace her lost favorite, Mrs. Panter secured a hound which within a few weeks was also poisoned, and shared the fate of its predecessor.

Mrs. Allan of Byersville lost a valuable Pomeranian, a present from her husband, who brought the animal from Lakefield. In this case also Mr. Johnston found traces of strychnine poisoning.

In common with most of the owners of the poisoned dogs, Mr. Johnston believes tha the destruction is the work of some one actually living in the neighborhood. The fact that the poisoning is confined to that area, coupled with the similarity in the manner in which the animals are destroyed, seems to lend color to the belief that the entire series of poisonings is the work of one individual.

There is intense indignation in the neighborhood over the matter. Mr. Johnston declares that the inhabitants are determined that the destruction shall cease. "We have now a more vigorous Humane Society," he said, "which will support any efforts of the people to end this business, and the courts provide severe penalties for those who take the law into their own hands by destroying their neighbors' dogs.

Customs Probe Is Nearing End With Examination Of Shippers Who Sent Liquor To "Miquelon"

Officer Satisfied Canadian Legal Requirements By Telling Anyone on Duty, Even Janitor, He Says—His Not To Reason Why.

OFFICIALS AT ST. PIERRE DIDN'T CARE IF LIQUOR LANDED AFTER DUTY PAID

Booze For United Sttaes Taken From Cases and Put Into Sacks—Empty Boxes Would Keep Poor People From Freezing To Death.

OTTAWA, June 2 (Canadian Press).—Signs that the customs probe is nearing an end were seen yesterday, when a dozen witnesses in the George Companies case were disposed of.

Final details of the shipment of thousands of cases of liquor weekly from the Dominion Distillery warehouse in the Hiram Walker and Sons' distillery plant at Walkerville, Ont., were brought out. A customs officer from that city testified that he notified the United States side of the Detroit River when boats cleared with liquor. He told whoever was on duty, sometimes the janitor. Having done so, he conformed with the Canadian regulations. He did not know what steps were taken on the other side to prevent the landing of the liquor.

A shipper for the Walkerville distillery, G Harbart, said that orders received from the Dominion Distillery for the shipment of liquor to St. Pierre Miquelon, in the Atlantic Ocean, via the river ferry Killarney from Walkerville, were filled by the distillery. He carried out shipping instructions to the letter. All the requirements of the Canadian Government were fulfilled and duty paid.

A member of the committee, Hon. H. H. Stevens, said it was an insult to the intelligence of the committee to expect it to believe that the Killarney could carry liquor from Walkerville to St. Pierre-Miquelon, three or four times a week. Witness calmly replied that he had never tried to persuade Mr. Stevens that it could. He merely took the stand that if he conformed to the Canadian law and obeyed the shipping instructions of a customer, his part was performed.

Entries This Year

The affairs of the liquor syndicate which has come to be known as the George Companies, were further investigated. Hand-writing expert J. J. Lomax, said that tests of the ink in the Dominion distillery books had shown that the books were entered up this year, and many months after the date of the entries therein.

C. K. Stewart, supercargo on the famous liquor ship Frank N., describing his journeyings from Halifax to St. Pierre-Miquelon, thence back to some point on the Atlantic coast. That this point was in the United States he made clear by solemnly assuring the committee that "Not one case was ever landed at any port in Canada." The liquor was taken to St. Pierre (a French possession) so as to get a landing certificate and fresh clearance papers for an unknown port—"sealed orders" the supercargo's instructions. It was hinted that, so long as they got customs duties, the customs people at St. Pierre did not check up too closely on the landing of the liquor. In this way the shippers got the landing certificate required by the Canadian excise people for liquor shipped out of bond without payment of the $9 per gallon excise.

It is possible that the probe's open sittings may end this week.

Shipment of 1,248 Cases

A shipment of 1,284 cases of whiskey to St. Pierre Miquelon by the boat Killarney, a river ferry boat plying between Walkerville, Ont., and Detroit, Mich., was discussed.

Counsel R. L. Calder, K.C., asked the shipper of the goods if it were not true that the Killarney could not possibly sail to St. Pierre. Witness said that might be so. He did not

DEMOTION WITH LOWER SALARY FOR REPORTING FELLOW OFFICIAL

Customs Employee Told Chief Inspector About Removal of Cloth.

COST HIM $400.

Transferred To Different Office at Lower Scale of Pay.

OTTAWA, June 2 (Canadian Press).—John McCarthy was demoted and lost $400 a year because he gave information about a fellow customs officer carrying goods out of the customs bonded warehouse in Montreal, Mr. McCarthy told the customs committee this morning.

One night, the witness said, he saw four men leave the warehouse and go away in an auto. One of the men he was sure was A. Goyette, a customs inspector.

On another occasion, early in the morning, he found a man carrying two unaddressed bales of cloth from the warehouse. He prevented him and later Goyette and another man came and took the bales away.

The witness finally went to Chief Inspector MacLaughlin and told him of his suspicions about Goyette. Soon after, he was moved over to the Canadian Express warehouse, and the new position meant a drop in pay of $400 a year.

NO CRITICISM MADE ON RECORD SAYS FERGUSON

Unfriendly Interests Try To Make Temperance Issue Party Matter.

POLICY FOR PROVINCE.

Government Will Take Full Responsibility For Its Policy.

TORONTO, June 2 (Canadian Press).—The complete absence of Opposition criticism of the administrative record of the present Ontario Government was emphasized by Premier Ferguson in an address which he delivered last evening to the executive of the Women's Liberal-Conservative Auxiliary Association. If it were not for persistent efforts of unfriendly interests to make the temperance issue a matter of party politics, said the Premier, the Government would return in the next election with 90 instead of 75 followers.

With regard to the temperance issue, the Premier reiterated the Government's resolve to accept the full responsibility for any policy which it might evolve towards it. The Government, when the time should come, he repeated, would formulate its policy in the interests of the province as a whole and of the party.

LIQUOR SHIPPING METHODS TOLD

Duty Paid at St. Pierre To Get Customs Clearance.

FOR OPEN SEAS.

OTTAWA, June 2.—(Canadian Press)—The progres of half a dozen ship loads of liquor from Walkerville, Ontario, to some point on the United States Atlantic Coast via St. Pierre Miquelon was described in the customs probe yesterday. C. K. Stewart, of Montreal, nominal owner of "Frank H" and "Bernard H" told the committee that he acted as supercargo on these boats, which really belonged to C. P. Chartier, of St. Pierre. The liquor was taken from Halifax to St. Pierre where it was transhipped, unloaded or "partly unloaded." This done, and the customs duties of that port paid, a landing certificate was obtained from the French customs to satisy the requirements of the Canadian bond release. Then Mr. Stewart, with the cargo of liquor aboard his boat, would receive sealed orders specifying the point at which he was to unload. The French authorities would give him clearance for the open seas, via Halifax.

Hon. H. H. Stevens commented that the liquor was destined to rum row. The witness did not reply.

TAKING GAS.

Perhaps you have a nervous dread of the hypodermic needle, and also shrink from 'having your tooth frozen'—preferring to take gas instead.

By 'gas,' we imply a mixture of nitrous oxide and oxygen, administered in proportions varied to suit the type of patient at hand.

Formerly, nitrous oxide gas was administered alone, but oxygen was later introduced for the purpose of better control. Because of this, nitrous oxide-oxygen anesthesia is considered to be the safest of all general anesthetic agents.

The action of 'gas,' is fairly rapid, the normal period of induction being one minute and forty seconds, at which time unconsciousness should be induced. The duration of the anesthesia may be prolonged or shortened as required, by means of the oxygen control.

The period of recovery is brief, it being brought about by shutting off the nitrous oxide flow and giving oxygen, when the patient is quickly restored to consciousness. Very rarely does the patient exhibit symptoms of nausea or prolonged muscular weakness following the recovery.

The best time for administration of a gas anesthetic is in the morning or afternoon, when one is fresh and rested. But no general anesthetic should be given within from two to three hours of eating; hence the meal prior to the time of operation should be omitted.

As with other general anesthetic agents, the best results are obtained with those who approach in proper attitude of mind, with tears allayed and fully confident that in no way will they be subjected to any unpleasant sensations.

With extractions, one marked advantage of a general anesthetic over a local agent, is that where the general anesthetic is employed, there is a freer hemorrhage in the tooth socket, consequently the risk of infection subsequent to the operation is much less, and the liability of after soreness is very much reduced.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

William Simpson, business manager of The Philadelphia Bulletin, says:

THAT newspaper reading is a universal habit: newspaper advertising therefore reaches each day virtually all who buy.

Newspaper advertising is the life blood of local trade because it touches all consumer sources in every community. It gives the national advertiser the same opportunity for complete consumer appeal in any locality.

Newspaper advertising cuts selling costs because it entails no waste in locality of circulation. Manufacturers use it to cover markets where it is profitable to do business.

Newspaper advertising insures quick, thorough and economical dealer distribution and dealer good will, because retailers are willing to sell products advertised direct to their own customers.

Newspaper advertising enables manufacturers to tell where their products may be bought.

Newspaper advertising can be started or stopped overnight, can be prepared between days to meet sudden developments and to obtain immediate results.

Newspaper advertising enables manufacturers to check advertising results and costs in every market which they enter.

Newspaper advertising costs less than any other kind.

NO TRACE FOUND OF MISSING MEN

Remark Made That They Would Push Through To Whitney.

HAZARDOUS TRIP.

LINDSAY, June 2.—No information was received yesterday concerning the whereabouts of the two Toronto men, Solomon and Weatherhead, who have been lost in the wilds of Haliburton County since Victoria Day. The villagers do not expect any word from the searching party until Thursday, as the country through which they are travelling is away from civilization and is dotted with lakes and portages as well as being heavily wooded.

Weatherhead lost his wife in Toronto a short time ago, and it is believed came to Haliburton to recuperate. His two companions accompanied him on what was termed a hike. They registered at the Fetterly House, Haliburton, but very little is known about them, save that one of the party dropped the remark that they might push through the unexplored portions of Haliburton township and come out via Whitney. Residents of Haliburton look upon the trip as a most hazardous one, and were not surprised when word was received that the men were missing.

FERGUSON DENIES BRISTOL STATEMENT

Federal Member Is Not Speaking For Province on Power Motion.

TORONTO, Ont, June 2 (Canadian Press). — Premier Ferguson repudiated the statement of Edmund Bristol, made in the House of Commons last night, that the Premier of Ontario had endorsed his suggestion that treaty negotiations be opened up with the United States for the purpose of securing a further diversion of Niagara water for power purposes. "Mr. Bristol did call be up in connection with his resolution," stated the Premier on Tuesday. "I told him that I could not prevent him introducing any resolution on any subject, but I suggested that the latter might be better left over until the Chicago steal is cleaned up. Mr. Bristol certainly is not speaking for the Government of Ontario. The Hydro has no project in view that will call for Niagara water until the Chicago matter is finally dealt with."

CROP REPORTS

WINNIPEG, Man., June 1.—(Canadian Press).—With wheat well above ground and stooling out and plenty of moisture the outlook for the west is the brightest for considerable time, according to the weekly crop report of the Canadian National Railways yesterday. Warm, showery weather has prevailed generally.

Seeding is virtually completed, some flax and coarse grains remaining to be sown. Although cutworms and grasshoppers have been reported in a few districts, indications are that little damage has been done.

Manitoba: Wheat is progressing nicely and other crops are appearing above ground. There have been a few instances of reseeding in small areas as a result of damage by high winds.

Saskatchewan: Saskatchewan has been more favored than Manitoba in rainfall during the past week. The soil holds a good reserve of moisture and wheat is from four to eight inches high. Coarse grain seeding is progressing rapidly only a little oats and barley remaining to be sown.

Alberta: Although weather has been cooler than in the other provinces, showers have been general and there is sufficint moisture to take care of crops for some time. Only a little coarse grain seeding is to be done. The government is distributing poison bait for grasshoppers in the Drumheller and Three Hills districts and little damage has been done. The Alberta outlook is even more promising than a year ago.

LIQUOR SHIPPING METHODS TOLD

Duty Paid at St. Pierre To Get Customs Clearance.

FOR OPEN SEAS.

OTTAWA, June 2.—(Canadian Press)—The progres of half a dozen ship loads of liquor from Walkerville, Ontario, to some point on the United States Atlantic Coast via St. Pierre Miquelon was described in the customs probe yesterday. C. K. Stewart, of Montreal, nominal owner of "Frank H" and "Bernard H" told the committee that he acted as supercargo on these boats, which really belonged to C. P. Chartier, of St. Pierre. The liquor was taken from Halifax to St. Pierre where it was transhipped, unloaded or "partly unloaded." This done, and the customs duties of that port paid, a landing certificate was obtained from the French customs to satisy the requirements of the Canadian bond release. Then Mr. Stewart, with the cargo of liquor aboard his boat, would receive sealed orders specifying the point at which he was to unload. The French authorities would give him clearance for the open seas, via Halifax.

Hon. H. H. Stevens commented that the liquor was destined to rum row. The witness did not reply.

TAKING GAS.

Perhaps you have a nervous dread of the hypodermic needle, and also shrink from 'having your tooth frozen'—preferring to take gas instead.

By 'gas,' we imply a mixture of nitrous oxide and oxygen, administered in proportions varied to suit the type of patient at hand.

Formerly, nitrous oxide gas was administered alone, but oxygen was later introduced for the purpose of better control. Because of this, nitrous oxide-oxygen anesthesia is considered to be the safest of all general anesthetic agents.

The action of 'gas,' is fairly rapid, the normal period of induction being one minute and forty seconds, at which time unconsciousness should be induced. The duration of the anesthesia may be prolonged or shortened as required, by means of the oxygen control.

The period of recovery is brief, it being brought about by shutting off the nitrous oxide flow and giving oxygen, when the patient is quickly restored to consciousness. Very rarely does the patient exhibit symptoms of nausea or prolonged muscular weakness following the recovery.

The best time for administration of a gas anesthetic is in the morning or afternoon, when one is fresh and rested. But no general anesthetic should be given within from two to three hours of eating; hence the meal prior to the time of operation should be omitted.

As with other general anesthetic agents, the best results are obtained with those who approach in proper attitude of mind, with tears allayed and fully confident that in no way will they be subjected to any unpleasant sensations.

With extractions, one marked advantage of a general anesthetic over a local agent, is that where the general anesthetic is employed, there is a freer hemorrhage in the tooth socket, consequently the risk of infection subsequent to the operation is much less, and the liability of after soreness is very much reduced.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

William Simpson, business manager of The Philadelphia Bulletin, says:

THAT newspaper reading is a universal habit: newspaper advertising therefore reaches each day virtually all who buy.

Newspaper advertising is the life blood of local trade because it touches all consumer sources in every community. It gives the national advertiser the same opportunity for complete consumer appeal in any locality.

Newspaper advertising cuts selling costs because it entails no waste in locality of circulation. Manufacturers use it to cover markets where it is profitable to do business.

Newspaper advertising insures quick, thorough and economical dealer distribution and dealer good will, because retailers are willing to sell products advertised direct to their own customers

Newspaper advertising enables manufacturers to tell where their products may be bought.

Newspaper advertising can be started or stopped overnight, can be prepared between days to meet sudden developments and to obtain immediate results.

Newspaper advertising enables manufacturers to check advertising results and costs in every market which they enter.

Newspaper advertising costs less than any other kind.

NO TRACE FOUND OF MISSING MEN

Remark Made That They Would Push Through To Whitney.

HAZARDOUS TRIP.

LINDSAY, June 2.—No information was received yesterday concerning the whereabouts of the two Toronto men, Solomon and Weatherhead, who have been lost in the wilds of Haliburton County since Victoria Day. The villagers do not expect any word from the searching party until Thursday, as the country through which they are traveling is away from civilization and is dotted with lakes and portages as well as being heavily wooded.

Weatherhead lost his wife in Toronto a short time ago, and it is believed came to Haliburton to recuperate. His two companions accompanied him on what was termed a hike. They registered at the Fetcrly House, Haliburton, but very little is known about them, save that one of the party dropped the remark that they might push through the unexplored portions of Haliburton township and come out via Whitney. Residents of Haliburton look upon the trip as a most hazardous one, and were not surprised when word was received that the men were missing.

Federal Member Is Not Speaking For Province on Power Motion.

TORONTO, Ont, June 2 (Canadian Press). — Premier Ferguson repudiated the statement of Edmund Bristol, made in the House of Commons last night, that the Premier of Ontario had endorsed his suggestion that treaty negotiations be opened up with the United States for the purpose of securing a further diversion of Niagara water for power purposes. "Mr. Bristol did call be up in connection with his resolution," stated the Premier on Tuesday. "I told him that I could not prevent him introducing any resolution on any subject, but I suggested that the latter might be better left over until the Chicago steal is cleaned up. Mr. Bristol certainly is not speaking for the Government of Ontario. The Hydro has no project in view that will call for Niagara water until the Chicago matter is finally dealt with."

CROP REPORTS

WINNIPEG, Man., June 1.—(Canadian Press).—With wheat well above ground and stooling out and plenty of moisture the outlook for the west is the brightest for considerable time, according to the weekly crop report of the Canadian National Railways, yesterday. Warm, showery weather has prevailed generally.

Seeding is virtually completed, some flax and coarse grains remaining to be sown. Although cutworms and grasshoppers have been reported in a few districts, indications are that little damage has been done.

Manitoba: Wheat is progressing nicely and other crops are appearing above ground. There have been a few instances of reseeding in small areas as a result of damage by high winds.

Saskatchewan: Saskatchewan has been more favored than Manitoba in rainfall during the past week. The soil holds a good reserve of moisture and wheat is from four to eight inches high. Coarse grain seeding is progressing rapidly only a little oats and barley remaining to be sown.

Alberta: Although weather has been cooler than in the other provinces, showers have been general and there is sufficint moisture to take care of crops for some time. Only a little coarse grain seeding is to be done. The government is distributing poison bait for grasshoppers in the Drumheller and Three Hills districts and little damage has been done. The Alberta outlook is even more promising than a year ago.

CUSTOMS PROBE IS NEARING END

know where she went. "Just because you did not actually see her sailing up the river?" commented Mr. Calder.

"Can you swear that when you signed this bill of lading it was intended that the shipment should go to St. Pierre?" pursued counsel.

"Certainly; I can swear to that " aswered the witness, C. Harwood, a shipper for Hiram Walker and Sons, distillers, in Walkerville.

"Via the boat Killarney," asked Hon. H. H. Stevens, incredulously.

"When we have billed this liquor according to instructions, our responsibility ceases," said Mr. Harwood.

Mr. Calder asked why the liquor was routed also "Via Grand Trunk Railway," when the customs documents specified shipment by United Steamships Co., direct by water from Walkerville. Other discrepancies between the bill of lading and the customs documents were emphasized by Mr. Calder.

Counsel for the distillery, W. J. Furlong, interposed a question. Suppose this shipment had been diverted to some point in the United States, what harm did that do Canada?

"I leave that to the committee to decide," replied Mr. Calder

"Customs and excise had been paid into the Canadian treasury," pursued Mr. Furlong.

"That is not the only thing we are investigating,' said Mr. Calder.

Mr. Harwood was questioned further soncerning the method of handling liquor consigned to St. Pierre. When it was delivered to the carrier, their responsibility was ended, said witness.

Mr. Furlong objected to some of Mr. Calder's questions. They might bring out evidence which would incriminate others "In a way not covered by this investigation." Also, he pointed out again, the treasury of Canada not not been defrauded.

Why the Frills?

Mr. Calder said that the Government of Canada might be interested also in having its regulations carried out. He agreed that Walker and Sons had a right to sell liquor to anybody, but why go to such elaborate lengths to cover up the transactions.

He believed that many of the bills of lading were "bogus" in the sense that they described for export liquor which really was taken delivery of on the spot. The Walker distilleries were really putting themselves in the positions of aiding and abetting those who deceived the customs of Canada, said Mr. Calder.

He had never met Scherer, the mysterious missing liquor dealer, said witness. He did not know where the Killarney was now, or how many trips she had made "to Mexico."

Commenting on the frequency with which shipments were made, Mr. Stevens said that not only was the Killarney supposed to be going to St. Pierre and back in a couple of days, but in one day two shipments were made.

"It is trifling with the committee to ask us to suppose that you thought that liquor was going to the Atlantic," he added.

Customs Officer Lodge of Walkerville, was called. He said he notified the United States authorities of the clearance of any liquor for that country. The gas-boat Gladys, with beer and wine, for instance, was reported to the Detroit people. He gave the notice required by the Canadian regulations to whoever was on duty on the Detroit side—sometimes the janitor.

There were two boats called "Killarney" down there, he said. One was "quite a big boat, old and toumbledown." She was, he believed, sold now to somebody in Cleveland.

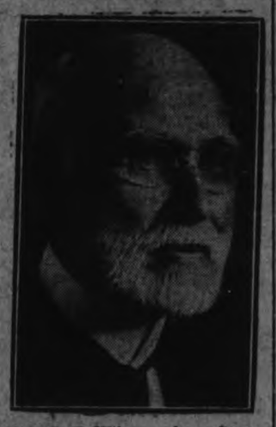
Helped the Poor

Liquor sent to the United States was taken out of its cases and put into sugar sacks. There were enough empty liquor cases lying round in some places to "keep the poor people from freezing to death."

Asked if the United States people got very busy when they were notified of boats leaving for Detroit with liquor, witness said he thought not. The liquor might not actually attempt the crossing for 24 hours or so.

W. J. Hushion of Montreal, former M.P., was the next witness. Mr. Calder asked what "consideration" he had given for his shares in the Dominion Distillery Products Co.

DIED LAST WEEK.



Rev. J. C. Wilson, who after 40 years in the active ministry of the Methodist church in Canada, died in his 87th year in Toronto. Deceased and his son, Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, of Burton, Ontario, had both held the presidency of the Bay of Quinte conference of the former Methodist church while stationed at Brighton, Ontario.

business at the outset, said Mr. Hushion. He paid it to Gregory George in various amounts at intervals, he said. Mr. Hushion denied that the St. George Import Company of St. Pierre and Halifax was simply an agency for the Dominion Distillery. He said that shipments sold to them were straight transactions. He also denied the usggestion of Mr. Calder that the Dominion Distillery was also 'simply Gregory George under another name." They were doing business as a firm. Mr. George kept the books, and so long as he reported satisfactory business conditions, Mr. Hushion had not bothered much about it.

A High Price

Asked why his company sold denatured alcohol at $7 to $10 a gallon when the price of such alcohol was 87 cents per gallon, Mr. Hushion said that there was now in his office an inquiry for the same kind of denatured alcohol at $5 a gallon.

"Why are you so surprised at our selling denatured alcohol?" Mr. Hushion went on. "Every distiller in Canada is doing it. I heard of one distiller in Montreal who sold more in one month than we have sold in a year and a half."

Mr. Calder demanded the name of that distiller. Mr. Hushion retorted "I am not here to tell you what other distillers are doing."

Later he pointed out that he could only repeat hearsay, and the chairman agreed.

There was sometimes a very heavy demand for denatured alcohol in the United States, according as supply and demand changed.

High prices were sometimes paid when the supply was short. He admitted that it was reasonable to suspect that it might be redistilled and bootlegged down there but "He had not thought much about it."

"That had nothing to do with you," remarked Dugald Donaghy.

While he knew nothing of the actual business transactions of the company, the prices entered on the documents produced might be "merely for statistics purposes."

Mr. Stevens reminded Mr. Hushion that last February he had told the committee that he was not a director of the company. He was not at that time, said witness.

Then, pursued Mr. Stevens, Mr. Hushion had said that hay and grain was his principal business.

"It was and it wasn't," answered witness. He had been in that business off and on for twenty years. It was not his principal avocation now and perhaps was not in February.

Confusion over the names "Dominion Distillery Products Co., Ltd." and "Dominion Distillers Ltd." had caused him to misunderstand something about shareholding. The latter company was formed to take over the affairs of the former. That had not been completed then.

Also it should be remembered that in 1920, before the Quebec Liquir Commission was formed, he was in the liquor business and did much business with the George companies. But he had done nothing of the sort since. Therefore, when he said he had no liquor dealings with the companies in the last few years, he had not been misrepresenting facts.

CABARET SINGER KILLS HIMSELF

Rather Than Let Mother See Him as a Failure.

TURNS ON GAS.

NEW YORK, N.Y., June 2.—(United Press).—Out in Aberdeen, Washington, Gerald Schrage, as a boy showed much talent for music that his mother, Mrs. Helen Schrage of 400 West Eighth Street, Aberdeen, decided he could have a musical education.

He went through college and then was sent abroad where his clear tenor voice was trained, not without expense to his family. Then a year or so ago he came back to New York to conquer the city. Things did not go well, but he didn't tell his mother and she never knew that he was making a meagre living singing in a Greenwich Village cafe.

There came a day when Mrs. Schrage could wait no longer. She must go to New York; see the success her son was making; and hear him sing. She wrote and told him she would be here in a few days. But for Schrage there was a hollowness to the expected meeting. "I can't let my mother know that I'm a cabaret singer," he told a friend.

She found out—today when she heard that Gerald's body had been found in his room the gas turned

Sir Henry Thornton Says System Is Starting New Line.

EXPECTS PROFIT.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 2.—(Canadian Press).—"The Government Merchant Marine is going after business, body, boots and breeches," said Sir Henry Thornton yesterday morning before the Special Committee of the House on National Railways and Shipping. Sir Henry had been asked if the Government Merchant Marine was doing anything to fill the gap caused by the reduction in service of the Royal Mail Steampacket Company between Canada and the West Indies. "We are undertaking," he said, "to provide a service for the Maritime Provinces which has been resigned by the Royal Mail Line. We propose immediately to put on a freight service which will fill that gap. We think we can do so with a fair chance of profit."

Figures were submitted to the committee which showed that 15 Government Merchant Marine vessels had been sold for $983,000. The vessels cost $10,246,000.

RURAL CREDITS BILL IS GIVEN SECOND READING

Hon. Mr. Robb Asks For Directions on How to Mortgage Fish.

TO HELP FARMERS.

Maritime Province Members Want Equal Chance For Fishermen.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 2 (By Canadian Press).—Second reading was given to the Rural Credits Bill without discussion when the House had disposed of preliminaries yesterday afternoon. The House then went into committee on this bill.

E. J. Garland (Prog., Bow River) asked that the definition in the bill of a "farmer" be changed. As it stood a farmer was one solely engaged in agriculture. Under this phraseology farmers who engaged also in the threshing business would be excluded.

H. B. Short (Cons., Digby-Annapolis) asked if the bill applied only to farmers of the soil and not to farmers of the sea.

"If my honorable friend can tell me how I can get a mortgage on fish I will be glad to consider it," replied Mr. Robb, Minister of Finance.

R. B. Hanson (Cons., York Sunbury) said if there was to be any easy money in the country there should be no discrimination in favor of the western farmer. He demanded equal treatment for the fishermen as did O. B. Price (Cons., Westmoreland).

Class Legislation.

T. L. Church (Cons., Northwest Toronto) described the bill as class legislation of the worst kind.

Mr. Robb said that the government had not been unmindful of the fishermen. He moved that the word "solely" be dropped from the definition of farmer in the bill.

A. De Witt Foster (Cons., Hants-Kings) said that the fishing industry had "dwindled $7,000,000 in the last five years." When it came to giving consideration to matters affecting the Maritime Provinces, there was an inclination to postpone such matters until "tomorrow." Fishermen should be included so as to benefit uader the bill and the time for action was now.

A. E. MacLean (Lib., Prince) said he would support "anything that would tend to benefit the fishing industry."

Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, said he was in favor of rural credits. Mr. Meighen believed that a farmer should be defined for the purpose of the act as one who "owns and cultivates" a farm, rather than as a person who "owns and occupies" a farm.

Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals, said it was not the intention to provide loans for persons who were only "incidental farmers." He did not think the difference should be extended to include such a class.

Mr. Meighen said there were many districts in which the real farmer lived in towns. Under the present definition, such a person would be excluded from any benefit under the act.

Not For Ranchers.

After a lengthy discussion regarding the definition of the term farmer, Mr. Dunning, who took over the guidance of the bill to the committee from Mr. Robb, explained that it was not intended that the bill should apply to ranchers. It was designed to apply strictly to resident farmers. After the definitions had been cleared up clauses were passed rapidly until the question of the provinces was encountered.

C. H. Cahan (Cons., St. Lawrence-St. George) asked Mr. Dunning to give the House some of the results of the experience of Alberta and Saskatchewan in administering rural credits. People in the east had been given to believe that there had been extensive losses in the operation of provincial rural credits.

Mr. Dunning said that the credit schemes in effect in Manitoba and Saskatchewan had been administered during one of the most difficult times in Western Canada. On the first of January of this year, however, the Saskatchewan Farm Board had paid to the government every cent of interest due.

"I admit that the scheme requires most careful administration," said Mr. Dunning. The rural credit scheme should not be regarded in any sense as a philanthropic one. He believed that the scheme now before the house would produce valuable results in reducing the cost of long-term agricultural credits, and, properly administered, would stand the test.

Some Criticism.

Clause five of the bill which states that the government of Canada shall provide an initial capital, not exceeding $5,000,000 aroused some criticism. This clause states that the amounts provided from time to time shall be free from interest charges for a period of three years, after which interest shall be charged at the rate of five per cent per annum. Hon. Robert Rogers (Cons., Winnipeg South) said that it seemed an unsound proposal to remit the interest for three years. C. N. Cahan thought that the initial expenditure of organization, etc., should be taken care of by specific appropriation and not by non-payment of interest over a term of years.

It would be better, said M. Cahan, to have the bill say simply that the government would guarantee the bonds. The present wording of the clause was "a mere camouflage." No government, in Canada, present or future, would dare to let these bonds go by default.

Cut Off $250,000.

A. W. Neill (Ind., Comox-Albernia) thought that the initial guarantee for organization expenses should be cut from $750,000 to $500,000. He also thought that the period of exemption from interest might be cut from three to two years. If the government was going to spend three quarters of a million dollars on organization Mr. Neill thought that it would have no difficulty in finding a private corporation who would take over all the responsibility and form a loan company suitable for the purpose of it could be assured of a gift to begin with of $750,000.

CAMPBELLFORD WEDDING

MENNELL—HEFFERNAN.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 2. —A very pretty but quiet wedding took place on Tuesday morning, June 1, at 7.30, in St. Mary's church, Campbellford, when Mary Ellen, daughter of Mr. Michael Heffernan, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Jack Mennell, of Hastings.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Phelan.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a becoming ensemble of rosewood broadcloth with fur trimmings, large picture hat and shoes and stockings to match, and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses.

Miss Marguerite Willard, of Peterborough, who acted as bridesmaid, wore a smart suit of silver grey, hat and shoes to match, biege fox furs and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

Mr. Joe Gorman, of Hastings, was best man.

After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served to a large number of friends.

Later the happy couple left for a trip to Rochester and Buffalo and on their return will reside in Campbellford.

The groom's gift to the bride was a substantial cheque, to the bridesmaid a gold bar pin and to the best man a pair of gold cuff links.

JOSEPH OAKLEY AWARDED $37.50

Claimed $80 From R. N. Simpson of Hastings in Car Smash.

TRIAL AT NORWOOD.

(By A Staff Reporter)

NORWOOD, June 2.—Out of the confusion of evidence in a division court case here on Monday, His Honour Judge Huycke allowed Joseph Oakley $37.50 with costs from R. N. Simpson of Hastings, for damages in a motor car accident on December 3 last.

Oakley had sued for $80 and Simpson entered a counter-claim for approximately the same amount. The accident occurred while Simpson's son was driving a traveler from Hastings to Westwood. Oakley was accompanied by his brother and their wives. He stopped his car on a narrow culvert as Simpson approached and the collision resulted. Judge Huycke found that Oakley was partly to blame, but Simpson much more culpable. He also remarked that he would probably have found the Township Council delinquent had they been a party in the case. Most of the witnesses agreed that the road and culvert was in an unfit condition for safe traffic.

The defence was handicapped by being unable to locate the traveler who was driving in the Simpson car.

The Characters and Situations in this Story are entirely fictional.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

HARRY MORTON has only lately told his adopted daughter, AUDREY, that her mother, when Audrey was a baby, had eloped with a man named Smith, and was left to die in a desert shack in Arizona.

Morton, middle-aged, attractive, wealthy and unmarried, has left Audrey at his home in Peterborough, with a houseful of chorus girls as her guests, while he makes a trip—his first since she was a baby—to Arizona. Audrey loves him. So does Nona, a Toronto stage girl.

As he alights at his Arizona mining property, Morton's driver tells him that the man he seeks is in a cabin beside the road.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XLI.

A broad-shouldered youth, with a wide sombrero on his sun-faded hair, lounged beside the doorway of the cabin. A revolver was strapped to his belt, and on his shirt was pinned the badge of a deputy sheriff.

"This is morton," called Eli, indicating his passenger.

The youth nodded. "Go on in," he said.

Morton pushed open the door, and stood silently, until his eyes could accustom themselves to the gloom within.

A man was sitting on a cot in the corner, elbows on knees, chin cupped in his hands.

"Well?" Morton said.

The man's eyes were on his visitor, but he did not move his head.

"So you decided not to go toSouth America," Morton continued. "Where did you get off the ship, and how did you get the money to come here?" He waited a moment. "Better talk, Smith."

"Got off the ship when I mailed that letter to the girl. You saw it, I suppose?"

"I did," said Morton. "And you sent word to the express company in Buenos Aires to forward your mail to Yuma?"

"To Flagstaff," Smith corrected. He grinned. "Guess that five thousand she sent 'll come in handy. I need it, now."

"She didn't send you any money," Morton told him.

Smith grunted.

"Who paid your fare here to Arizona?" Morton asked again.

The man shrugged his shoulders. "None of your business how I got the money. I'm here. That's enough."

Morton pulled a soap-box toward the door, and sat down.

"Robbed one of the passengers, eh?" he pursued.

"No," Smith said, sullenly. He straightened his bent back, rose slowly to his feet, and walked to the open door. Morton did not move, but thedeputy outside stepped into view, and cast a warning glance into th cabin.

"Behave yourself," he advised.

Smith turned, and went back to his cot.

"You're going to get me out of this," he said, abruptly. "Was it you who got me arrested?"

"I knew nothing about it until I received word that you were in jail," returned Morton. "But I'm not going to get you out of this."

"You're not, eh?" the man sneered. "So I suppose you'll want the story of my life written in the papers! Great stuff! 'Millionaire's Past Bared! Society Girl Was Desert Waif!' It'll look great in the headlines."

Morton leaned composedly against the cabin wall.

"Smith," he said, "you were an ass to come back to your old stamping grounds. And you're an ass to think that I care what you do, now. I'm through bothering with you."

Smith gave him a sidelong glance. "And, I suppose that blond beauty of yours will be glad to know about her mother—and me!"

He grinned, venomously.

Morton drew a cigar from his pocket, and lighted it.

"She does know about her mother and you," he said, quietly.

The man started. "The h— she does! Morton, you're lying!"

"I don't lie," Morton returned. "You know that."

Smith rubbed his hands together, in deep thought. "I thought you were going to keep her lily white, and her mind pure, always," he said, his lips curling.

"Plans change," Morton replied, his voice calmly conversational. "Mine changed." He leaned into the door opening. "Hey, son—come here," he called.

The young deputy again appeared. "What have you got on this fellow?" he asked.

"Plenty," answered the youth, laconically. "Sheriff told me to bring him over here, to be identified by you and some other people. Two or three old indictments against him. There's enough to keep him in the coop as long as he lives, I guess."

Morton thanked him, and turned again to Smith as the deputy sauntered outdoors.

"Just as well you didn't take that job in South America," he remarked. "It saves me some bother, and some money."

He arose. "I'll stay for the trial, to see you safely stowed away."

Pausing beside the young deputy outside, he handed the officer a cigar. "That fellow started with a pretty fair chance in life," he said, casually, "but he had loose ways with other people's property."

"It wasn't only property he was loose with," said the other. "Fellow on his way here from Tucson now, swearing he's going to plug him. We got a wire this morning."

Morton looked at him, questioningly. "Old case," the youth explained. "Fellow's sweetheart, or sister. Happened after you left these parts. I was a kid then, but I remember."

"Oh well, either way," said Morton, slowly. "Penitentiary or a gun. It makes little difference."

He walked away, toward the mine office.

Over the hilltop, and on the farther slope, stood a high iron fence, enclosing a small rectangle of brown earth.

Stretched across the top of the iron uprights was a mesh of heavy enameled wire, completely covering the plot at a height of seven feet.

Within was a block of white stone.

It was several days after Morton's coming to the camp that he visited this spot. When he approached, it was with lagging footsteps. Twice he stopped, and looked at the dark fence and the white stone that it surrounded, before he finally reached the palings.

Clinging to the irons, he gazed steadily at the oblong bit of rock. One word was carved on it—"Audrey."

His head drooped forward, and rested against the square iron standards. For a long time he stood there, motionless, his fingers clenched tight around the sun-heated pickets, the cordsstan ing out on the back of his hands.

Coatless and hatless, he was unheeding as the sun beat down upon his head and shoulders.

Perspiration had dampened his shirt, and the fabric where it clung to his arms was moved by a convulsive twitching of his taut muscles.

Finally his hands dropped.

With head lowered, he moved away, and without turning, walked to the and without turning, walked to the hilltop and down the path on the other side.

He did not com again.

Preparations for Smith's trial were brief. The law moves more promptly in regions where the population is scant, and trials ar w.

Tenn w.

Ten days after Morton's arrival, a silent crowd of ranchmen and miners listened impassively to the state's first case against Smith. A blanketed Indian or two was in the courtroom audience. Smith testified, a young lawyer made an impassioned address in his behalf, and shortly afterward the jury filed in with a verdict of "guilty."

Two days completed the first trial. A fresh jury was drawn, and presently Smith was convicted under a second indictment.

Through the proceedings, Morton sat impassively by a window, his head resting against the sill. Smith's eyes rested upon him more than once in lively hate, but the Peterborough man paid no apparent heed.

Once, in his testimony, Smith tried to introduce the subject of Audrey, but on sharp objection by the state, the court ruled that this story had nothing to do with the case on trial.

The young counsel for the defense gave no notice of appeal.

"They had him dead to rights," he said to Morton, at the end of the fifth day, his labors over.

They were outside the courtroom, strolling with a group of attorneys and witnesses toward the hotel.

Morton nodded.

"Good thing he's safe for a while," the lawyer continued. "They've got that fellow from Tucson locked up for safekeeping, but if he ever gets at shot at Smith—goodnight!"

"What will the judge give him, do you suppose?" Morton asked an old attorney who walked beside him.

"Qbout twenty years," surmised the other. "He'll never come out."

By tacit consent, they did not talk of Morton's own connection with Smith. The story was an old one in that county, and with the instinctive delicacy of men who dwell in desert places, they avoided wounding the man who had been their neighbor.

Only the judge, who joined them dinner in the hotel, touched remot upon the subject.

"Is Miss Morton well?" he asked gently. Conversation at the table stopped, and the men listened.

Morton smiled. "She is very well—and happy," he said.

The old judge nodded with satisfaction, and the clatter of knives and forks and voices once more arose.

The next day Morton returned to the mines, without waiting to hear Smith's sentence.

He had secured a pair of overalls, and in them, and a blue shirt, he strolled around, chatting with the workers, talking with the superintendent over the improvements to the mine, joking the Indians who trailed by from their village a few miles distant.

"Where did you learn that Hopi dialect?" asked the superintendent, as an Indian, on his ratty desert pony, drew away from the owner of the mines.

"Almost lived with them for five years," Morton said. "An Indian woman took care of my little Audrey, off and on for two years, when it was a question whether I'd get rich or starve."

"Where did you pick up old Eli?" the superintendent questioned, as they turned into the office. "He's been here eighteen or nineteen years now, hasn't he?"

"He grub-staked me once," Morton said. "He had some money; I was flat as a pancake, financially. Then he gambled away his share in the mine; those workings over by the border, you know. It was a pretty fair mine; I sold out for a good figure. First good money I made, and I used it to develop this place here. But I felt I owed him a job for life."

"He thinks you're the angel Gabriel," commented the superintendent.

The shade of the little offices was welcome, and Morton sighed contentedly as he sank into a chair.

"You're soft," said his employe. "This isn't hot—yet."

"I know," said Morton. "When I went up to Chicago, sixteen years ago or thereabouts, I was baked so brown they thought I was an Indian myself."

He reached for the mail that had been brought across the desert by messenger. He skimmed over it, until he came to a wide, cream-colored, plump envelope.

It was a letter from Audrey.

CADET TRAINING.

A minister at a conference at which cadet training in the schools was being condemned told his fellow-ministers that they might be much more profitably occupied in cleaning up dance halls and summer resorts and in giving proper instruction at home.

His statement suggests one aspect of cadet training that is often overlooked—that is, the benefit it effects in instilling some idea of discipline and respect for authority in the minds of youngsters, who because of the failure of parents are too often lacking in these things.

If there is no discipline in the home—and in too many cases it is to be feared there is little or none—then a system of training in the school that goes some way at least toward making up for the remissness of parents deserves support, if for that reason alone.

The present agitation against the cadet movement overlooks this, and every other good point in regard to cadet training.

The bogey of "militarism" drives all the benefits out of the picture.

OUR DUTY TO TOURISTS.

The tourist season has begun; already the automobile license numbers of numerous States show that the advance guard of the army of visitors from across the border has arrived.

Many of these tourists are coming for the first time to this district.

Upon the way they are treated depends whether or not they will come again.

It should be the duty of all those who come into contact with our visitors to treat them as welcome guests, to impress them with the fact that we want them to have a good time while they are here, and that we are glad to be of service to them.

The tourist traffic is now Canada's fourth biggest industry, representing a vast sum of money put into circulation in this country each summer, and it is an industry that must be encouraged and cultivated.

Peterboro should have a large share of this industry.

With the many attractions of this district, well advertised by the Trent Waterway Development Association and in other ways, many tourists will undoubtedly be persuaded to visit Peterboro.

It becomes our responsibility then to see that they are well treated in every respect, given good service at reasonable prices and regarded as guests whose return in other years would be greatly appreciated.

"THE GOOD OLD DAYS."

A sentence in one of Dr. Frank Crane's recent articles in which he pointed out that "while things may look bad they have been a good deal worse, that they are better than they were, and that they will certainly be better still tomorrow," is emphasized by the reminiscences of Mrs. Condon, which appeared in the Examiner on Saturday.

There are those who are always lamenting the passing of the good old days.

Yet reading Mrs. Condon's recollections of pioneer times in the township of Douro most people will agree that "things are better than they were."

Her picture of "the good old days" with sixteen taverns along the fourteen-mile Warsaw road, with primitive houses and farm equipment, with often scanty fare, should not only make us glad that those conditions are gone but also full of gratitude to the heroic men and women who by their gallant efforts and self-sacrifice made this a land of peace and plenty out of the wilderness.

We don't hear enough of the stories of the pioneers; too little is known of the early years of this country's history, and it is only when a citizen like Mrs. Condon throws a little light upon the adventures of the settlers in the Peterboro district that we begin to faintly realize how much we owe to them.

ONTARIO'S HEALTH WORK.

The Health Almanac for 1926, issued by the Provincial Department of Health, "to assist in the promotion of health and happiness for the citizens of Ontario, young and old," is a book that is crammed with interesting and informative health news.

Incidentally, this publication will serve to call attention to the fact that Ontario leads the rest of Canada in the care it takes of the health of its citizens.

The Ontario Department of Health supplies free of charge preventive treatment for diphtheria, scarlet fever, typhoid fever, rabies, smallpox, tetanus and whooping cough, and treatment for babies' sore eyes, syphilis and diabetes; in the latter two cases when the patient is unable to pay.

The Province maintains eight district officers of health, six sanitary inspectors, five physicians and twenty-five public health nurses as a field staff.

In the matter of water and sewerage systems, Ontario allows no city or town to raise debentures for the provision of such services until the same have been approved by the Provincial Board of Health.

The solution of industrial health problems, a division of dental services, a travelling diagnostic clinic for tuberculosis and many other features of public health work are other activities of the Department of Health.

Disraeli once said that "the public health is the foundation on which reposes the happiness of the people and the power of a country."

It is satisfactory to know that Ontario is not neglecting the foundation.

USE OF INDEPENDENT CRITICISM.

(From the Hamilton Herald.)

Two recent incidents of the Budget debate at Ottawa are refreshing. They are the speeches of a Conservative and a Liberal, both of them robust party men, who had the courage to express their own opinions even though their opinions clashed with those of their political leaders and the policies of their parties.

Colonel H. A. Mullins, Conservative member for Marquette, Man., is a cattle raiser himself and the leading parliamentary exponent and supporter of that business. He believes in exporting cattle on the hoof and is ready to talk all day in support of the policy as opposed to the policy of building up an export trade in dead meat. Now it happens that Mr. Meighen has been inclined to favor the latter policy. Although Col. Mullins is a loyal Conservative and gladly acknowledges Mr. Meighen as his leader, on this question he refuses to follow his leader, and in a recent speech openly challenged the wisdom of his views on the meat question.

No one questions the genuineness of the Liberalism of Mr. Euler, the able member for N. Waterloo. But Mr. Euler is also a protectionist, and he cannot swallow the fiscal vagaries of his party. Yesterday he spoke on the Budget. It was a critical speech. Mr. Euler could not view all of Mr. Robb's proposals with favor. He objected to the Finance Minister's decision to levy income tax both on the incomes of stock companies and on the shareholders' dividends—an arrangement which he denounced as double taxation. He complained that the Minister had decided upon the changes in the automobile duties without consulting the Advisory Tariff Board. He objected to the duties on automobile parts, believing that they are unfair to the Canadian manufacturers of those articles. He said he had privately made known his objections to Mr. Robb and hoped the Minister would consent to desirable amendments.

These demonstrations of independence on the part of members whose party loyalty cannot be suspected should be welcomed. They tend to make the leaders more careful to ascertain the opinions of their followers before taking a definite stand on certain policies which might later prove embarrassing.

OBITER DICTA ON CRIME.

Do we or do we not know something about crime and criminals? It would be easier to arrive at a working opinion one way or the other if there were not so much contradictory testimony from the same source. Warden Lawes of Sing Sing, speaking the other night in opposition to capital punishment, declared: "We know too little today of the reasons for crime and we must know the reasons to check it." Unfortunately, Mr. Lawes ventured to express his own belief that the trial and execution of Gerald Chapman had turned 300 young men to criminal ways by setting up the dead bandit as a hero. This may be a valid argument against capital punishment as a deterrent, but it certainly indicates on the part of the speaker a very definite knowledge of how criminals are made. Either there is no ground for asserting that the example of Gerald Chapman set the feet of 300 young men on the downward path, or else we know more about the reasons for crime than Warden Lawes assumes.

The same discrepancy between definite information and reckless generalization appears in an even more remarkable statement:

> "I do not think the real criminals are in Sing Sing, anyway, for only two out of every hundred are caught. Criminals look upon capture as the booby prize awarded to the incapable."

There is here brought into question not merely capital punishment, but all punishment whatsoever. If the criminal regards capture and punishment, whatever the penalty, as only an occupational hazard to be accepted with a shrug of the shoulders, we should logically proceed to close up the jails and the criminal courts. Whether the 2 per cent. of "boob" criminals are taken into custody or not, it is implied that the remaining efficient 98 per cent. will continue to go about their business. From this point of view, the prisons become only hospitals for the psychiatric treatment of those few criminals whose intelligence quotient renders them unfit for the pursuit of an exacting occupation. It is an argument which really makes the question of capital punishment or no capital punishment of little moment. Before you execute a criminal or cure him you have to capture him, and public interest is therefore bound to shift from the 2 per cent. when the law lays hold of to the 98 per cent. who go unscathed.

If the quoted percentages are true, they constitute a valuable contribution to the crime problem as a whole. They profoundly alter its nature from a penal problem to a police problem. The unwisdom of juries, the slow pace of the law, the alleged mistaken use of parole, reprieval and pardon, shrink to insignificant dimensions. We have apparently been wasting time, thought and money on philosophies and systems of penology when the real question is enough policemen to run down the forty-nine Gerald Chapmans who are running loose for every one that is seized.—New York Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Ontario should put on its best bib and tucker. The army of tourists is on the move.

Peter Smith, just released from penitentiary, breaks the law by travelling 65 miles an hour in a motor car on his way home. But most people will overlook the indiscretion under the circumstances.

Looking at the number of holes that have recently been made along George street, one may be pardoned for asking, "What do they mean by a permanent pavement anyway?"

The Progressives and Liberals are now definitely located in the dry column so far as the next Provincial election is concerned. At the time the Examiner went to press Mr. Ferguson had not stated where the Government stands.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

REMEMBRANCE A REWARD

The world will long remember the man who has lived the life of kindliness and of service—the man who has encouraged the discouraged and helped the helpless. The world will soon forget the man who through scheming, greed and selfishness has made much money, but has been of no service to his fellow man.

Remembrance is a reward that will remain only after right results.

The million-makers who rely on great marble monuments for remembrance and fame only erect a shaft to shame.

There is small satisfaction in just getting without giving.

If you have failed today to lend a helping hand to some unfortunate, this day discounts your life.

WARSAW GUILD ELECTS OFFICERS

Mrs. A. F. Choate is President For Ensuing Year—*Warsaw News.

WARSAW, June 2.—The Ladies' Guild of St. Marks' Church, held the annual meeting on Thursday afternoon. The officers are: President, Mrs. A. F. Choate; Vice-President, Mrs. Thomas Cuffe; Treasurer, Mrs. Albert Cooper; Secretary, Mrs. Theodore Douglas. The meetings are disbanded until September. Each member has one dollar, to see how much she can make out of it during the summer.

The regular meeting of the Warsaw United Church was held at Mrs. Richard Batten's home on Thursday afternoon. A large number were present. Mrs. David Taylor led the opening exercises. Mrs. Herrington spoke of the work of the new officers and thanked the officers of the last few months. She spoke of the pleasant social evening last Thursday, and thought such gatherings did a great deal of good.

The new fence was discussed. Mr. Alex. Watts donated the posts, and they are of exceptionally good material Messrs. Herrington, Uriah Payne, and John Sargent put up the fence. The secretary was instructed to write letters of thanks to the donor of the posts and to those who had built the fence. Mrs. MacIlvena and Mrs. Digiveed are to see to the painting of the fence.

A letter is to be written to Mrs. Squire, President of Norwood Aid, introducing Mrs. William Selkirk, who was one of the Warsaw Aid members.

It was suggested that the members collect old newspapers and sell them to help the Aid finances. Mrs. Herrington and Mrs. Foster offered to see that there was free carriage to Peterboro.

HASTY MARRIAGE.

Indian River.

To the Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—I have read a lot about the hasty marriage that some people go through, and later on they find out that they have made a big mistake. Not long ago on one of my tramps I met a girl, or, as I will be more polite and call her a lady, for that she was. After I had given her all the fool talk that I had to spare she asked me if I could tell her where she could get a good man to be a partner to her through life. "Now," says I, "that is a hard question for me to answer. How can you expect me to tell you where there is a man who will suit you?" "Well," says she, "you are an old man and have had a lot of experience in this world." "Well," says I, "why do you not go to your parents and ask their advice on the subject?" "I do not want to ask them." "Why?" says I. "If I do and my marriage is a failure it will send them to their graves with a load of sorrow on their backs." Oh, what a lovely lady to think so much of her parents, and what will I call her I will tell you later on. She was a fine girl with all the comforts of life. "Well," says I, "what kind of a man do you want?" "I want a good man," she said. "Do you mean a good Christian man or an industrious man?" "I want a man with both those principles," said she. "Well, sis., it will be a hard job for me to find a man with such qualities. Men of that kind are very scarce. Have you no idea where you can get such a man?" "No, I havent," said she. "Well," says I, "do not be hasty in choosing a man. Be sure he is what you want." "Can't you give me some light on the subject," she said. Oh, what a lovely girl! Who shall I compare her to? Laura Secord was the savior of the Canadian army at Lundy's Lane. She is the one that I will compare this lady to. "I will do all I can to help you. Do you know Tom Jones?" "Yes, I know him." "Will he suit you?" "Yes," says she. "Well," says I, "do you ever see him?" "Yes." "Does he not seem to pay attention to you?" "Not so far," says she. "Well, give him a little encouragement. You may manage to get him bye and bye." Today they are man and wife and living in a fine home, all is comfort. So be careful, girls. Do not be too hasty in getting a man. Make inquiries about him. He sure he is all right. Bye and bye the good Lord made them a present of a baby girl, a girl which they called Ellie. What a fine child she will grow up to be! On Sundays pa will take Ellie and ma will take the Bible and that is the way they will go to church. What a lovely pair they are!

Grandpa and grandma came to see wee Ellie in her fine home. What a pleasure it was to the old people with their eyes dim and their hearing dull to see this happy pair! For the wife of the Emperor Theodius once said: "Man, remember what you were and think of what you are and be thankful."

As I have told you so much about the good man, I will tell you a little about the bad man. No sooner than he gets his supper than he starts for the tavern or the gambling hall. Leaves his wife all alone, spends all his money and comes home a raving fool, abuses his wife, and does whatnot. I say, when that kind of man is dead he should be loaded on a steam tug and taken out to sea and there dumped overboard; sink him to the bottom where the lawless winds and the rolling billows may roll over his dead carcass. Such men as that are not fit to be buried in a cemetery along with respectable people.

My advice to all you young people is to not be too hasty in your choice of a partner in life.

SMALLER ENGINES FOR AUTOS.

Smaller engines, normally strong enough to run a motor car only on a level, but reinforced by a supercharger powerful enough to take it up the steepest hill, will soon be used generally on automobiles, according to G. Such engines, he says in Popular Science Monthly, have been used successfully on airplanes and racing automobiles, and should be practicable in reducing the production cost of trucks and pleasure cars.

AFRICAN ASSEMBLY MEMBERS ARE SUSPENDED AT SITTING MARKED BY HEATED SCENES

Closure Applied Five Times in as Many Hours Yesterday.

OPPOSITION BUSY.

Former Speaker Shouts Protest at Speaker and is Ordered Out.

CAPETOWN, South Africa, June 2 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters).—Following a lengthy session of the Assembly, which lasted until the early hours of the morning and was punctuated by many heated scenes, C. J. Kriege, a former Speaker and several other members of the Assembly, stand suspended. So long drawn out was the debate that the Government was finally compelled to report progress in order to allow time for the preparation of the day's order paper. A number of the Opposition members thereupon arose and shouted "We have beaten you to a standstill."

There had been a lengthy committee debate on a bill to amend the constitution of the Senate. When progress was reported at one o'clock in the morning, Hon. Dr. D. F. Malan, Minister of the Interior, moved that the house go into committee to discuss the Perishable Products Export Control Bill which has been a highly contentious measure in the Assembly.

Amid Laughter

General Jan Christian Smuts, leader of the South African party, rose amid Ministerial laughter and protested against the continuation of the sitting. The debate ensued, nevertheless, and so stubbornly did the Opposition combat the efforts of government members to speak, that closure was applied no less than five times during the space of four and one-half hours.

Mr. Kriege was suspended from the Assembly when he shouted at Hon. E. G. Jansen, the Speaker, "I protest against your conduct." The Speaker's order for Mr. Kriege to leave the House brought cries from the Opposition that "We'll all be turned out."

MEIGHEN ASKS FOR RULING ON COLLINS MATTER

Petition of Peace River Candidate Asking Parliamentary Investigation.

SECOND PETITION.

Examiner of Petitions Says It Should Not Be Received.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 2 (By Canadian Press).—That the petition of James Arthur Collins, Conservative candidates in Peace River constituency at the last general election for an investigation by a parliamentary committee into the vote cast in Peace River, should not be received, was the ruling of Walter Todd, examiner of petitions, read in the House of Commons by Speaker Lemieux yesterday afternoon. The Speaker had already ruled some days ago that another petition could not be accepted, and his ruling was sustained by the House. The opinion of the examiner of petitions sustains the view taken by the Speaker when the other petition was presented on behalf of Mr. Collins.

Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the opposition, declared that the examiner of petitions had taken upon himself more than had been assigned to him by the House. He took upon himself the duties of the speaker and the House itself. When the examiner was to tell the House whether or not it could receive a petition parliamentary practice had come to a bad state.

Mr. Meighn asked the speaker to rule that the report was beyond the powers of the examiner and to instruct him to make a report within his duties.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, said that Mr. Meighen was out of order and that the petition was not debatable until it had appeared in votes and proceedings.

Not Inspired.

Speaker Lemieux said he wished it understood that the report which he had just read was not inspired. He also thought that the question might more properly come up when the report of the examiner of petitions had been published in votes and proceedings.

The prayer in the present petition was practically the same as in the one previously presented by Hon. R. B. Bennett (Cons., Calgary West), the petitioner in each instance claiming the seat for himself. Speaker Lemieux thought that the prayer of the petition was "absolutely irregular and cannot be entertained."

Mr. Meighen stated that he thought a ruling should not be made on the petition itself without an opportunity to present argument. It was proposed to show parliament that the present petition was not the same as the one previously presented, and that it differed in the very respect in which the house at the time of the ruling on the first petition said that it should differ. If the petition was not received by parliament, the courts were utterly incapacitated to deal with the subject matter of the petition: and rejection of the petition meant the "shutting of the door" of parliament and the court "to a man whose seat is usurped by another."

Speaker Lemieux then postponed his decision until the report was printed in the votes and proceedings of the House.

Principle Of Touch That Enables Blind To Read Applied By Experimenter To Making Deaf "Hear"

MONTREAL, Que., June 2 (Canadian Press)—Taking the principle that there is some relation between the sense of touch and hearing, Dr. Max A. Goldstein, Director of the Central Institute for the Deaf, St. Louis, Mo., demonstrated before yesterday's meeting of the American Laryngological, Rhinological and Optological convention here, how the sense of touch, which is applied to the blind in the interpretation of Braille, may be applied to the deaf.

Taking for the demonstration a congenitally deaf child, a girl of about ten years of age, who cannot hear the human voice under any circumstances, Dr. Goldstein used a megaphone, stretching an ordinary wet paper over it to make a diaphragm, in which sounds were uttered. By her sense of touch the child analyzed the sounds produced by the human voice through her finger tips and then reproduced them.

As rapidly as the normal person receives the sound through his ears, the girl received the sensation through her fingers. "She felt what a phonograph needle feels and interpreted it in sound," it was stated.

The system is still in the experimental stage, Dr. Goldstein stated.

SMITH COUNCIL PASSES GRANTS

Will Make Payments To Lakefield and School Fairs.

TO INSPECT ROADS.

The members of the municipal council of the township of Smith met in the County Council Chamber on Saturday, May 29th, at the hour of 10 a.m.

The members were all present with Reeve Middleton in the chair.

The minutes of the last two meetings were read and confirmed.

A communication was received from Mr. McCrae of Norwood, asking for a grant for school fairs within the township.

Messrs. E. G. Mullen and Howard Beavis petitioned council on behalf of the Lakefield Agricultural Society for a grant towards their fair.

On motion of Councillors H. D. Coons and A. B. Mann, council granted the Lakefield Agricutural Society the sum of $40, and to Mr. McCrae for school fairs within the township the sum of $30.

Sanitary Inspector J. A. Jobe reported that he had inspected a property on Wolseley street and found that the plumbing of the house was connected with a discarded well in close proximity to other wells from which daily supplies of drinking water is taken. The matter was referred to the local Board of Health for action.

A petition was received from several residents on Wolseley street asking council to build a cement sidewalk on above street. After discussion, council decided that it could not assume the outlay involved, but was willing to permit the petitioners to lay and finance a cement sidewalk on Wolseley street under the supervision of the road superintendent of the township of Smith.

The following accounts were presented and ordered paid on motion of Councillors Fitzgerald and Mann:

C. O. Northey, salary as assessor, $200; Reeve Middleton, freight on grader blade, 92 cents; Percy T. Udy, telephone account, $1; Registry office, transfer list of lands, $5.91; Examiner Printing Company, notice of Court of Revision, $3.50.

The clerk reported having received the sum of $1,935.35 from the Department of Highways, being the subsidy for expenditures on township roads during 1925.

The councillors are making their annual road inspection on Monday and Tuesday, June 7 and 8.

Bon Ami —makes white shoes like new!

"At last, we've found the way to make Daddy's white shoes really clean!"

Here again—as for so many other things around the house—Bon Ami is just the thing! There's nothing else like it for cleaning white shoes—all kinds except kid. Bon Ami removes all dirt and stains—doesn't hide the blemishes under a chalky paste.

Apply the Bon Ami with a well moistened brush. Let it dry—then dust off with a dry cloth and the task is done—quickly and easily. The shoes are as spotless as new!

NEW APPARATUS FOR FIRE BRIGADE

Lakefield Firemen Now Have Fine Motor Chemical Truck.

LAKEFIELD, June 2.— At seven o'clock on Thursday evening the call of the siren called out the fire brigade for a important ceremony, namely, the formal turning over of the new fire truck by the reeve to the fire department, and the fire chief, A. H. Clarke. This was one of the most important occasions in the history of the brigade as the new truck means 100 per cent greater efficiency and is a valuable asset, not only to the brigade, but to the community. The new truck is a Mason Road King, of two-ton capacity and carries a 70-gallon chemical tank and one hundred feet of chemical hose; 1,200 feet water hose, two half-gallon chemical tanks, two Pyrenes and two ladders, one a 12-foot roof ladder and the other a 20-foot extension ladder, also two axes. The truck is painted bright red and on the bonnet of the motor in large bright lettering are the initials, L. F. D., which should and does raise a spirit of civic pride in the possession of an up-to-date fire truck in a village of Lakefield's size. The truck is equipped with a siren and with necessary tarpaulins and lanterns, these being purchased by the brigade from their funds, besides several small articles of equipment which add to the efficiency of the department.

The work of building the truck was done by Gordon Scriver, the chief engineer, and is a creditable performance. It is complete in every respect and has a number of conveniences and improvements which are not usually to be found on any of the ordinary fire trucks. The truck has also been equipped with an attachment by which the fire engine or the small chemical engine can be fastened on and towed to any given point.

The advantage which this will be to the village cannot be measured in terms of dollars and cents. In case of a fire the brigade can be taken to the fire much more speedily and speed is a very strong argument when one's home is menaced by flames. There is accommodation for eight men on the truck itself and with the cars at the disposal of the brigade the entire department could be "on the job" in the shortest possible time. A few years ago the village had several fires when the loss was entire as only a heap of smoking ashes, or possibly a stark brick wall alone, marked the location of the building. Since the fire department was organized only one house has been totally destroyed and many very bad losses averted. Within the past year $125 covered the fire losses in the village of Lakefield, due to the prompt and efficient work of Lakefield's Fire Department, one of the local institutions which is a benefit to every home and every individual.

Few, if any, villages in Ontario are now as well equipped as Lakefield for fighting fire and this must be a very great source of pride to the civic officials and the brigade and also to all citizens.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO June 2 (Canadian Press) — Wheat turned upward in price today despite an unexpected setback at Liverpool and notwithstanding beneficial rains both north and south of Canadian line. Anxiety over adverse crop developments in regard to Kansas and Nebraska wheat had much to do with the lighting of values. Chicago closing prices for wheat were irregular, 3-8c net lower to 5-8c advance; with corn 1-4 to 1-2c down; oats unchanged to 1-4c to 3-8c off and provisions showing 17 to 35 cents gain.

Active buying on the part of houses with eastern connections was a notable late feature in the wheat market. At first, however, the trend here was downward, chiefly owing to the sharp decline at Liverpool. On the other hand, Chicago unofficial estimates on the 1926 domestic yield of wheat proved to be about as had been expected and made a bullish showing as compared with the outlook a month ago. An outstanding circumstances to selling for trade and Cuban account, influenced by more liberal offerings in the spot market. Prices declined two to four points for active positions, near month showing the maximum decline, but covering and new outside buying caused a rally in late trading, with the close three points lower to one point net higher. Approximate sales 56,000 tons. July closed 2.43c; Sept. 2.56c; Dec. 2.70c; Jan., 2.72c; March, 2.77c.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Trade opened fairly active, with prices steady to strong at this week's advance of 15c to 25c on choicest butcher cattle. Export trade continues quiet, though shipments for seaboard will probably amount to about 700 cattle, mostly billed through. Local packers are taking choice steers, and prices so far do not appear to have suffered any in this class from lack of export demand. Selected choice heavy steers sold up to $8.50. Prices are firm in all classes of butchers. Trade slowed up a little towards midday.

Hogs unsettled, but prospects steady at $13.90 f.o.b.

Domestic butcher good and active. Choice butcher steers firm at $7.25 to $7.75. Extra choice selected butcher steers up to $8. Choice heifers $6.75 to $7.50. Medium and common steady.

Choice fat cows firm, $5.50 to $6.50.

Bulls, firm; choice butcher, not too heavy, $4.25 to $5.75; medium and heavy, $4.25 to $4.75.

Calves firm, $11 to $13, tops.

Lambs steady to firm, choice, $9 to $15. Choice wool, $14 to $15.

Sheep, yearlings, choice, $8 to $9.50.

Hogs, $13.90 f.o.b. Market unsettled.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN

MIINEAPOLIS, June 2 (Canadian Press) — Flour unchanged to 10 cents lower at $9.00 to $9.10 a barrel. Shipments 39,350 barrels.

Bran, $22.00.

Wheat, No. 1 northern, $1.52 7-8 to $1.56 7-8; July $1.45 7-8; Sept., $1.34 1-2.

Corn, No. 3 yellow, 64 to 67c.

Oats, No. 3 white, 36 3-8 to 36 7-8

Flax No. 1, $2.21 1-2 to $2.24 1-2.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Man., June 2 (Canadian Press)—Shorts covering, following higher values at Chicago, resulted in the local wheat market regaining early losses, and closing quotations recorded gains ranging from 1-4c to 5-8c with July at $1.47 5-8, and October at $1.30 1-2.

In the early trade, the market acted decidedly heavy, and under short selling July prices declined 1 1-2c under Monday's close. Buyers were rather difficult to find during the first part of the day but there was not sufficient supplies to fill the demand later without bidding prices up. Exporters and seaboard houses were moderate buyers.

There was a little export trade in oats yesterday, but other coarse grains showed little feature. Light wheat offerings hampered active trade.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., June 2 (Canadian Press)—Foreign bids for Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday were unsatisfactory to local exporters and the export trade was extremely quiet. The domestic demand was also limited, but prices were unchanged.

The feature of the flour trade was the weaker feeling that developed for spring wheat grades and prices were reduced thirty cents per barrel. Prices are now $1.70 per barrel below the coresponding date last year. The market was quiet. The winter wheat situation was easier but there was no change announced in values.

Owing to the increased production of millfeed of late an easier feeling prevailed and prices were reduced $2.00 per ton. Prices for sandard grades of rolled oats were well maintained under a fair demand.

The demand for potatoes continued steady and the feeling was firmer owing to the small offering but prices showed no change.

The egg trade was active and firm. The receipts were 3,690 cases.

An easier feeling developed in the butter market and prices were reduced 1-4 cents per pound. The receipts were 1,221 packags.

A moderate amount of business was worked in cheese and prices were maintained. The receipts were 9,444 boxes.

A fair business was transacted in beans and prices ruled steady with carlots of choice white hand-picked quoted at $2.20 per bushel, and broken lots at $2.30 to $2.40 per bushel.

PONTYPOOL NEWS

PONTYPOOL, June 2.— Mr. Albert Stewart, blacksmith, and Richardson Bros., have installed new gasoline tanks.

Mr. George Graham is in very poor health. He was gassed overseas, the effects of which are still with him, causing the trouble.

Mr. William Northcotte passed suddenly away on Saturday last. Deceased, for half a century or more, was a farmer at McCrea's Church, his farm lands coming close to that sacred edifice, was well known and highly esteemed. For several years past he has lived with his son, Wilbert, of Hamilton. Interment took place at Hamilton, Monday, May 17.

The Trustee Board of Pontypool Church met at the parsonage Monday evening. All members present, with the exception of one. Mr. Geo. Biggs was appointed as a truetee.

Plans were laid for anniversary services June 6, followed by an entertainment.

Mrs. Thos Cowling, who has been confined to her bed for a year and a half, passed away on the morning of May 28. We extend to Mr. Cowling the sincerest sympathy in his sad bereavement.

The ladies' softball team and their manager, Mr. J. Payne, are to be congratulated on the showing they made in Millbrook on May 24. The team played splendid ball and are a heavy batting crew, and after a few more practices should put up a pretty fair argument with any other team. It would not be fair to pick out any stars, but Miss E. Scott, catcher, and Miss Mae Frick, pitcher, made a splendid battery and played errorless ball. The lineup was: Mae Frick, pitcher; Ella Scott, catcher; Marjory Boicey, 1st base; Lily Barwell, 2nd base; M. Smith, 3rd base; M. Beal; s. s.; I. Payne, r. f.; E. Wright, c. f.; A. Burnstein, l. f.

Chic Simplicity Achieved in Taffeta

The supremacy of taffeta is again acknowledged in this quaint and feminine little frock, which uses a demure collar of eyelet embroidery to lend a softening touch. The accepted silhouette for the taffeta dress is here seen in the tight bodice fastening in the centre front, and the full, bouffant skirt, shirred several times before being joined to the bodice. The shoulders are of the kimono type and lend themselves admirably to the new vogue for sleeveless frocks. The pattern provides long sleeves if desired, as pictured in the small back view, and they are gathered into narrow wrist-bands. NO. 1361 is for the miss and little woman and is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 18 years (36 bust) requires 3 yards 36-inch taffeta; long sleeves ⅛ yard additional; collar ⅛ yard contrasting; ribbon for belt 2½ yards one inch wide. Price 20 cents

PAPERING

The wall paper man's been ahangin' around, an' changin' the looks of the place. A swish and a swash is his musical sound, and a paste brush is settin' the pace.

He's littered the dining room, kitchen and hall, but that's part of his bus'ness, I guess. The paper scraps linger wherever they fall, and add to the terrible mess.

When father comes home—say, it isn't so nice. He just has to climb his way through. A place to sit down? Well, he has to look twice. There's nothing, in comfort, to do.

And mother—she's makin' the best of the scene. She knew that it had to be done, if ever the household would really be clean. She's glad that the task is begun.

The only real thrill that the papering brings is one that the little kids get. They're messin' around in the paper man's things, and oh, do they like it? You bet!

English women golfers have taken to plus fours, identical, to all intents and purposes, to those worn by men golfers.

ANOTHER "MAIN STREET."

Want a new book "which is for to be read" on spring evenings, with an apple-blossom breeze cooling you on the front porch, and imbuing you with enough energy to make you feel that "you ought to do something," but not the mending? Well, "The Pride of the Town," by Dorothy Walworth Carman, is the book you want. About Hypatia and Christopher who, much in love, marry and expect to conquer the world. She with her poetry. He with his music. But Main Street gets 'em! The Ladies' Aid societies, Better Babies' campaigns, cranky relatives with whom they live who "don't like music in the house when we're trying to read the paper"—well, read it!

THE COOK'S SANDWICHES.

In the book is Rainbow, the cook, who is glum and dour on the day of Hypatia's announcement luncheon because she was not allowed to make the sandwiches. "But Mrs. Jarde had known that Rainbow's sandwiches were formed for service and not thin elegance."

NOT LIKE THIS!

Rainbow believed in "fillin' sandwiches." Hunks of spiced ham, for instance, with the rind left on, and the bread full-sliced. Really dainty sandwiches for engagement parties "'n sich" should have the crusts cut off and the sandwiches cut into triangles, little squares, or fancy shapes with special cutters.

TRY THIS!

Cream cheese and minced apricot sandwiches, for instance, would not have registered with Rainbow at all! Made like this. Mix equal parts cream cheese and the pulp made from pressing stewed or canned apricots, well drained, through a sieve. Add mayonnaise and finely chopped nuts and spread between buttered thin slices of bread.

QUEEN MOTHERS-IN-LAW.

Queen Mary of all the Britains must not be a bad sort of mother-in-law even if her hats do leave much to be desired. This is deduced from the story of the queen asking that her very first little grand-daughter be named after the mother, Lady Elizabeth, wife of the queen's second son, the Duke of York. All Britain expected that the child would be named "Mary" for its queenly grandmother, but grandmama spoke up and sweetly asked that the child might be named for its own mother. Thinking of children we know who bear such cognomens as Prunella and Cruller and Iphigenie "after grandma," we can think of many a daughter-in-law who might like Queen Mary for a mama-in-law.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

THE TICKET THAT TURNED TO A TRICK.

The Twins stood on the corner in Shut-Eye Town for quite a while, watching all the queer people go silently by.

"No wonder the Fairy Queen said that Inco probably came here," said Nick to Nancy. "An elephant with pink roses all over him isn't half as queer as eggs that bend, and daisies in silk hats, and gentlemen that turn into lobsters and snap their fingers at you."

"I should say not," said Nancy. "I wonder where the Forty Winks went!"

That reminded Nick of the pink tickets. "We'd better be using these," he remarked. "They won't be any good tomorrow."

With that he reached into his pocket for his ticket. But behold, no matter how much of it he pulled out, always some stayed in. It was like taking hold of the end of a spool of thread.

He kept pulling and pulling and pulling until he had quite ten yards and a half of pink ticket in his hands, with dear knows how much more to come.

Nancy reached into her pocket for her ticket, too, but Nick stopped her. "You'd better not," he said. "I don't know what to do with all I have now. It must be made of Grade A Number one rubber like the streets."

"Silly! Of course I'm not," said a voice suddenly, and to the Twins' amazement the ticket grew a head that curled itself around and looked at them with great pink eyes. "If you would just read what it says on me you could see that I am merely doing my duty. Look at the sixth line below the dashes!"

The printing on the ticket seemed to grow big all at once like printing on a page when you hold a magnifying glass over it. The sixth line said, "This ticket will take the owner to any place in Drowsy Land."

"Well, what of it," said Nick. "What has that got to do with you stretching out so long I can't hold you in my two hands."

"Lots," said the ticket. "Let me go, and then see what happens. I can't take you any place, can I, if you're going to hold onto me so tight. Where should you like to go?"

"Just any place at all," said Nick thoughtlessly, never dreaming what his words meant.

"That's three stations off," said the pink ticket. "Lay me down on the ground and see what happens."

So Nick let go the ticket, and instantly it spread itself along the ground in a straight line and turned into a railroad track. And Nancy and Nick found themselves in a neat little car, rolling smoothly along on two long black lines that had turned into tracks.

"I see now why they say that tickets take you places," said Nancy. "Isn't this fine!"

Soon Shut-Eye Town was far behind with all its queer people. And the Twins forgot to wonder about the foolish things they had seen. They kept looking to the right and left this way and that for some sign of Inco and Flops. They passed an orchard where dreams were growing and a snore factory, and a yawning cave. And they also passed a sandy hill marked, "Private! Keep off! Sandman."

"I suppose," said Nancy, "that is sleepy sand."

"It is," said the ticket. "But here we are. This is your station. It is called Any Place At All! Hop out!"

With that it curled itself up and jumped into Nick's pocket.

A Garçon and a Garçonne Costume with Bosoms

Two minds with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one, two costumes that are as alike as the law allows for twins, or near-of-an-age brother and sister. Brother's trousers are straight and sister's panties are gathered bloomer fashion. A bit of a flare, an extra inch or two of length is the difference between brother's blouse and sister's frock. Both express themselves in the same materials and colors—the fresh pinks, blues, greens and yellows of checked gingham and chambray, of linen and cotton broadcloth. For an only daughter you can use prints in cotton, sateen or challis, and for a Singleton-in-sons cotton rep and poplins are smart.

The Examiner does not sell these patterns.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

CANAPES AND COLD SOUPS.

Hot soups do not appeal on warm days. Grapefruit are a little out of season, so cold soups and canapes must take their place. The canapes are easily made and the toast on which they are spread should be delicately made after the crusts are removed. If mayonnaise is used, avoid butter, as fats are heating.

For shrimp canapes open, drain, and break in halves a small can of shrimp. Take the little intestine from the back of the shrimp and break it lengthwise. Add a teaspoonful of onion juice to three tablespoonfuls of French dressing, and marinate the shrimp in it for twenty minutes. Then arrange them on the toast rounds, add a teaspoonful of chopped celery leaves and mask in a little white mayonnaise. Garnish with a stuffed olive.

In making a canape of chicken livers, boil until tender, chop fine, season with a little pepper, salt, a few drops of onion juice, a little melted butter and a little currant jelly. Spread on lightly buttered toast rounds and garnish with a spray of fresh watercress.

A fruit canape may be made of fresh fruits cold and inviting as an appetizer. Take one banana, eight fresh strawberries and one apple. Chop all together, season with a little salt, a chopped mint leaf, a little sugar, a teaspoonful of lemon juice and just enough white manonnaise to moisten. Spread on the four toast rounds and garnish with a whole berry rolled in powdered sugar and with its hull left on.

The cold soups include chicken and clam broths, topped with a spoonful of whipped cream. Jellied tomato soup, jellied calf's foot broth, consomme, fresh green pea cream soup, and the different fruit soups.

A GIRL of TODAY

"HE DIDN'T MEAN IT."

"I got along splendidly at Mortons, Mr. Hathaway, thanks to you," I answered his question.

"You've nothing to thank me for, Miss Dean."

"Yes, I have. You see I gave your name as a reference and it worked so well that I worked all morning."

"Have you girls had your luncheon?"

"Yes, indeed, and I must go right back and punch that old time clock."

As Mamie and I started out, Mr. Hathaway held me back for a moment and told me that Jerry had been making an awful fuss about what had happened to me the day before.

"One would have thought, my dear, to hear Jerry talk, that you were in danger of being murdered."

"Well, I got this anyway," and I pulled my dress away and showed him the red mark that was still about my throat.

"My God, girl, did they choke you like that?"

"Yes."

"Jerry should never have given you that expensive bag, and having accepted it you should not have carried it every day. By the way, let me give you a little advice, Miss Dean. Of course, you know that you are a very pretty girl, and my son is a very susceptible as well as a very impetuous young man. But being young his ardor cools as quickly as it heats. If you want real happiness you should allow some older man to pilot you about."

"I don't think you are very nice, Mr. Hathaway, to say such things about your own son. I am very fond of Jerry. He has asked me to marry him, and maybe I will."

"Jerry has asked you to marry him?"

"Yes. Is there anything strange about that?"

"Only that I am sure he doesn't mean it—Oh, you need not try to stop me," he said rapidly as I held up my hand. "I'd say it of any man, my dear, that I thought was playing fast and loose with you. Sometime I will explain myself further."

I didn't dare to raise my eyes. I just sped out the door. I stopped a moment to talk with Mamie about my room. The moment I mentioned it she said "You mustn't think of going away from me. I must have someone to talk to, and I'll tell mother that if she doesn't act all right with you I'll run away with Buddy Tremaine. Come back tonight as though nothing had happened."

TRY MAGNESIA FOR STOMACH TROUBLE

To Neutralize Acidity and Fermentation. Prevents Indigestion, Sour Gassy Stomach

People who suffer from indigestion usually have tried pepsin, charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and know these things will not cure their trouble—in some cases do not even give relief.

But before giving up to chronic dyspepsia, just try the effect of a little Bisurated Magnesia — not the ordinary commercial carbonate, citrate of milk, but pure Bisurated Magnesia, which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powder or tablet form.

Take a teaspoonful of the powder or four compressed tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in the stomach which now causes your food to ferment and sour, making gas, wind flatulence, heartburn and the bloated or heavy, lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat. You can enjoy your meals without a fear of indigestion.

Constipation

Undermines Children's Health

Your doctor will tell you that constipation is what makes so many growing children sickly. Poisons from the waste matter spread through their little bodies and lower their resistance to disease. A little Nujol every night will keep them regular as clockwork.

Mothers are the best friends of Nujol. When their children's health is at stake, they use Nujol—the remedy that medical authorities prescribe because it is so safe, so gentle, and so natural in its action.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body.

Nujol makes up for a deficiency of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular bowel movements without griping.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

Ask your druggist for Nujol.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

THURSDAY, JUNE 3.

The sidereal operations make for a day of rather perplexing problems. While the excellent position of Saturn may be instrumental in removing tenacious obstructions long thwarting the most earnest endeavors and persistency, still the way is not yet made clear for the desired progress. The mind may be well equipped and the initiative rampant, but fraud or misrepresentations menace and new arrangements and projects may be assailed. Those in the employment of others may also be under an ill sway, but a little further patience and application may win.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of conflicting experiences. Although a long-obstructing obstacle will be removed, yet certain factors may continue to thwart and obstruct temporarily. Make new arrangements cautiously, on guard against fraud and misrepresentation. If in employment be very careful not to put the position in jeopardy. The mind may be in excellent trim for meeting menacing conditions. A child born on this day may be industrious, persevering and have excellent mental equipment, but should be careful in employment.

Cod Liver Extract In Sugar Coated Tablets Puts On Flesh and Builds Them Up.

In just a few days—quicker than you ever dreamed of—these wonderful health building, flesh creating tablets called McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets will start to help any thin, underweight little one.

After sickness and where rickets are suspected they are especially valuable.

Most people know that from the livers of the lowly codfish vitamines of the first class are extracted—the kind that help all feeble underweight men, women and children.

Try these wonderful tablets for 30 days and if your frail, puny child don't greatly benefit—get your money back.

A very sickly child, age 9, gained 12 pounds in 7 months.

Ask McDermid Drug Co., McDermid and Jury, Bond's Drug Store, or any druggist, for McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets—as easy to take as candy, and 60 tablets, 60 cents.

What would the audience think, if the two reel comedy led up to the funniest art of all, and then the screen announced that the rest of the thing was so funny that the camera operator forgot to turn the camera crank?

"Laugh again and you are fired!" cried the movie director as he tore his hair, and demanded of the operator, "how do you suppose we will ever make a complete story, if you can't grind while it is being done? Now, turn that crank and we will do it over again?"

What was the operator laughing at? Thats the point. Listen.

We had been sent into a wildwood sort of place, to take some movies of wild life, and we were in a swamp just at this stage of the game, trying to get for the public, a reel of the daily doings of Mrs. Sputtermuch, the Horned Grebe, a kind of fish-eating duck that makes its nest in a swamp.

There we were, in the mucky swamp, camera and all, concealed behind a scren of evergreen branches.

Mrs. Sputtermuch was sitting on her eggs. The nest, which was not more than a few feet from the blind, was composed of half rotten reeds. It was a floating, raft-like mass. We could see her horns, and we took plenty of film showing her turning her eggs. She would cover her eggs, very carefully, with dead reeds, whenever she would leave the nest. We added some reeds ourselves, as an additional decoration, while she was away fishing, but she resented the fancy work and threw all our work into the swamp.

At length it became time to show some pep, so the director arranged for one helper to come out in the open where she could see him. Nobody knew what she would do, but the camera was to get it all so that the world would know. The man stepped out! he made a fake attack on her! She hopped off the nest and did a war dance in front of the camera!

Can you imagine a duck dancing on the water in front of a movie camera? She could give some of the Follies girls a point or two. Everyone howled and laughed, including the camera man, who forgot to turn the crank altogether, until the show was over.

After the director had threatened to discharge us all, he again called "Camera!" and stepped out himself, to make love to Mrs. Sputermuch. She flew at him in such a rage that he fell kerflop in the swamp, making a lovely movie of snapping duckbills, banging wings, and wallowing directors; and the operator recorded it all, but nobody but an audience would dare laugh.

"The sub-title of that will be 'Mrs. Sputtermuch, the Horned Grebe, defending her nest with hammer and tongs'; we had better get out here before she smashes the camera" said the somewhat dirty director.

GOVERNMENT KEEPS FREEDOM OF ACTION

Must Reserve Complete Liberty Because Coal Proposals Not Answered.

LONDON, June 2 Canadian Press)—Premier Baldwin yesterday announced in the House of Commons that the Government was reserving complete liberty of action regarding the tie up in the coal fields. The Premier stated that the government must reserve complete liberty in view of the fact that its coal proposals, including an offer of a £3,000,000 subsidy, had brought no response from either miners or coal owners. His statement was an answer to a question by former Premier Ramsay MacDonald, Labor leader, concerning the status of the subsidy.

FIND SILVER ORE.

In Himsworth Township — May Cause Mining Boom.

Reports continue of finds of high grade silver ore east of Trout Creek. Samples have been exhibited which are said to have assayed as high as two thousand dollars to the ton. Prospector Abbott of Toronto, is working on this particular claim and values persist for the depth of four feet he has worked on the vein. If the reports are as true as we anticipate, this district may be on the verge of a real mining boom. Promising gold and silver values are also being developed in that section by the Serra S. Bruno Mining Co., of Trout Creek.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

WHEN LITTLE GREEN FROG PLAYED "HOOKEY."

Mama Green Frog sighed as she kissed her baby Green Frogs goodbye. She was sure that all of them, with the exception of Greenie Green Frog, would hop right off to school like good frogs should. Greenie Green Frog, who was quite a bit over-grown for his age, liked nothing better than to sneak away from his brothers and sisters and spend his day frolicking around the stones. He didn't like to go to the Froggie school under the big rocks, with Mrs. Striped Perch as the teacher. Greenie Green Frog would play "hookey," whenever he could get the chance.

"What's the use of learning how to spell and turnover and chew and jump?" he'd croak when Tilly Turtle would scold him for not attending his class.

"Just the same there are a great many things a nice Froggie should learn," snapped Tilly Turtle. "Well, it's not for me to worry over; you are not my youngster" and away she swam to a rock above the water to bask in the sun.

"No one's going to stick their head in trouble unless—" began Greenie Green Frog. Just then a great long line dangled in front of him with a nice juicy wriggling worm on the very end of it. "Ho, ho, Miss Tilly Turtle is trying to fool me. Well, I'll show her I can nibble the end of that worm and not get caught." He swam very carefully around to get a nip of the worm. All of a sudden the line gave a jerk and Greenie Green Frog's foot happened to be in the way and before he knew what had happened he felt a sharp pain shoot through his leg. Greenie Green Frog found himself hooked by the left foot. Quick as a wink, he hopped under a stone and held on with all his might. The fisherman gave a quick jerk, the line snapped from the hook and went flying through the water, leaving the big black hook sticking under Greenie Green Frog's left foot.

"Oh, dear!" exclaimed Tilly Turtle as she dropped in the water right beside Greenie Green Frog. "I'm too late. I just awakened and saw that boy with his fishing line, but I couldn't get down in time to warn you."

Tilly Turtle tried her best to get the hook out of Greenie Green Frog's foot but she couldn't. She hurried over to Mama Green Frog's house to tell her, and between the two of them they helped poor little Greenie Green Frog home.

Mama Green Frog tucked Greenie Green Frog in bed while Tilly Turtle swam for old Doctor Dog fish. When he arrived he quickly cut the terrible black hook out of Greenie Green Frog's left foot.

"A little more and you would have found yourself in steaming hot soup," he chuckled. "Well, folks that won't go to school and learn must learn by experience."

Greenie Green Frog never said a word, but he gulped real hard when his Mama kissed him instead of scolding him as he knew he deserved. But that was the last time Greenie Green Frog ever played hookey from school.

Stock Exchange Dull Despite Active Trading

TORONTO, June 2 (Canadian Press).—Despite fairly active trading, this morning's session of the Toronto Stock Exchange was a rather dull affair. Price changes were not large and were almost equally distributed between losses and gains. Smelters and Atlantic Sugar were the active issues, though in neither was there large turnovers. Smelters eased a point at 210, but sugar firmed an eighth at 25. British Columbia Fishing was one of the strongest issues during the session, advancing 1 1-4 at 68, and International Nickel sold up seven-eights at 36 1-2. Abitibi eased three-quarters at 73, and Brazilian five-eights at 96 1-2.

Wheat Prices Hold Firm Supply About Exhausted

CHICAGO, Ills., June 2. Canadian Press. — Wheat prices developed a firmness to-day after initial declines that were associated with unresponsive cables and with rains in Kansas. On the other hand Kansas official reports told of rapid decline in Kansas wheat prospects and further adverse crop advices from western half of Nebraska were current. After opening 1-4 to 5-8c lower, wheat rallied to above yesterday's finish. Corn and oats were easy, corn opening 1-8c off to 1-8 up, and later sagging all around. Provisions were higher.

A good deal of notice was taken to-day to a statement that our supplies of old wheat have about reached the point of exhaustion, and that at least six weeks must elapse before any new wheat will reach Chicago. According to a Chicago trade authority clean-up of old supplies of wheat prevails throughout the world. Meanwhile future delivery contracts in this country continue to sell at more than shipping parity under Liverpool.

Motors Little Stronger On New York Exchange

NEW YORK, June 2 (Canadian Press)—Mixed price movements, reflecting play of opposing speculative forces, characterized today's stock market, with day's advantage apparently on side of operators working for higher prices. The United States Steel Common was well supported above 123 despite indications of further reduction in steel schedules this month. Motors also received better support, General Motors moving up over two points and Mack Trucks and Willys Overland selling a point or so higher.

Oil shares apparently were unaffected by the weekly report of the American Petroleum Institute, showing an increase of over 23,000 barrels in daily average of gross crude oil production last week.

Teck Hughes Drops On Weak Exchange

TORONTO, June 2 (Canadian Press). — The undertone on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning was distinctly depressed and light trading was confined to a comparatively small list. A feature was the selling down of Teck Hughes which more than lost its advance of yesterday, when it dropped to 360 closing at noon at 362. Kirkland Lake eased four at 114, Dome 15 at 14.10, Beaver 2 at 74, and Millcrest 1 1-2 at 12. Gold Hill eased 3 at 46 1-2 cents. Noranda was one of the very few firm spots, gaining 20 at 10.50.

"Oh! I thought you were Mr. Jones"

It's a bad moment—when you realize you've spoken to someone you don't know. Everybody makes mistakes, of course, but no matter how much poise you have, you feel a bit silly anyhow.

The chances are you didn't know Mr. Jones really well—or you'd never have made the blunder. You've never seen anyone you'd actually mistake for your brother or sister or husband or wife, have you? It's casual acquaintance that leads to errors.

People look alike; so do razor strops and flower seeds and hats and pianos. If you want to buy a Jones hat and you know all there is to know about a Jones hat, you're not likely to blunder and get some other hat. The same is true for a Jones piano or a Jones razor strop.

The easiest way to know everything there is to know about such things is to read advertising. The advertisements in this newspaper are here to tell you quickly and truthfully the main facts about the things you buy and use. They are here to prevent you from making mistakes. Thistle Lose Trophy After Holding It Three Years

THISTLES DEFEATED IN PHELAN TROPHY

Lost Cup After Holding It For Three Years in Succession.

After a day of showers a beautiful set in for the Phelan soccer cup tie at King Edward Park last night, when the Masseys whacked the cup holders, The Thistle, to the tune of 5 goals to 1. It was decided that corner kicks would also count in this game, but there was no necessity with such a score. The winners now meet the De Laval on Saturday at King Edward Park in the semi-final of this trophy. The Thistles held the Phelan Cup for three years in succession.

First Half

Opening exchanges were very even, with only the Masseys gaining the lead by two corner kicks against their opponents' none. A break-away by Foster, along the left wing, resulted in that played landing the ball close in below the cross-bar. Griffine fisted the ball up in the air against the cross-bar to record the opening goal. A few minutes later, Willis sent an accurate centre across the goal mouth, where Laidler missed a golden opoprtunity. Each goal was visited in turn, although Griffine was the busy man, handling shots from all angles. Eventually his charge fell to Jack Montgomery, who rapped a lightning shot past the Thistle custodian. At this point, the velocity of the wind favored the "Jags" and it was fully demonstrated when Joe Mayette shot from far out, to completely deceive the Massey goal keeper with a bouncing ball. Play was in midfield when half time arived.

Massey 2, Thistle 1.

Half Time

The elevens changed around to continue the play. After ten minutes' play the Thistle had only ten players. As the tussle went on, it was very noticeable that Foster was dominating the play in his own wing. He was successful, all within the next fifteen minutes, in putting the issue out of doubt with two smart goals on his own. The Thistle, thereafter, were never dangerous at any time. Five minutes from the finish, Willis scored a nice goal from the touch line, thus making .t

MURRELL UPSETS AUSTRALIAN PLANS AND FORCES A TIE GAME

Side Which Bats First in Three Day Game Has Option.

ONE CENTURY.

Was Finally Dismissed When He Had Scored 54 Runs.

LONDON, June 2 (Canadian Press)—The tenth game of the present tour of the Australian cricketers was drawn yesterday afternoon when, thanks to the sturdy batting of Murrell, wicket-keeper of Middlesex, the tourists were forced to go in for a second innings and the contest finally petered out. According to the laws of cricket the side which bats first in a three-day match and leads by 150 runs on the first innings has the option of requiring the other side to follow-on. The chance thus presented of a complete and decided victory for the leading team becomes something worth striving for, and in the case of the team threatened with a follow-on, something to be fought against. It was Murrell who upset the Australians' plans today when he struggled robustly to decrease Middlesex deficit to under the 150 mark. He succeeded. When he was finally dismissed by Grimmett he had scored 54 runs, and robbed the Australians of their right by bringing the score for Middlesex to exactly 10 runs under the necessary amount.

The scores were:

Australians, first innings, 489.

Middlesex, first innings, 349.

The Australians were obliged to go again to the bat, and in an uninteresting finish they had driven out 239 for five wickets when the stumps were drawn.

When play ended on Monday, Middlesex were at bat and had scored 233 runs with six wickets down. G. T. S. Stevens was not out at 114. Today he was joined by Nigel Haig, and the game was resumed with these two gathering in some good runs. Stevens batted steadily and was well supported until Haigs' wicket fell to a catch by Woodfull off Gregory at 21. A. R. Tanner was the next man up, but he was quickly retired, being snapped up by Andrews to Gregory's delivery. It was then that Murrell came to bat.

He and Stevens staged a long partnership, facing the Australians' bowling with dogged determination. They slammed over many fours, Stevens adding a quartette of these to his overnight total of eight, and Murrell contributing no less than ten in his 65 minutes at the wicket.

The Middlesex citadel yielded before lunch, however, Stevens was bowled by H. L. Collins, the visitors' captain, and Durston was the last man in. He had just reached a total of three runs when Murrell's stumps were crashed by Grimmett, and the entire team was out. The situation, however, had been saved as far as Middlesex was concerned, for the Australians again took the bat ten minutes before lunch.

From this moment all interest went out of the game and the match fizzled out tamely.

Woodfull, displaying a curious mixture of forcefulness and caution, and evidently impressed by the disaster that had befallen him in the first innings when Durston returned him to the pavillion with three runs, batted with great success for two and a half hours and in that time he made exactly a century. He was partnered by Taylor, and together they gave a fine exhibition until Taylor fell to the lightning fast bowling of Allen at 28. Andrews was next up and was retired at eighteen. Collins followed, but was dismissed from a catch by Durston off Tanner's bowling when he had knocked out a couple of runs. Ryder's display was little better and it was not until Oldfield, who had succumbed previously at four, and Gregory got together that the game livened up. Woodfull's wicket had fallen to Lee in a catch by Murrell. Gregory and Oldfield played out the time.

HEAVY SCORING FEATURES GAME

First Man Up Knocks a Home Run in Baraca-Brinton Game.

Last night, in Central Park, the Baracas defeated the Brinton Carpet team 16 to 13. The Brints were the winners up until the end of the seventh innings, and then the arm of their pitcher gave out, and the two pitchers which relieved him were not able to stop the Baracas from striking the ball all over the park. Dawson, the Baracas pitcher, pitched good ball, but s times was rather wild, walking four men and allowing 22 hits to Bishop's 16 in seven innings. Bishop walked one man and Crippe two. W. Crippe of the Brints knocked a home run the first man at the bat. The errors were few, there being three against the winners and four against the losers. The Brints had eight men left on bases, while the Baracas had only one.

DEMPSEY MUST SIGN.

Before June 22 For Defence of Title Against Negro Challenger.

NEW YORK, June 2 (Canadian Press).—Exercising its prerogative as the supreme court of boxing in New York, the State Athletic Commission yesterday directed Jack Dempsey to sign articles of agreement for a title fight with Harry Wills not later than June 22.

Chairman Farley, Commisioner Muldoon and License Commissioners Colonel John J. Phelan and D. Walker Wear voted in favor of the resolution which was mailed to Dempsey tonight.

Asked to explain the board's unexpected action, Chairman Farley said it was intended to "clear the atmosphere." Boxing observers, however, looked upon it as a further complication in the situation, with Tex Rickard holding Dempsey's contract and presumably moving toward his objective, a title match between Dempsey and Gene Tunney September 16 at the Yankee stadium. The commission, however, Farley said, will "not listen" to proposals for a Dempsey-Tunney contest.

SHOWERS HELD FOR TWO BRIDES

Keene Sunday School Class Gathers at Parsonage For Social.

TEACHER LEAVING.

KEENE, June 2.—A jolly party met at the parsonage last Tuesday evening when the Sunshine and Service Class entertained in honor of the Misses Alice and Lily Chapman, two brides-to-be.

To the strains of the Wedding March, played by Miss Minnie Edwards, Miss Eva Taylor, dressed as groom, and Mrs. Bertha Wilson, as the bride, in white satin with train and veil, and Miss Betty McLauchlin as flower girl, in a pink frock, entered the living-room. Mrs. Wilson carried a "shower bouquet" of kitchen utensils and the wee flower girl a pretty basket of miscellaneous gifts. The "bouquets" and gifts were presented to the brides-to-be, and a merry time followed.

Mrs. A. McLauchlin, who is teacher of the class, as hostess, served a dainty lunch, assisted by her sister, Miss Florence Downs, who was visiting her. Owing to Mrs. McLauchlin's early departure from Keene, this is probably the last time the class will meet with her socially, and its members were reminiscent of the many happy evenings spent in her home.

The class wished Mrs. McLauchlin every happiness in her new home.

Canoeing, as a recognized recreation, is definitely traced back to the time when John McGregor, an Englishman, conceived the idea of building a boat that should combine the sea-going qualities of the Esquiman kyack with the constructional strength and nice finish of scientific workmanship.

KING GEORGE WILL ATTEND EPSOM DERBY

England's Premier Jockey Will Be a Spectator.

NINETEEN COLTS.

Most Cosmopolitan Race Meeting in the World.

LONDON, June 2. Canadian Press —The Epsom Derby will be run for the 143rd time over the historic course on Epsom Downs this afternoon. Nineteen colts, trained to the minute, are ready to race over the mile and a half course of the great classic.

For the first time in some years, Steve Donoghue, England's premier jockey, will be a spectator. He declared recently that the horses offered him for a mount had no chance of winning, so he declined to ride.

The great classic already has been labelled the "petrol Derby" as, owing to coal restrictions through the coal strike, there will be greater use of motor vehicles to carry the racing fans to the annual festival on the famous Downs. The police are expecting close to 100,000 vehicles on the road to Epsom to-day, and parking accommodation has been market off for miles around the course.

The scenes on the road furnish a striking contrast to those of years ago when donkey carts, pony cars, coaches and horse drawn charabancs formed an endless stream.

King George is going by road despite the congestion, as he does not wish to give the railways any more trouble in rigging up a special train while the coal strike is in progress.

Coaching parties will be numerous. The famous Tattenham Corner will for the first time in years, be the quietest spot on the race course, instead of the busiest and noisest, as the railway terminus there will be closed.

One feature of this year's Derby is the concentration into a compact camp of the Gipsy caravans, which heretofore have been permitted to spread themselves all over the downs this will gigve more space to automobiles and horse-drawn vehicles.

Scores of Canadians will see the derby, its betting rings and the old-grandstand under present conditions for the last time, as in 1927 there will be a new stand, capable of holding 20,000 spectators.

The crowds who will view the race will be as usual composed of all sorts and conditions of society from cabinet ministers and princes to the humblest British worker, for many of the workmen take a day off for the event. Oliver Wendell Holmes years ago wrote that every clergyman, preacher and Sunday school teacher ought to go once to the derby to learn what sort of a world he really lived in. Many have followed his advice and this year will be no exception. Families will make a picnic of it, lovers of horse racing are arriving from continental centres by airplane, and people of all nationalities will join together to make the derby the most cosmopolitan race meeting in the world.

The announcement that Oxford University has decided to give a full Blue for hockey is the latest official recognition of the place which the great game has won among winter sports in England. But it is, perhaps, a little belated; Cambridge University conceded the ull Blue to hockey eighteen years ago. The first hockey match between the two universities was in 1890.

SPEAKER TELLS OF CATHEDRAL AT WINCHESTER

Rev. Canon Braithwaite Addresses Boys of Grove School.

LAKEFIELD, June 2.—Canon Braithwaite and his daughter of Winchester, England, were week end guests of Rev. and Mrs. Walter Cox at the Rectory. Winchester was the cathedral town nearest Mrs. Cox's home in England and she was present at the Thanksgiving service in 1912 when the cathedral was restored. Canon Braithwaite, who is an old friend of Mr. and Mrs. Cox, had a charming personality and made numerous friends during his brief stay in the village en route to the Pacific coast. This is his second visit to Canada as he made the transcontinental trip in 1891. Miss Braithwaite, who is making her first visit is delighted with Canada and the friendly spirit of the Canadians.

Canon Braithwaite will visit his brother, Dr. Braithwaite, in Edmonton, another brother, who was manager of the Bank of Montreal in Calgary at the time of the Canon's former visit who is now living in Montreal and a short time was spent in visiting him. After disembarking from the C.P.R. liner "Melita" on which they made the voyage from the old land.

Illustrated Address.

On Saturday evening Canon Braithwaite gave an illustrated address at "The Grove" on Winchester Cathedral, England. The pictures were especially good and the lecturer told some very interesting anecdotes in the course of his instructive address. As a Canon of this great Cathedral he loves it and his descriptions were first hand and therefore were the more interesting.

When William the Conqueror came to England in 1066 he brought Bishop Wakelyn and made him Bishop of Winchester and he built the great Cathedral about 1093, pulling down the Saxon Cathedral of Berinees. When the cathedral was completed and consecrated all the Bishops of England were present and William the Conqueror, attended. Until the time of Henry III Winchester was the capital of England. It is still one of the most important of the English cathedrals and it has been said that the German Kaiser gave orders during the Great War that neither Westminster Abbey nor Winchester Cathedral should be bombed as he would be crowned King of England in one of them. However he was not crowned in England. Winchester Cathedral, with the exception of St. Peter's, Rome, is the largest Cathedral in Europe and is built, as nearly all the English and French Cathedrals are, in the shape of a cross. The cathedral has a low Norman tower and north and south transepts. It is surrounded by a close wall the gates of which are locked at 9 p.m. in winter and at 10 p.m. in summer. An avenue of limes leads up to the cathedral and makes a beautiful approach. The west front was formerly 40 feet larger with two large towers but in 1370 these were removed and the west front was rebuilt in the perpendicular style. Gloucester Cathedral has even an older example of the perpendicular architecture. The Pilgrim's Porch was shown where the pilgrims went to touch the Shrine of St. Swithin, the patron saint of Winchester. The arches were part of the old chapter house which fell into decay in the 17th century when a greedy bishop took the lead from the roof and sold it.

There are eight chantry chapels in the cathedral and a Lady Chapel behind the high altar. The transets are in the old Norman style. The nave is wonderful with a marvelous stone roof and graining. Bishop William of Wykeham, who was a great architect (the round tower of Windsor Castle was one of his achievements) altered the roof which was originally built, Norman fashion, with a flat wooden roof, and put in the wonderful stone roof which can be seen today.

The perpendicular window in the west front is filled with beautiful glass put in without method or pattern and there is a sad reason for this. When Cromwell and his soldiers pillaged Winchester they broke the great window to pieces and destroyed many sacred emblems and aterward some person with remarkable patience gathered up all the broken glass and collected it and it was put into the window after the restoration. Cromwell stabled his horses in Winchester Cathedral. Only one thing was spared and that was the Chantry Chapel of William of Wykeham who died in 1404. The colonel of Cromwell's army in command of this part of the cathedral was an ex-student at Winchester College and was sworn to protect the tomb of the founder so William's tomb and effigy were unharmed. The face of the effigy is of alabaster and the statue of marble and it is the only thing in England or France which has never been damaged. Three little monks sit at the feet of the statue and while nothing is definitely known it is believed that they are portraits of real monsk of that period. There is a brass tablet put up to the memory of Jane Austen, who is regarded as one of the greatest of English novelists. It is placed just above her tomb. Another authoress, Charlotte M. Yonge has also a tablet in the cathedral.

The font is of black marble from near Tourmai in Belgium, and was brought to Winchester about 1170. There are fourteen of these fonts in England, one of which is in Lincoln Cathedral. The font is carved in a marvellous manner and shows the famous legend of St. Nichols (Santa Claus) giving three bags of gold to an importunate father for his three dowerless daughters.

The screen which divides the choir from the nave was shown from a picture taken on July 4, 1917, when, in honor of the belated entry of the United States into the war, flags of England and the States were hung over the screen, and some person pinned the two together. It is computed that 700,000 Americans passed through Winchested during the period in which they were participants in that great conflict; they regarded Winchester as the old capital of England and the cathedral as the cradle of the church.

The architecture was altered by William of Wykeham from the Norman to the perpendicular.

In the north transept there is a chapel called the Epiphany Chapel, which is kept especially for those who wish to pray or meditate undisturbed by the throngs of sightseers, who are almost constantly in the cathedral.

In one of the crypts there are two wonderful old pillars and arches which are believed to be Saxon and there is also a holy well which was at one time used in pagan rites as the first building on this site was a temple to Diana.

Underneath the great organ is the Chapel of Resurrection which faces north and has no light. The marvellous paintings here have become very tender and efforts are being made for their preservation.

Among the most interesting relics in this great national treasure house are the mortuary chests which hold the bones of early kings enclosed in leaden boxes. There are the bones of Egbert, the first overlord of England, Cnut, the Dane, and Emma, his wife, and many others.

The choir stalls date from 1296 and are sixty in number all differently carved and now black with age.

The tomb of William Rufus is in the middle of the choir. The reredos was built in 1500 and has many carved figures. In the centre is a carving of the crucifixion. The carved figures are modern and are in the main gifts. Queen Victoria gave the statue of King Edward the Confessor. There are also King Alfred, Cnut the Dane, Queen Victoria, and many others. There is a monument to Bishop Aylmer de Valance, halfbrother of Henry III, who was so disliked that he never came to Winchester and when he died in Paris he gave orders that while his body should be buried in Paris, his heart was to be buried at Winchester. This was regarded as a legend but in re-building the statue the heart was found in a leaden case. There are three hearts buried in Winchester Cathedral. There is the old rood screen but the rood or cross is gone and within its screen is the Lady Chapel built as a thankoffering when Prince Arthur, elder brother of Henry VIII was baptized in the Cathedral. The window of the chapel was filled with stained glass on the occasion of Queen Victoria's first jubilee and the reredos of the chapel came from Oberammergau.

There is the chair or foldstool given by the Pope to Queen Mary of England on the occasion of her marriage to Phillip of Spain.

Other monuments are St. George (erected as a memorial to the son of Canon Braithwaite, who lost his life in the Great War), St. Alban, St. Birinus and others, also erected as war memorials.

A window was erected to the memory of Isaac Walton, author of "The Complete Angler" by subscriptions from all over Europe, many being received from Norway.

Owing to the cracking of the foundations the cathedral had to be extensively repaired a few years ago. The work occupied seven years and cost £13,000. It was found the sub soil was peat and the great cathedral was actually resting on a peat bog. Excaavtions were made and a diver employed who could work under the water and he laid the foundation of cement on a solid gravel bed which lay below the bog and the walls were restored by grouting. The work was so thoroughly done that no sign of a crack has appeared since it was completed fourteen years ago. During that period of restoration a service was held for the workmen every Friday afternoon, in the winter in the small round crypt and in the summer out-of doors and every day in the Cathedral a special short collect was used in all the services asking, first, that God would protect the workmen from harm, and second, that people with money would help the work of restoration. In the seven years one hundred and seventy men were employed and, in spite of the great dangers of the undertaking no one was injured and when the books were made up on the completion of the work the cost was found to be £13,000 and the sum of £116,000 had been received, a direct proof of answered prayer.

On St. Swithin's Day (July 15th) 1912 a special service of Thanksgiving was held on the completion of the work of restoration and was attended by the King and Queen, and the Archbishop of Canterbury, who preached the sermon, and many other notable people.

Mr. Mackenzie spoke a few words, thanking Canon Braithwaite for his splendid lecture which had been both interesting and instructive.

St. John's Sunday Services.

Canon Braithwaite of Winchester Cathedral, England, was the special preacher in St. John's church on Sunday morning and took his text from the Gospel according to St. Matthew, 22nd Chapter, and 40th verse: "n these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."

"Our love to God and our love to our neighbor are the principal things in our lives," said the preacher. "Do we, as individuals, love God as we should? We believe in Him or we would not be here in church but St. James says "faith without works is dead" and we can ask ourselves if we love Him as we should and do we serve Him as we ought to do. In great mutual love such as a husband and wife feel for each other there is the giving of one to the other in loving service. God's love is beyond all human conception but are we giving our measure of love and service to Him.

"Our to our neighbor is another thing, we are prone to look for faults in each other, fault finding and the spirit of criticism do not exist where there is love. We all have our faults and human weakness and how much more in keeping with God's commandment would it be to look for the good and ignore the other side.

"It is told that once a dead dog lay in the streets of Jerusalem and was commented on by the passers by. How ugly it was, how it smelt and the negligence of the authorities in allowing such a nuisance to remain in a public place. At last one passed by who said, 'Pearls are not whiter than his teeth.' The bystanders said that it must be Jesus Christ who said that as He was the only peron who could see good in a dead dog. The story may not be true but it is a beautiful thought that our Lord, who is our example in all things, should always see the good even in the most unsightly."

In the evening Canon Braithwaite took his text from the Gospel according to St. Matthew, 4th chapter and part of the 19th verse, "Follow Me."

"This", he said, "was one of the most important of the words of Our Lord during His ministry on earth. Let us look at a very few of the ways of Our Lord in which we should especially follow Him.

"First we have His prayer, Our Lord engaged frequently in prayer, not only the morning and evening prayers but at all times of the day. In that terrible hour in Gethsemme He passed the night in fervent prayer to His Father in heaven. Our prayers should be part of our lives.

Then we should follow Him in kindliness, Our Lord was always kind, to the young children, the aged, the poor or afflicted. He was kind to all. Also we should follow His love of God. He never got away from God and His divine love. All day and every day he walked with His Father.

"Then there was His victory over temptation which is another way we should follow. He kept even His thoughts free for what tempts us more than our thoughts which introduce to us the ideas of sin. Then we should inmitate His fearlessness. When He was going to Jerusalem for last time in His earthly ministry His disciples were afraid of what might happen but He who knew all set His face towards Jerusalem and refused to turn again.

"Let us follow Our Lord and Master in these things and other things will follow. He was our great pattern and we should live close to Him."

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH GOLFERS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO

WALTER HAGEN—IMPORTANT SHOT.

Long driving is not everything, but accurate driving must be considered the most important of all shots.

A well-placed drive enables one to put his second shot on the green. This latter shot, too, must be considered ahead of the approach putt or the mashie-niblick pitch for real art or difficulty.

The pitch over a brook or a trap or a bunker of any sort should not be hard to accomplish. As a matter of fact it is by far the easiest if we only knew it. The hazard frightens the poor duffer, but it does not make the shot hard to accomplish. Any skilled payer can turn this trick 20 or 30 times in succession.

I am inclined to believe that a four-foot putt for a win or a half in a closely contested match will frighten more golfers than the pitch over the hazard. This latter shot calls for a strict compliance with the ancient axiom—keeping the head down. Most good players can remember to do it when there is danger ahead.

Once this shot is learned there should be no trouble in executing it perfectly. More than any other shot in golf, it requires concentration on the work in hand.

What change has been made in the rule relative to a glove being hurled at a batted or thrown ball?

The glove, of course, must come into contact with the batted or thrown ball for the rule to be operative.

If such is the case, the runner or runners, as in the past, shall be entitled to three bases if a batted ball and two if a thrown ball.

Now for the change in the rule made last year; aside from the runner being entitled to the above he may advance further at his own risk.

I doubt if this is a good change. In a sense the rule makes the ball dead and yet makes it in play again after the runners have advanced to the bases to which they are entitled.

It strikes me that definitely making it two bases on a thrown ball and there on a batted ball was the better rule and a sufficient penalty for the offense.

KINGSTON PONIES HERE SATURDAY

Petes Must Win To Stay in Central Ontario Running.

The Kingston Ponies will be here on Saturday for a Central Ontario League fixture with the Petes and unless Manager Johnston's crew want to settle down into the cellar position they'll have to take a fall out of Joe Daley's men. The Ponies with Bubs Britton and Bruce Thompson added to last year's champs are playing great ball and the Petes will have to be on their toes all the way to earn a verdict over them. It is likely that Young, the Kingston right hander, may be sent in against the Petes as Lefty Cairns was due to work against Belleville this evening. The Peterboro gang expect to have their strongest line-up of the year out and realizing how much depends upon a victory they are determined to knock off the Kingston galaxy of stars. The game is called for 3 o'clock sharp.

BILLY EVANS Says

Cobb's Batting.

Ty Cobb may lack some of the speed that featured his play in 1915, when he stole 96 bases, but he still can hit.

His arm may be minus some of the power it once had, thereby enabling fast runners to take liberties at his expense, but he still can hit.

Ty Cobb may not be able to cover the wide expanse of territory he once did as the fleet center fielder of the Detroit Tygers, but he still can hit.

Cobb, after 20 years a big leaguer, is still as great a menace as ever at the bat, despite the fact that only a few months ago he underwent a rather delicate operation for a growth on one of his eyes.

The ability of Ty Cobb to hit all kinds of pitching, right-handed or left-handed, with unerring accuracy, will continue to be one of the wonders of baseball long after he has passed out of the game.

Showed Missouri.

Due to the eye operation that interfered with his spring training, Cobb wasn't physically fit when the season opened.

An early slump into which several of the good batters fell, caused Cobb to shift his lineup in an effort to break the jinx. One of his changes called for Ty Cobb to play centerfield.

In his first appearance he made a single, double and triple, if my memory serves, enabling the Tygers to win the ball game.

A few days later I umpired a ball game at St. Louis in which he made his 1926 debut in that city. It didn't take him long to convince the folks from Missouri that he was as dangerous as ever at the bat.

The first ball pitched to him suited his fancy and he proceeded to park it in the right field bleachers for his first home run of the season. He continued his batting spree throughout the St. Louis series.

Marvelous Hitter.

Cobb, according to the records, is 40 years of age. I broke into the American League at about the same time he did. As a matter of fact, Cobb is the only active player still in the American League, who was connected with the organization when I broke in as an umpire in 1906.

After 20 years of campaigning in the big show, Cobb's batting eye remains undimmed. He has developed other physical imperfections, the legs have slowed up, the arm has lost some of its power, but he still can hit the old apple.

Cobb, like all great hitters, picks the ball he wants to hit. He hasn't a weakness.

As I watched him in action at the bat during the past few weeks, I marvelled at the way he continues to look them over. He is rarely fooled, no matter what pitcher seeks to match wits with him.

Get the pitcher in the hole and then take advantage of it is a Cobb theory on batting, and he adheres religiously to it.

St. Louis Mascot.

St. Louis, by the way, appears to be more or less a mascot for Cobb as far as batting is concerned.

Last season, after being out of the game for some time, he decided to break into the lineup with the hope of getting the boys going. A short time later the club journeyed to St. Louis for a series of four games and he set a few batting records at the expense of the "Brownie" pitchers.

In the game of May 5 he made three home runs, only a matter of inches keeping him from getting four. The following day he added two more, making five home runs in two consecutive days, tying a record that had stood for 40 years.

Yes, sir! Ty Cobb can still hit. So say the American League pitchers in a chorus.

By JOE WILLIAMS.

HENDERSONVILLE, N. C., June 1.—A tall, emaciated gentleman well along in the fifties, with greying hair and mustache, sat on a cane-bottom chair in a bare-walled living room up here in the mountains and tightened the strings on his old violin.

It was Hiram Dempsey, father of the heavyweight champion, and he was preparing to give his nightly recital of hill-billy airs, which have come to be just as much a part of the training camp routine as his brawny son's roadwork and sparring.

"Pop" Dempsey, as Jack always refers to him, fiddled through a composition of agonizing length that, to the inexpert ear, ran mainly to "awks" and "eeks."

"How'd you like that?" he asked, finishing with a triumphant smile.

"Fine," I lied bravely.

"I'm the only fiddler in the world that plays that piece. I wrote it myself and it's called 'Wild Goose.' Couldn't you hear the geese in it?"

"Jess Like Sullivan."

Assuring him that none who had ever been within a mile of the animals could possibly fail to distinguish the remarkable impersonation, I switched the conversation to the subject of fighting.

I learned that young William Harrison Dempsey, as the champion was christened, was virtually a "born fighter." At least "Pop" recalls that he weighed 14 pounds and looked "jess like John L. Sullivan," 'specially in the shoulders!

"Why you never saw John L. Sullivan, Pop," cut in the champion. "How can you say I looked like him?"

"Well, you looked like him anyhow," insisted the kindly old man, nodding his head in an autocratic way, which indicated there was nothing else to be said on that matter.

"Pop" says the first fight—the first good fight—he remembers Jack had was against a neighbor's boy, who was "bigger and older and everything than our kid."

The boy's name was John Daniels and the fight occurred in the Dempseys' home town, Manassa, Colo. The families of both contestants gathered around in a circle to witness the battle. For four or five minutes it was an even tussle.

"Bite him, John!" yelled the elder Daniels, who apparently had anticipated an easier triumph over the smaller Dempsey. John turned his head to look at his father and, as he did, young Dempsey clipped him on the chin and knocked him out.

Bet Against Son.

"Pop" then told how Jack drifted into the professional ring. The two of them were working with a steam shovel crew in Utah. They had been there for three days. On the fourth day Jack dropped his shovel and said to "Pop":

"We'll never get rich doing this. I'm going away and be a prizefighter."

A week passed and "Pop" read in the papers that Jack had been matched to battle "the Boston Bear Cat," a giant colored puncher who had been winning all his fights in the west by knockouts.

"Pop" was a sporting man and he was inclined to back his judgment in such matters with the tinkling coin of the realm—and he wasn't the kind to be influenced by sentiment.

His entire fortune at the moment amounted to something like $7.20. It was his conviction that "the Boston Bear Cat" was a pretty fair sort of a fighter. So when a fellow laborer expressed a contrary belief, "Pop" peeled off five one dollar bills and said, "Put up or shut up."

"You don't mean to say you bet against me in my first fight, Pop?" demanded the champion, who was listening to the narrative.

"Yes, I did, and shucks all fiddlesticks, I didn't eat all the next week."

MOSUL TREATY WILL BE SIGNED ON THURSDAY

All Disputes Between Britain, Turkey and Irak Are Settled

FRONTIERS ARRANGED.

Security Pact Is Drawn Up—Compromise on Oil Revenues.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 2 (Canadian Press.)—Mosul oil agreement between Great Britain and Turkey will be signed on Thursday.

It is announced that all the questions in dispute have been settled, and that it only remains for a commission of Turkish and British officials to prepare the protocol for three cornered agreement. The security pact between Turkey and Irak has been drawn and their frontiers have been arranged. The last hour negotiations are concerned with Turkey's demands for a share in the output of what may prove the world's largest untapped petroleum field. According to authoritative sources, Turkey's demand was met by a compromise whereby Great Britain has consented to permit Irak to give ten per cent. of its revenue from the oil fields to Turkey. In return for this the Angora Government has agreed to recognize the validity of Turkish Petroleum company, which has obtained a concession from the Sultan's regime to develop the Hitherto unexploited Mosul field. This company is largely British owned.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

"OH! WHAT A NURSE!"

Warner Bros.' production of "Oh What a Nurse!" starring Syd Chaplin and directed by Charles "Chuck" Reisner, is an up-to-the-minute funfest fresh from the brain of Robert W. Sherwood, editor of "Life," and

SYD CHAPLIN

Bertram Bloch. The scenario is by Darryl Francis Zanuck, adaptor of "The Limited Mail," and author of "Hogan's Alley."

In "Oh! What a Nurse!" Chaplin outshines his recent success in "The Man on the Box' and securely substantiates himself as the greatest female impersonator that stage or screen has ever known.

Beginning as a young new reporter on a San Francisco daily, Jerry (Syd Chaplin) is assigned to fill the place of Dolly Whimple of the "Advice to the Lovelorn' column, during her vacation. This assignment involves him in a wealth of highly humorous and unusually unenviable situations, drags him through the back door into politics and high bootleg finance, and reveals him in feminine disguise to the girl, played by Patsy Ruth Miller, whom fate has exposed to his interest.

"Chuck" Reisner, who will be remembered as the director and "heavy" of "The Man on the Box" was assisted in injecting a unprecedented number of smiles, chuckles, laughs and snorts into "Oh! What a Nurse!" not only by Mr. Chaplin who is a most distinguished funmonger in his own right, but by Scott Darling and Bryan "Briny" Foy, two of Hollywood's foremost gagmen.

Scott Darling has established quite a reputation or his work as gagman at Universal, while Foy is the oldest of Eddie Foy's "Little Foys." Besides writing "Oh, Mr. Gallagher, Oh, Mr. Shean," he has in the last several years written, directed and served as gagman in the making of a number of successful two-reelers.

As locale, "Oh! What a Nurse!" has a typical newspaper office, a "Gold Coast" mansion, a fast speedboat, a rum-running schooner beyond the twelve-mile limit and a bay ferryboat. Frolicking among his scenery we find Mr. Chaplin in three roles as Jerry, Dolly Whimple and the Nurse, Patsy Ruth Miller as June Harrison, Gayne Whitman, Mathew Betz, Edith Yorke, Dave Torrance, Ed Kennedy, Eric Johnson Raymond Wells and Henry Barrowes.

The picture comes to the Capitol Theatre tomorrow for a run of three days.

AT THE REGENT

"MOBY DICK"—THE SEA BEAST.

What bright little student of American literature can tell off hand who Moby Dick was?

"Moby Dick" is a story of the New England sailors of 1840 who took their fast clippers throughout the world in the hunt for whales. And each whale in those days meant a fortune for the traders, for the whale supplied an endless number of necessities, but especially the oil that was needed for lamp lighting.

The adventures of these whalers reached epic proportions in Melville's telling of them. With simple accuracy he had portrayed the rugged heroism that had conquered the terrors of the sea, but his was a simplicity that mounted up to magnificence in its picture of the lives of brave men.

As Barrymore read, he saw himself acting the central character the tremendous character of Ahab Ceeley. He felt the compulsion to do his character on the screen, just as he had felt the compulsion to do "Hamlet" on the stage. And he promised himself that as soon as he returned to the screen "Moby Dick" would be his first picture.

But, "Moby Dick," which was the name given by Melville to a great white whale, whose presence filled the background of the novel, was discarded as a title when the picture went into production at the Warner Brothers studios in Hollywood. In its screen form, "Moby Dick" became "The Sea Beast," and, in "The Sea Beast," John Barrymore seems to have achieved everything that his imagination pictured; his finest performance in his greatest photoplay.

ASKS IF SEXSMITH STOOD FOR TESTS

Dr. Edwards Requests History of Appointment To Government Post.

OTTAWA, June 2 (Canadian Press).—In the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, Hon. J. W. Edwards (Conservative, Frontenac-Addington) complained that he had not been furnished by the Government with information as to whether the appointment of E. J. Sexsmith, former Progressive member of Parliament, to a Government position, had been made on Mr. Sexsmith's "merits after competitive examination." If Mr. Sexsmith was not appointed after a competitive examination, Dr. Edwards asked to be informed on whose recommendation the appointment had been made.

Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, said that he would look into the question raised by Dr. Edwards without delay.

LINDSAY'S JAIL BECOMING FILLED

May Have To Be Enlarged To Accommodate Guests.

LINDSAY, June 2. — If Provincial Constable Storey keeps on making arrests and the magistrate keeps on adding to his convictions, the old gray county bastile will have to be enlarged to accommodate those given a term within its walls. To-day the jail is filled with prisoners, and things are becoming congested.

This morning Provincial Officer Storey introduced three residents of Kinmount to the County Cadi in the person of a C.N.R. section foreman, named Mintz, a man named Brown, and his son. Mintz was charged with the theft of a quantity of wire from the C.N.R., which was valued at $192. He received a sentence of three months in the county jail.

Brown, Junior, was given a ten day term, with a fine of $25, and his father was also called upon to pay a fine of $25 and make restitution in the sum of $128. They were both charged with receiving.

That certain bootleggers continue to take a chance in the county was revealed in the fate that overtook a resident of Victoria County, who was fined $81 for having liquor in his possession externally.

THIRD READING FOR CREDIT BILL

Conservatives Criticize Government Measure in Committee.

GOES TO SENATE.

OTTAWA, June 2 (Canadian Press) — The Government's rural credit bill received third reading in the House of Commons last night. The second reading was given without discussion, but in committee criticism was general. T. L. Church Conservative member for Northwest Toronto, characterized it as "pure class legislation." He believed that only the three Pairie provinces favor the bill. W. A. Boys, another Conservative member, informed the Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Railways, who was piloting the bill through the committee, that there was absolutely no chance of Ontario entering the scheme. Ontario was now lending money to farmers at five per cent so why should it adopt a scheme whereby the rate of interest would be six and a half.

While admitting that the scheme required careful administration, Mr. Dunning predicted valuable results in reducing the cost of long term agricultural credits, if it was adopted. The bill carried out the recommendations of the parliamentary committees which had investigated the whole question. Some concrete proposal must be made before the provinces could decide whether or not they wished to participate in the federal scheme.

Hon. Charles Dunning moved an amendment to provide that the total expenses of operation should not exceed one per cent of the total amount of the loans. Another amendment which reduces the rate of interest payable by borrowers on defaulted payments from eight to seven per cent, was moved by Mr. Dunning and carried. The bill was reported from committee, given the third reading and now goes to the Senate.

FLOWER SERVICE.

Omemee Sunday School Sends Flowers To Sick Children's Hospitals.

OMEMEE, June 2.—The annual flower service of Christ church Sunday school took place on Sunday evening. It was a most inspiring sight to see the entire school march in, led by the tiny tots, each scholar carrying spring flowers and followed by the gowned choir, all singing "Onward Christian Soldiers." Later in the service, the scholars marched forward and placed their flowers on two trays which were held by two young men of the Sunday school. These floral offerings were sent to the Sick Children's Hospital in Toronto, on Monday morning, where they will no doubt bring a ray of gladness to the tiny sufferers.

Much credit is due to the faithful and energetic superintendent, H. McQuade, who was loyally assisted by the teachers of the Sunday school

Rev. A. T. Weir addressed the children and was listened to most attentively while he spoke of "Christ growing in wisdom and stature in favour with God and man." During the service a solo was well rendered by Wilbert Clemett, an officer of the school.

LEADERS EXPEL D. LLOYD GEORGE

Lord Oxford and Colleagues Pass Sentence on Ex-Premier.

STILL HOUSE LEADER.

LONDON, June 2 (Canadian Press). —The Earl of Oxford and Asquith, with the majority of his colleagues, including Lord Grey, passed what is considered a sentence of excommunication against David Lloyd George from the Liberal Party in a new letter to Sir Godfrey Collins, chief Liberal whip, thus making the breach complete, so far as the leaders of the party are concerned. Lord Oxford's action leaves the position one of extraordinary complexity which apparently can be settled only by the rank and file of the party. Mr. Lloyd George is still chairman of the parliamentary party in the House of Commons, and may refuse to resign. Late last night at the request of his supporters, Mr. Lloyd George summoned a meeting of the parliamentary Liberal party for Thursday, at the House of Commons. The Liberal press is almost as much divided for and against Mr. Lloyd George, as are the leaders of the party. Lloyd George refused to discuss Lord Oxford's latest letter.

IN POLICE COURT

In the Police Court this morning, Magistrate O. A. Langley gave judgement in the case of Mrs. Caroline Henry, charged with being in possession of an illicit still.

His Worship stated that although both of the counsel in the case before him had presented able extemporaneous arguments, neither of them had referred to any authorities. He had himself looked up some decisions of the Court of Appeal which had a bearing on the case under consideration.

He also quoted the definition of possession as given by Stroud's Legal Dictionary which he held was opposite to the case before him. He had come to the conclusion that Mrs. Henry was not in possession of the still, but on account of her conduct in resisting the officers, no order for costs would be made.

OMEMEE SOCIETY.

Women's Auxiliary of Christ Church Hold Missionary Meeting.

OMEMEE, June 2.— A well-attended missionary meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of Christ church was held at the home of Mrs. F. Clemett on Thursday last. The main item of interest was the report of the annual meeting recently held in Toronto, which was given by Miss Curry. Progress was noted in every department and many pleasing incidents, notably, "The story of these forty years," which was given at the convention by four of the pioneer members who had attended the first annual meeting forty years ago.

Another feature of great interest was a reception given in honor of the returned and outgoing missionaries, the delegates and their hostesses in this way, being given an oppportunity to meet and converse with the missionaries. Following Miss Curry's report, refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Clemett and Mrs. Southworth, thus bringing to a close a profitable and enjoyable meeting.

The bridesmaid, Miss Marion Hayes, sister of the bridegroom, wore a lovely frock of coral georgette, the draperies and sleeves trimmed with wide insets of Venetian lace. Her hat was of coral georgette with tulle scarf. She wore black shoes and stockings and carried a bouquet of prenifer roses.

Mr. Carl V. Hayes, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man.

After the ceremony, a dainty wedding breakfast was served to the immediate relatives and friends, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hayes, 219 Park street. Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Hayes left later by motor for a honeymoon trip, after which they will reside at 211 Reid street. The bride travelled in an ensemble suit of black satin, with hat to match.

FOUR CHILDREN BURNED IN HOME

House on Ranch Burns To Ground While Mother Absent.

TWO ESCAPE.

CRANBROOK, B. C., June 2. — Canadian Press. — Four small children were burned to death last night when the ranch home of the Woods family, five miles south west of York, was destroyed by fire. The meagre details received here are that the mother left her six children alone for a short time while she visited a neighbor. Returning she found the dwelling in flames from which but two of the children were able to make their escape. The father is said to be a patient in a hospital at Nelson where he recently had both legs amputated. Sergt. Greenwood, of the Provincial police, is en route from here to the scene of the tragedy to investigate.

The fire department received one call this morning to a chimney fire at the corner of Concession and Hazlett Streets.

Immigration Act Raises Storm In House

Sutherland Starts Uproar On House Of Commons Floor By A Challenge To Speaker

Says He Is Not Surprised at Ruling — Then Says He Is Surprised—and Finally Withdraws Contentious Word —Discussing Immigration.

PROGRESSIVE LEADER DECLARES SCENE WORST IN TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

Sutherland Says Amendments To Criminal Code Were Part of the Bargain Between Government and Labor Members—Premier Asserts Statement Is Untrue.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 3 (Canadian Press)—With appeals to the chair, shouts of order and protests from both sides, there was an uproar in the House yesterday afternoon. Robert Forke, Progressive leader, said later that he had not seen anything like it in twenty-five years of a municipal council.

Premier King had declared untrue a statement made by Donald Sutherland, Conservative of South Oxford, that legislation before the House was the result of a bargain between Liberals and Labor members. Conservatives demanded that the word "untrue" be withdrawn but Chairman Duff held that, under the circumstances, use of the word was not unparliamentary. On appeal, the ruling of the chair was sustained.

Mr. Sutherland first said he was not "surprised" at the ruling of the chair. There were loud Liberal objections. Chairman Duff ruled that the word be withdrawn. Mr. Sutherland then said he was surprised. Again the chairman ruled that the word must be withdrawn and again the house was in turmoil.

In the end, Mr. Sutherland withdrew the "surprised." The chairman accepted the withdrawal and calm returned.

The House was in committee at the time discussing amendments to the Immigration Act. At dinner recess, the amendments were still in committee.

Amendments Considered

These amendments make deportation for offenses under section 41 of the immigration act dependent upon a conviction under the criminal code rather than upon a hearing before a board of inquiry. They also provide for removal of discrimination against the British born as it stands in the existing bill, by recognizing his Canadian citizenship as in the case of the alien born who has been naturalized in Canada.

The section repealed is section 41 of the Immigration Act and the substituted clause reads as follows: "Whenever any person other than a Canadian citizen has been convicted of any criminal offense as defined in part 2 of the Criminal Code, it shall be the duty of any officer becoming cognizant thereof and of the clerk, secretary or other official of any municipality in Canada wherein any such person may be, to forthwith send a written complaint to the minister, giving full particulars."

Squall Commences

Donald Sutherland (Conservative-South Oxford) said the legislation before the house and the amendments to the criminal Code were part of a "bargain" between the government and Labor members.

Premier King asserted that this statement was untrue. Hon. Dr. Manion objected to the word "untrue."

Premier King said that he was referring to the statement only and was casting no reflection whatever on Mr. Sutherland. There had been no bargain between the Labor members and the government with respect to any legislation. If any person, Premier King continued, made that statement after his denial he would be consciously making a statement which was untrue.

Chairman Duff ruled that, in the circumstances, the statement of the prime minister was not out of order.

Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen said that the very opposite view had been held against the members of the Conservative party. To this, chairman Duff replied that he was responsible only for his own rulings.

Mr. Meighen said that for the purpose of uniformity of rulings, he would appeal from the decision of the chair.

Speaker Lemieux was proceeding to call the ayes and nays when Mr. Meighen said that under Parliamentary procedure it was the duty of the speaker to decide the issue and

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH REVIVAL TOLD IN MODERATORIAL SERMON

Rev. Dr. Scott Says Presbyterianism is Founded on a Rock.

WARNING NOTE.

Doubt Cast Upon Bible Is Peril of Church To-day.

MONTREAL, June 3 (Canadian Press).—"In our Church not many months ago, congregations were breaking up, her people in thousands homeless and wandering. To-day our Church, from ocean to ocean, has a progress and prospect, a life and interest and purpose, unequalled before in all her history," declared Rev. Dr. Ephraim Scott in the course of his Moderatorial sermon at the opening of the Presbyterian General Assembly in Knox-Crescent Church here last night.

Dr. Scott likened the history of the Church to the story of the Creation, asserting that the cause of the change from chaos to cosmos was the same. In both cases that cause was God. "And the more we look and wonder at the change in our Church from the chaos of yesterday to the glory and gladness of to-day, the more are we compelled to exclaim, 'This is the Lord's doing and it is marvellous in our eyes.' No human motive or power could have so moved the people of our Church from ocean to ocean, to rise up with one heart and mind, and to stand for truth and freedom as their forefathers have often done, and to-night this Assembly can sing with new understanding and meaning, 'Praise God from Whom all blessings flow'."

The Moderator sounded a warning note with regard to the future. Dr. Scott said that again the Eden story had its lessons and its warnings. That ordered life and beauty, that "all very good" had not continued. The enemy of that good was there. He exhorted parents, and ministers especially, to do their duty to protect the Church, as the responsibility rested chiefly upon them, since their opportunities were greatest. "Parents are the keepers of the Church of to-morrow. If in the home there is the family altar, a place in the home for God, where the young from earliest years are trained to worship Him in fellowship with Him, to hear Him speak His word, and to speak to Him in prayer; if there be home teaching of the truths of God's word, then will the future of the Church be assured. If the young grow up without the training then the young will suffer," he said.

"One of the perils in the world-wide Church to-day, is the doubt cast upon the word of God," Dr. Scott declared. "Of making books about that Word there is no end. Most of these books are written by men who are largely shut off in the seclusion of their studies, from the world's sin and sorrow. They do not come into close grips with human hearts in the temptations and the trials of life, and their ideal of religion becomes theoretical rather than practical; more of reason, less of faith. They dissect the Word of God rather than feed upon it; and ministers, from student days onward, studying these books, are liable to be led unconsciously along similar lines, and sometimes (pray God that it might not be in our Blind Lawyer Says His Life Has Been Threatened By Captors.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., June 3.—Canadian Press. — The story of a blind lawyer that Aime Semple McPherson, Woodstock, Ontario, evangelist, who disappeared while swimming at Ocean Park, on May 18, is being held captive by two men who seek a ransom of $25,000, to-day occupied the attention of the police. According to Attorney R. A. McKinley of Long Beach, men have threatened not only to kill Mrs. McPherson, but to do away with him as well, if the ransom is not paid.

Fearing for his life McKinley has told the police that he cannot assist them in trapping the alleged kidnappers.

BRITISH JUDGE OF NATIVE COURT GIVES UP OFFICE

As Protest Against Acquittal of Egyptians Charged With Murder.

POLITICAL CRIMES.

Show of Force By British Mediterranean Fleet Expected.

CAIRO, June 3.—(United Press.)—The resignation of Judge Kershaw, British President of the Native Court, has emphasized the tenseness of a situation which many believe may develop into a serious Anglo-Egyptian crisis.

He resgned yesterday as the result of the acquittal a few days ago of several natives accused of political assassinations. Judge Kershaw declared that the acquittals represented a grave miscarriage of justice. As a result of his resignation Great Britain has sent a note to Egypt reserving full liberty of action in the fuutre in the protection of foreigners in Egypt.

BRITAIN TO SHOW FORCE.

LONDON, June 2.—(United Press.)—The Daily Mail's political writer declared it is likely that Great Britain will parade her military strength on Egypt as a result of threats of a serious situation in that country.

It was asserted that England is directing warships of the Mediterranean fleet to take up position off Port Said, with a view to safeguarding her interests.

THE WEATHER.

After the cold rain of yesterday (which amounted to .11 of an inch) the weather turned quite chilly, the temperature going down to 36 degrees last night. This is uncomfortably close to the frost line, and it is probable that only the stiff breeze that blew saved the situation. "June frosts" are not a common occurrence in this section now, but in early days they were of too frequent a character. Mrs. Moodie in her "Roughing it in the Bush," the scenes of which are laid largely in Douro township, tells of the havoc done and hopes blasted by frosts in June. Since the country has been cleared, however, "June frosts" as well as "fever and ague," have become a thing largely of the past. While it is not likely any damage may have been done locally last night other sections may not have escaped so well, for in this Midland district there are more varieties of climate to the square mile than almost any other section in Ontario. — W. WINNIPEG STRIKE IS BROUGHT UP DURING DEBATE

Peter Heenan Says Minister of Labor Didn't Use Sense.

MEIGHEN ANSWERS.

Nicholson Says Purpose of Strike Was To Destroy Organized Labor.

OTTAWA, June 3 (Canadian Press).—Echoes of the Winnipeg strike of 1919 again rang through the House last night. Peter Heenan, Liberal of Kenora-Rainy River, brought it up on a motion to go into supply. Mr. Heenan declared that had Senator Robertson, at the time Minister of Labor, used a little "horse sense," the strike would have been settled without any bloodshed. Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader who went with Senator Robertson to Winnipeg during the strike), came sharply to the Senator's defence. Mr. Meighen declared hat no troops had been sent to Winnipeg during the strike, and none had been used. A. A. Heaps (Labor, North Winnipeg) spoke of the strike as an ordinary manifestation of workers against working conditions. G. B. Nicholson, Conservative member for East Algoma, said that one of the purposes behind the Winnipeg strike was the destruction of organized labor in Canada. The debate was continued until a late hour, when a motion to go into supply carried.

COTTON WORTH MILLION ENTERS WITHOUT DUTY

Through Rock Island and Neighboring Towns in Quebec.

PRISON GOODS.

Goods Worth $200,000 Received at Derby Line, Vermont.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 3 (Canadian Press)—Cotton goods representing the duty paid value of over a million dollars appear to have been smuggled into Canada from the United States without payment of duty in the last three years through Rock Island, Quebec. This is the statement made in a report to the Customs probe by Clarkson, Gordon and Dilworth, the committee's auditors, who have examined the freight and express records of railway lines entering Rock Island and other customs ports in the immediate neighborhood.

The auditors also discovered that in three years and three months prison made goods of a cost value of about $200,000 were shipped to Derby line, Vermont, and Newport, Vt., on the Canadian border. The companies receiving these goods did not distribute them in the United States and inference is that they found their way into Canada.

AGED MAN DIES IN FIRE WHICH BURNS HIS HOME

Entire Village of Chatsworth Is Threatened By Bad Blaze.

DURING WIND STORM.

Several Buildings Burned To Ground—Rescue of Old Man Tried.

OWEN SOUND, June 3 (Canadian Press).—David Callender, between 75 and 80 years of age, was burned to death in the fire which, at one time last night, threatened to wipe out the village of Chatsworth, nine miles south of here. The blaze broke out in Callender's house about 10.30 and was beyond control before it was discovered. The rescue of the aged man, who is proprietor of a gasoline station, was impossible. There was a strong west wind and the flames quickly spread to the blacksmith shop of Robert Kerr and the garage of Curtis and Walker, both of which were totally destroyed. The loss totals several thousand dollars and there is no insurance. A section of the fire apparatus from Owen Sound went out to assist in fighting the fire. Callender had been living in Chatsworth for fifty years. His wife is living in Toronto. He had planned to leave Chatsworth to live in Scotland this summer.

BATTALION CLUB FAVORS TRAINING

Local Members of 21st Battalion Send Resolution To Minister.

NOT MILITARISTS.

Criticism of the action of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church in protesting against the continuance of military and cadet training was expressed at a meeting in the Armouries last night of the members of the 21st Battalion Club. The following motion moved by Comrade R. Muir and seconded by Comrade W. Lyburn was carried unanimously and sent by telegram to the Minister of National Defence. "That we of the 21st Battalion Club of Peterborough in general meeting assembled do hereby strongly disapprove of the resolution of the United Church passed at the Bay of Quinte Conference against cadet and military training and we hereby plead strongly that you do make adequate provision in the military estimates for militia training."

The members of the Club in the course of the discussion emphasized the fact that as former soldiers they were not desirous of propagating a spirit of militarism, but insisted that it was the duty of all peace-loving men to ensure the means of adequate defence of the nation. While the services of the Rev. Captain Lambert of the Bay of Quinte Conference were recognized and appreciated, the view was expressed by some of the members in subsequent conversation, that as a Chaplain, the Rev. Mr. Lambert not competent to speak on behalf of the men who occupied the front line trenches.

Two other telegrams were also despatched from the meeting; one to Comrade D. J. Lawrie representing the Unattached Veterans, and the other to Comrade G. G. Winterbottom representing the G.W.V.A at the conventions in London, stressing the fact that the Club stood four-square for unity of ex-soldiers' organization.

WORK FINISHED AT CATHEDRAL

Scaffolding Removed For Ordination Services—Rich and Handsome Design.

OIL PAINTINGS.

The work of decorating the sanctuary of St. Peter's Cathedral, which has been going on for some weeks past, has been finished, and the final touches were put to the work in time for removal of the scaffolding before the ordination ceremonies last Sunday.

The contract was in the hands of Messrs. Panzironi of New York City, church decorators, who are declared to be second to none on the continent, and the result of their labors at the Cathedral demonstrates very effectively their pre-eminence in this regard, and the attention to detail which has been paid in the re-decoration of the walls of the sanctuary.

A deep cream forms the base of the color scheme. In the curving, apse-like section at the rear of the sanctuary, the lower portion of the walls has been covered with liquid gold in a conventionalized pattern. This is bordered at top and bottom with a design in gold and red. The upper section, with its outlined curving panels, is done in Madonna blue, with golden rays extending centrally from the invisible light at the front. In the centre of each section is a kneeling, painted angel, gowned in pink and green.

The same handsome border, with its conventionalized designs, appears at the edge of the upper arch, with inset medallions of bright red crosses as a motif for the general scheme, and round circlets of turquoise blue. Below this border on the wall are medallion heads of cherubs, in rose-pink and blue.

Two large symbolical oil paintings adorn the walls directly above the side altars, the one on the Gospel side depicting the deliverance of St. Peter by angels from his prison in Jerusalem, its companion on the Epistle side showing the giving of the keys to St. Peter by Christ.

The whole design is rich and handsome and gives a finish to the hitherto undecorated walls that is particularly effective when the sanctuary is lighted up, and the gogld work can be observed to the best advantage.

CHOLERA EPIDEMIC IN STRICKEN AREA

Part of Burma Visited By New Scourge After Tidal Wave.

RANGOON, June 3. — (United Press.)—Cholera has broken out in the Arrakan area which recently was visited by a cyclone and tidal wave, refugees arriving from Maungdaw to-day reported.

Approximately thirty-eight square miles are within the cholera area The cholera was believed to have been caused by the entrance of sea salt into the drinking wells.

LOUD SPEAKERS TO AID AUDIENCE

Will Be Used To Amplify Address By Bishop Fallon on Sunday.

AT CENTENNIAL.

Something quite unique in public addresses in the city will be the inclusion on the programme for Sunday afternoon at St. Peter's Cathedral of the use of amplifiers for loud speaking purposes. These will be installed for the sermon to be preached by His Lordship, Bishop Fallon, of London, when he unveils the statue of 'Christ Our King" on the Cathedral lawn at half-past three o'clock next Sunday afternoon, in connection with the centennial celebration of the saying of the first mass in what is now the city of Peterborough.

Amplifiers have been in common use for some time in larger centres, but this is the first time that they will be utilized in this city, and they should be of great assistance to the large audience which is expected for the event. Every word said by His Lordship, the speech which will be made also by His Excellency, the Apostolic Delegate, and the singing of the choir, will be amplified by this means, so as to be heard distinctly within a radius of one hundred and seventy-five feet, or for more than a city block away from the orator. When a large crowd is assembled, the use of the amplifiers makes hearing a pleasure, rather than an irritation, as the catching of fragments of a speech often turns out to be.

DOG POISONING IS CONDEMNED

Humane Inspector Says Use of Strychnine Is Barbarous Method.

CAUSES SUFFERING.

The dog poisoning cases in Byersville are engaging the attention of the local inspector of the Humane Society, Mr. R. C. Smith, who is prosecuting inquiries in the neighborhood. Mr. Smith this morning pointed out that the laying out of any kind of poison within reach of children or domestic animals is an offense punishable by imprisonment. The use of strychnine as a means of killing rats or other vermin was both foolish and unnecessary, he said, as there was an abundance of varieties of common-sense rat killers and dog biscuits which were easily procurable.

He expressed himself very strongly in condemning the action of those who adopted the barbarous method of ridding themselves of prowling dogs by the use of strychnine. When this poison was administered by those unacquainted with its use, there was much unnecessary suffering inflicted on the animal. The dose given might be insufficient to bring about a speedy end, while at the game time it caused the animal intense suffering. Any person finding a dog in a condition that suggested strychnine poisoning should immediately have its stomach emptied. Once the poison reached the blood, he said, there could be no hope of saving the animal.

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D., Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

You will never have another pair of eyes. During a lifetime you have a lot of teeth, at least two full sets, fifty or sixty in all. But two eyes are all you have and all you ever will have.

It pays to take care of this precious pair of orbs. If you lose one eye you are miserable and unhappy over the loss. But to lose both is one of the most dreadful misfortunes in human experience.

There are many eye ailments, any one of which may wipe out vision. The eyeball may be normal in appearance, but the seeing power is gone. Or something may happen to blur out the front of the eye, the cornea, even though all the parts back of this film are perfect in every particular.

Cataract is a condition found in advanced life, rarely before fifty-five or sixty. It is a perfectly painless thing, showing itself by loss of sight, but with no external sign of its presence.

A film, or "skin" covering the front of the eye is not cataract. Cataract is an opacity of the crystalline lens, back of the colored part of the eye, behind the pupil. It may be seen possibly as a silky, filmy, silvery substance in what should be the jet black pupil. But it takes sharp eyes to make it out without the aid of special instruments.

I want to make clear that cataract is not a growth on the outside of the eye. It isn't a disfiguring thing. But it gradually increases in density until all form is lost to the sight. Light and shadows may be seen by the victim, but nothing else.

As I have said, it produces no pain, redness or discomfort of any sort, except the impairment of the sight. Fortunately one eye is spared a long time after the other has lost its use.

Of all the serious eye troubles, cataract is about the most comfortable to have. It does not hurt and, when it is ready for operation, it can be removed by a delicate but painless operation. A local anaesthetic is used, so there is not the danger, nor the discomfort of a general anaesthetic.

After the operation the patient is kept in bed three or four days, not because he is sick, but merely to keep him quiet. The bandages are left off after a few days and then with the fitting of spectacles, the thing is all over.

I don't want to make it seem too easy to get rid of cataract, but really it is not a formidable thing as operations go. There is no danger to life, usually no suffering, and no prolonged recovery.

If I had to choose some serious ailment I should take cataract.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Secretary Shawnee, Okla., Board of Commerce.

THAT the live merchants of the home city bid for your business by advertising on a basis of price, quality, service and mutual benefit,

THAT they have merchandise that is in every way satisfactory,

THAT it is of high quality, dependable, and the prices are right,

THAT you run no risk or take no chance when you buy in the home city.

THAT buying at home has a direct bearing and beneficial influence on commercial conditions in the home city.

THAT it directly benefits the city and the surrounding country.

THAT newspaper advertising keeps you informed of all the newer merchandise offerings,

THAT the ads. help you in your personal buying and help you solve the problems of buying for the household.

THAT the majority of the public reads the many interesting money-saving announcements in the newspapers.

By reading the ads and buying from the stores that advertise their wares, you can make every dollar you spend buy a full dollar's worth of goods.

BRITISH JUDGE

LONDON, June 3 (Canadian Press).—"Distinctly grave" is the characterization applied in British official circles to the Egyptian situation which has been much aggravated from the British standpoint, by the recent sweeping victory of Zagloul Pasha's party in the elections.

Officials feel it is impossible to forecast where the present position may lead. The British Government has already made clear that it would not favor the return of Zagloul Pasha to power as Premier,

As a precautionary measure, it has been decided to send a warship from Malta to Alexandria to safeguard British and foreign interests.

Zagloul Retires

CAIRO, Egypt, June 3 (Canadian Press).—Zagloul Pasha, Nationalist party leader, today informed a number of Deputies at a luncheon to him that he has agreed to their desire to forfeit the Premiership in favor of former Premier Adly Yeghen Pasha.

DRESS GOODS FROM OSTRICH DOWN.

Softer than the softest silk or wool, with a pliability greater than any other known cloth, is the new dress material invented by a noted Paris garment designer. It is made from the fluffiest ostrich feathers, says Popular Science Monthly. These downy feathers are plucked from the quills, treated by a special process, and then woven into cloth. The finished product is said to be lighter in weight than the finest down, yet very durable and capable of effects in colors and patterns that are difficult to obtain in the materials now in common use.

Sixty Mile Motor Chase To Capture Young Bandits

SYRACUSE, N.Y., June 3.—(Canadian Press.) — After a sixty mile chase police to-day overhauled an automobile driven by Edmund Michaels, 21 years old, of Smiths Falls, Ontario, and arrested Michaels, Joseph Johnson, 23, of New York, and Genevieve Heilmer, 20, of New York, sought in Utica, N.Y., for assaulting a taxicab driver and stealing his car. The girl was dressed in male attire. She and her male companions were equipped with loaded revolvers. For five miles the two cars sped along the road, all the time between 50 and 60 miles an hour, the police said. Finally the police car caught up with the other and forced it into the curb.

OMEMEE STUDENTS.

Hold Field Day With Millbrook Boys as Their Guests.

OMEMEE, June 3.—Ideal weather favoured the students of the Omemee High school, who on Saturday met in a friendly way, the students of the Millbrook High school.

Two ball games were played in Athletic Park. The first a game of softball between the visiting team and the locals which resulted in a win for the visitors, the score being 18-14.

The boys then played a game of ball and the locals redeemed the fair reputation of the village by winning in turn from the Millbrook boys, the score being 18-8.

During the last game Raymond Morrisey, one of the local students, had the great misfortune to receive an ugly cut on the forehead from a flying bat. He was immediately rushed to the office of Dr. Carmichael, where it was found necessary to put in five stitches to close the wound. The accident caused a gloom over the entire group and he was later removed to his home, where he is progressing favourably.

Following the games the visitors were invited to the High School, where ample provision of salad, cakes, sandwiches and lemonade had been made to appease the healthy appetite of the young athletes.

SOCIAL MEETING

Millbrook United Church Young People Have Pleasant Evening.

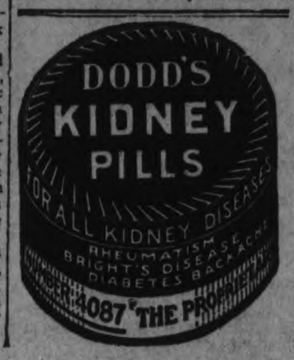
MILLBROOK, June 3.—The regular meeting of the Young People's Society was held on Monday evening, the Missionary Vice-President, Mrs. G. W. Sayles, being in the chair.

Examination time for High School students and a number of counter attractions in the village and vicinity lessened the attendance, but a thoroughly good time was enjoyed.

The meeting, being on a fifth Monday in the month, was of a social character, not one of the four organizations which are carrying on for the current three months being responsible when an extra Monday occurs. Following the opening devotional period and the enrollment of subscribers to the Forward Movement, the money going toward the salary of Rev. E. E. Hibbard of West India, a number of contests were enjoyed.

Partners were secured by matching numbers, and for an hour or more interest had no chance of flagging as a "Party of Tories" was puzzled over, and the unravelling of "A Musical Love Story" engaged all minds.

A generous treat of candy brought a pleasant gathering to a close. Next week the committee from the Senior League has charge.



FRECKLES

Sun and Wind Bring Out Uugly Spots. How to Remove Easily

Here's a chance, Miss Freckleface, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable concern that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes your freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from any drug or department store and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst cause.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this strength is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove your freckles.

Let our object be our country, our whole country, and nothing but our country. —Webster.

SERVICES HELD IN WARSAW CHURCHES

On Sunday Last—Women's Institute Work Reviewed.

WARSAW, June 3.—Pastor Pinkerton preached in the Baptist church on Sunday morning.

Rev. T. J. O'Conor-Fenton conducted service in the Anglican church on Sunday morning. Next Sunday the services will be held at 7.30 p.m.

The Presbyterian Sunday school will meet at 10 o'clock as usual, with Dr. Munro, superintendent, and a church service will be held at 2.30 p.m.

Mr. Currie preached in the United churches at Bethel, Zion and Warsaw on Sunday. Bethel is holding a tea on June 16.

Rev. H. B. Herrington expects to return from conference by the end of this week.

The same officers are in this year form the Women's Institute, namely: President, Mrs. David Miller; vice-president, Mrs. Robert Payne; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. John Sargent; directors, Mesdames James Moore, L. McCracken and Thomas Cooper; auditors, Mesdames John A. and Thos. H. Crowe.

During the year the Institute aided the school fair, cared for the shut-ins at Christmas, and to many who were ill, also to funerals, sent a box of Christmas cakes, and other goodies to the Armenian boys at Georgetown, and carried on classes in sewing and millinery, two weeks of each.

All women and girls are welcomed cordially to the Institue meetings. The delegate, Mrs. Touriss, who comes very highly recommended, wil be held on June 15. No charge is made for these lectures, and light refreshments will be served.

During the past year the Institute has had talks on "Why An Institute?" "Mother and Daughter", "Women Helping in the Home Finance", "Gardening", "House-Cleaning", and an illustrated lecture on "Home Beautifications" by Mr. McCrae.

The Warsaw branch, which is the pioneer branch in this district, has affiliated with Norwood and Belmont branches, forming a district, and the first district annual meeting will be held at Norwood on Wednesday, June 9, to which the Warsaw delegates are: District President, Mrs. David Miller; District secretary, Mrs. Thomas Cooper; District director, Mrs. L. McCracken, and Mesdames T. H. Crowe and Richard Batten.

All members of the Institute are welcome to attend, indeed it is desirable that they should—though only the delegates have votes. Miss Ethel Chapman, assistant general superintendent of Woman's Institutes will be there. Miss Haycroft of Bowmanville, divisional representative should be there, and Rev. Ira W. Pierce has asked for a few minutes.

Attended Re-Union

Of the many who went from near Warsaw with the ninety-third battalion, only Vivian Jackson, Charles Morrison, Thomas Fitzgerald, Garret McMurray and David Miller still live near Warsaw. All of these, except Garret McMurray, who could not go, went together to the reunion on Monday evening.

LAKEFIELD'S ENTERPRISE.

The citizens of Lakefield whose civic enterprise has been well attested in many other ways, are to be congratulated upon the new equipment that has been added to the village Fire Department.

A modern fire truck, well equipped, will enable Lakefield volunteer fire-fighters to reach the scene of a fire much more quickly and to do better work when they get there.

The brigade is composed of enthusiastic residents of the village under the direction of Chief Allan Clarke, a veteran of the Great War, and has been faithful in its attendance at drills and keenly interested in the responsibilities of the service the members have undertaken.

In the fine spirit that has been shown by its volunteer firemen Lakefield has been well served, and it is a matter for congratulation that the brigade is now equipped with as complete and modern apparatus for fire-fighting as is possessed by any village in the Province.

THE PHRASE FACTORY.

Mr. Coote, the Progressive member for MacLeod, struck a popular note when he declared that the House of Commons could get its work done in four months instead of six and would only have to sit from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m., if it had reasonable rules to facilitate the debate.

The protesting Progressive dubbed the Commons a "factory of words and phrases," and declared that all parties were equally guilty in prolonging the session.

There seems no doubt of that fact; the tendency to talk at length about anything and everything seems to be a national and not a party characteristic as it works out at Ottawa.

The public is waiting to hear from the committee appointed to study ways and means of expediting the business of Parliament, and which is expected to bring in recommendations that will make long speeches a thing of the past.

It has been suggested that the back-benchers be held to a limit of thirty minutes.

If the leaders will agree to correspondingly cut down their remarks, the half-hour maximum will be regarded by the public as a decided improvement over present conditions, which allowed the members unlimited opportunities to fill Hansard with a mass of words.

THE CONCERT SEASON OPENS.

The park concert season is announced as opening tomorrow with a programme by the Male Voice Choir and the Rangers Band.

The resumption of these concerts will be welcomed by hundreds of citizens to whom the weekly programmes represent a source of recreation and enjoyment.

May the Examiner plead—not for the first time, it may be said—for a chance for those citizens who love music to enjoy the concerts under favourable auspices.

There are several things that, to use an expression familiar with radio enthusiasts, interfere with good reception.

There is the motorist who chooses the playing of a pianissimo passage as the logical moment for testing the hill-climbing properties of his machine.

His name is legion, and as a wrecker of a fine movement by the musicians he is in a class by himself.

There is the proud mother of a large family who, as it were, turns her numerous offspring out to grass upon their arrival at the park, with the result that the peace and sometimes the nervous system of music-lovers is completely shattered.

There are the small boys who regard a band concert crowd as the ideal location for one of those pursuit games so dear to the juvenile heart, and there is nothing quite so disturbing to a man who is following with keen enjoyment a passage from a standard overture as to have 75 lbs. of small boy unexpectedly precipitated into his lap or spilled over his feet.

Other offenders there are as well; let us hope 1926 will see an improvement in this respect.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

Probably everyone is aware that the amount of money given annually by Parliament to maintain the volunteer force has been continuously pared down until now it has reached starvation point. There ought to be public sympathy for the appeal which the Canadian Infantry Association is making to the Government for some increase in the amount allowed for volunteer training.

The militia is a valuable national school of education in some important respects, and should have the hearty sympathy of the public. A time may come when neither regular soldiers nor volunteers may be needed for military purposes. The hope of all of us is that the League of Nations will result eventually in some general world scheme of disarmament, but it is to be remembered, and this is a point which many of us overlook, that the militia are a necessity, not for war, but for law and order. Some good people among us who object to what they consider to be militarism, are so obsessed by their dread of "militarism" that they forget that even if war in the world were entirely abolished, something in the nature of a national force would be needed in every civilized country. If there were no militia there would have to be either a strong national police force, which would inevitably be a more expensive thing, or every municipality in the country would have to increase its police. Law and order, the comfort of the citizen, the safety of life and property, all depend and must always depend upon the existence of some force available in the nation as the last resort as a safeguard against the turbulent or predatory nature of a proportion of human beings, and the resultant lawlessness which would ensue if there were no force behind the law.

Canada has cut down beyond the safety point the maintenance of her militia, and it certainly will not be creditable to the ten millions of us in this country if we allow the volunteer force to keep starved down to the strength of thirty or forty thousand men, which is about the active establishment at present.—Ottawa Journal.

BREAD-WINNING AND EDUCATION.

"A cultural wage" is advocated by Owen D. Young, chairman of a large electrical organization in the United States. By this he means a wage that will enable a man to develop his intellect, and thereby give him a fair chance to take advantage of the opportunities that are offered in the Republic. That, he says, must ever remain the objective of a high order of industrial society, a society that gives to its members adequate opportunities to achieve the very highest and noblest in the common life of the nation.

This is rather remarkable language coming from a member of the employing classes, who at the same time claims the right to profits as a stimulus to industrial enterprise. It embodies the right ideal of education in a democratic country. Those who advocate the maximum of educational opportunities are sometimes told that they are aiming at the impossible, because there is no such thing as equality in intellectual capacity. In this objection two things are confused. It is true that education will not produce equality. Indeed Ruskin says that education is just the test that shows inequality. But that is no valid argument against equality of intellectual opportunity; because nobody knows what is the intellectual capacity of a child rich or poor, high or low in social rank, until the test of education has been applied.

Experience has shown, so fully that it has become a mere commonplace, that genius or talent may be found in the children of the poorest and most obscure, and stupidity or mediocrity in the children of the rich and those of the highest social rank. Therefore, the old notion of confining higher education to the privileged classes, and giving only a meagre educational diet to the poor, was essentially wrong. The development of the intellectual and spiritual resources of the nation is more important than that of its material resources. And the higher resources cannot be fully developed without surveying the whole field of humanity.

There are, of course, practical difficulties in the way. Higher education is expensive, and there are many who cannot afford to keep children who do not earn their own living until they have finished a collegiate course. For these children, however, much may be done by extension lectures and by study in the hours of leisure, which are longer now than in former years. Primary school education ought to be so arranged as to prepare these under-privileged children to use these facilities when they leave school. Co-operation between schools and public libraries ought to be an objective.

It may also be contended that because a large proportion of the population is required for mechanical occupations, therefore children destined for them ought not to be educated beyond their sphere or station in life. This is quite unsound. There is no reason why a mechanic or a farm-worker should not be highly educated, or why even an unskilled laborer should be debarred from intellectual recreation in his leisure hours. Machinery is largely obviating the necessity for unskilled labor. If it also necessitates some monotonous labor, all the more reason why those whose work lacks interest and the joy of craftsmanship should find compensation in intellectual pursuits outside of their working hours.—London Advertiser.

HOW LABOUR BEATS ITSELF.

Although there is Scriptural authority for the belief that there is no new thing under the sun, our newspaper headline writers will find something "unique" at least once a week if they break a leg. Therefore, the British general strike was the "first of its kind" and accepted as such by editorial writers who have not found the usefulness of records. There was a general strike in Sweden in 1909 which attracted some intelligent attention here. It lasted more than twice the nine days' wonder in England and flattened out for the same reasons. It was said in these notes that if labour did not win in forty-eight hours it could not win at all. If we could really hear ourselves think in these strident times, we would know that labour cannot win such a contest without beating itself. It cannot lift itself by its bootstraps, but the effort can upset its balance. The Swedish effort was not so well organized as that in Britain. In some instances the wrong unions struck.

There was, moreover, no unemployment dole, which is perhaps why the strike lasted three weeks. What both general strikes showed is that the inarticulate middle class, when organized in the cause of law and order, is by no means so helpless as the labour demagogues have assumed. The hand or machine worker is also a consumer for two-thirds of his time, and he is notoriously the consumer least able to protect himself. Whoever is hit by the general strike, he, in the very nature of things, is hit first. He is the ultimate consumer, and everything is passed on to him. The highly skilled craftsman is in a class by himself, but we are beginning to see that most labour is unspecialized and easily replaced. Under our very noses we are replacing it by machinery. We are regulating the pace of the machine so that the man who tends it cannot loaf on the job. Parliament in Britain had granted labour unions both privileges and immunities. Labour organization in Sweden seventeen years ago was considered the most complete anywhere. But that country legislated some of the privileges out of existence. Britain proposes to see if the railroads cannot recover damages against union funds for striking without notice. The world's business should make up a subscription to indemnify the British for a world lesson cheap at any price.—Barron's.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

"Long may he reign over us."

Jules Verne never dreamed of a transportation system quite as speedy as that which has been used to carry Canadian liquor to Mexico.

There are already two dry parties in the Ontario arena, but what seems to be worrying a lot of people more is that there is as yet no official wet party.

The attention of the city fathers is called to the fact that, although the season is at hand, there is no dressing-room accommodation for women bathers at Inverlea Park.

A reader reminds the Examiner that the grove referred to in this paper the other night is Wallis' Grove, not Wallace's. He's right—but the mistake does not destroy the merit of the argument. No matter what its name, this property deserves better treatment at the hands of visitors.

Two brothers who settled near Hamilton one hundred years ago are represented by 5,214 descendants. It is evident that this family must have been unusually careful at grade crossings.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., June 3.—(Canadian Press).—The foreign demand for Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was good but as the prices bid were out of line with exporters' views, the volume of business was curtailed. The only sale reported was an odd load of oats to the United Kingdom. The trade in the domestic market was also inactive but prices were unchanged.

Extreme dullness marked the flour trade but prices for spring and winter wheat grades were well maintained.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 3.—(Canadian Press).—Sustained selling apparently from Winnipeg and the east yesterday brought about a setback in wheat values despite an otherwise strong upward trend. Rains in Kansas and relative weakness of the Liverpool wheat market had considerable bearish influence. Chicago closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 1-4 to 1 5-8 net lower, with corn 1-4 to 1-2c up, oats virtually unchanged and provisions varying from five cents decline to a rise of 15 cents.

Downturns in wheat values came chiefly in the late dealings and were accompanied by that Argentina is shipping more wheat to Europe than was expected and that the Canadian visible supply has been slow to dimish. However, export demand for wheat from North America appeared to be active today and sales were estimated as high as 1,250,00 bushels, chiefly Canadian. Besides, frosts were predicted for the Dakotas and Minnesota to-night. Crop deterioration officially reported from Kansas and Nebraska also tended to lift the market at times.

A better milling demand for wheat was in evidence today and suggestions were numerous that domestic stocks will be sharply curtailed this month.

Reports from 1,000 country correspondents made public here today indicated that domestic stocks of wheat on farms are 25 percent less than the total a year ago. Better demand for future deliveries of corn was apparent. Buying appeared to be based a good deal on the lateness of planting as likely to mean reduced production. Oats lacked feature.

Provisions were firm owing to the smallness of the increase of warehouse blocks here in May.

MONTREAL, Que., June 3.—(Canadian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were noted here yesterday as follows:

FATAL UNPREPAREDNESS.

The Editor of The Examiner:

At the first decennial re-union of the 93rd Battalion, C.E.F., held in the G.W.V.A. Hall, Peterboro, Ont., Monday evening, May 31, 1926, it was resolved: "That whereas the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada, in session at Kingston, Ont., has apparently declared against all war and all forms of preparedness for war, and especially in the regard to educational officer and cadet training for the same; therefore, this meeting requests that the said conference say if Canada did rightly or wrongly in taking part in the late war, and if all or any forms of preparation for the said participation were and are to be condemned or approved accordingly, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the said conference with request for an answer as soon as may be convenient."

The opinion was freely expressed by many of the veterans present that it would be criminal to send men to war without all the preparation possible, and that if war is to be at any time a necessary resort propaganda against preparation for it is likely to prejudice greatly the chances of success as well as the lives of those engaged, and that if the womanhood of this Dominion is not prepared to go undefended in case of attack the sentiments of the conference should be rebuked by it accordingly. It would appear as if a certain class are determined to seize and rule the Province and are advocating defenceless.

STEVENS AMAZED ON LEARNING 'NOTORIOUS SMUGGLER' OBTAINS HIS FREEDOM ON LEGAL SHIFTS

Customs Committee Told Company Shipped Liquor Without Knowing It.

MIX-UP IN ROUTING.

One Shipment Actually Reached Havana By Accident, Say Letters.

OTTAWA, June 3 (Canadian Press).—The arrest and trial of Benjamin J. Cohen, of Montreal, on a charge of having smuggled silk in his possession for sale, was described in the customs probe yesterday, while his trial on two such charges is being continually adjourned in the courts. Cohen was arrested on still another charge under the Smuggling Act on May 19, and his appearance in trial on that charge is pending. His counsel succeeded, in the teeth of opposition from the Federal authorities, it was stated, in securing continuous adjournments of the trial on the original charges from last October until next September.

Hon. H. H. Stevens commented that it was amazing that a "notorious smuggler" could get the benefit of legal shifts to permit him to continue his depredations on the public treasury.

The report of the preventive service officers showed that considerable smuggling of silk was going on. Twenty seizures had been made and most of the silk seized came, in their opinion, from Cohen's establishment.

Auditors' Report

Another auditors' report on distilleries was read yesterday.

It brought out no sensational evidence. Yesterday's sitting of the probe practically cleared up the distillery investigation and leaves the way clear for the Rock Island revelations, which begin today. The open sittings of the committee may not end this week, but the majority of them will. The committee is sitting today, although the House is adjourned over the King's Birthday holiday.

Shipments of Liquor

Twenty-five shipments of liquor were made in 1925 and 1926 from Walkerville to Mexico via the Detroit River, in the name of the Distillers' Corporation Limited, without that company knowing anything about it.

This is the evidence given to the auditors for the customs probe, Clarkson, Gordon and Dilworth, as recorded in the auditors' report to the customs committee.

The auditors have been investigating the operations of the Distillers Corporation, Limited, and found nothing irregular in the books of the company. They were, however, informed that on twenty-five separate occasions in 1925-1926, shipments were made from the Walkerville Distilleries in the name of the company. The shipper apparently was one, S. Nathanson, and the consignee for most of the shipments was the same. Other shipments were consigned to "Klix," "Dockstader," "Weiser," and to two other names which are reported "illegible."

All the shipments were ordered and shipped in the manner described at previous sittings of the probe; that is, they were delivered to the wharf at Walkerville for shipment by steamboat to Mexico. The inference has been throughout the probe that since it was almost a physical impossibility for a boat to sail from Walkerville to Mexico such liquor always found its way to Detroit.

Letters Read

Letters were read showing that steamship lines, storage companies and others were in correspondence with the customs department to find out how they could so route liquor from Canada to Havana, via St. Pierre Miquelon, without payment of the double-duty bond exacted in Canadian ports as evidence of good faith. The shipper in the combination was W. George, Ltd., Montreal. Customers were in sight for Canadian rye to be delivered at St. Pierre or to St. John's, Newfoundland. A trial shipment of 107 cases was made for transhipment at Halifax en route to Havana to avoid the longer haul and the excise duties as well. A tentative price of $15 per case was quoted by the George Company. The correspondence disclosed that there was some mix-up over the routing so that "the shipment actually reached Havana by accident," as Mr. Calder put it.

It was then too late to carry out the original plan of transhipping at Halifax en route and placing in sufference warehouse until it could be sold under the rose. Effort was made to sell it in Havana; George, the shippers, and consignees, the Farquhar S. S. Co., trying to pass the responsibility to each other. Finally it was sold at $12.50 a case.

There were other shipments between the George Companies, the Farquhar Co., and the C. P. Chartier of St. Pierre, agent for the George Companies there. There appeared to be some shipments, actually sold in Halifax, on which sales tax should have been paid to the Canadian treasury, said Hon. H. H. Stevens. He thought claims should be made upon the George Companies therefor.

An agreement between the parties fixing the rate of commission on sales contained a clause that nothing in the agreement should "Interfere with bona fide shipments" to St. John's, on which no commission was to be paid.

A number of files were read containing reports on alleged smuggling of silk by eight firms in Montreal. Of these, some admitted smuggling and were prosecuted.

Canada's Chief Industry Is Exportation Of Brains Declares President Of Rockefeller Foundation

OTTAWA, Ont., June 3. (Canadian Press.) — "One of the chief industries of Canada, is the export of brains and character to the United States," declared Dr. George E. Vincent, president of the Rockefeller Foundation, addressing the evening session of the annual meeting of the Board of Governors of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada at the Chateau Laurier.

"An export tax upon these precious but intangible products would add substantially to the revenues of the Dominion, and we on the other side would deeply deplore the imposing of an embargo," continued Dr. Vincent.

"Our debt to Canadian nurses is a large one, which it is a pleasure to acknowledge. The other evening in New York I addressed a graduating class of nurses, and more than a third of them were from the Dominion. I am glad, however, that Canada protects itself by keeping at home a fine group and organizing it for efficient work."

Dr. Vincent congratulated the order on its broad conception of the nurses' function, the flexibility of the organization, loyalty to high standards, and its readiness to turn over the task of nurse training to university schools.

"The chief things that the public must be led to understand are that many scoial careers are competing with nursing for the services of young women to-day, that personality and family and cultural background are of vital importance in the nurse, that sound professional training is essential, that high standards for such training and for nursing service must be maintained for the protection of society, that a system of registration for nurses is indispensible that adequate compensation and provision for the future are necessary, and that social appreciation and esteem provide both a stimulus and a reward."

LINDSAY CITIZENS TRAVEL TO OTTAWA

Try To Locate New Industry For Town in Arsenal.

LINDSAY, June 3.—A deputation of local citizens visited Ottawa this week and had an interview with the Militia Department relative to securing a portion of the Dominion Arsenal plant in this town for the Edwards Tannery Co., which is anxious to secure quarters for their branch industry wiped out by fire at Woodbrige a few weks ago. As a result of the interview the Department sent an ordnance inspector to Lindsay yesterday to look over the plant before dealing with the request.

It is understood that if room is available for the thousands of rifles at present in the inspection department of the arsenal in another section of the plant, the Militia Department might feel inclined to consider the question of leasing a portion of the plant to the Edwards firm.

The Beal Leather Company is at present occupying a section of the plant under lease, and the conditions are such that they give the Government the opportunity of using the plant whenever it is required. The same conditions, it is understood, will apply in case the government feels disposed to permit the Edwards Company to occupy a portion of the plant.

It is understood that some twenty-five municipalities have been after the industry, but the choice of location has narrowed down to Peterborough and Lindsay.

VICTIM OF ATTACK IS GETTING WEAKER

Believe It Was Gang Who Lived in District Who Were Responsible.

REGINA, Sask., June 3 (Canadian Press).—"Weaker to-day; her condition is serious."

Those words from Preeceville yesterday afternoon described the condition of Miss Emma Lindolum, victim of an attack by bandits early Sunday morning when an unsuccessful attempt was made to rob the Preeceville branch of the Bank of Toronto.

The report was made following a consultation with Dr. J. G. Warren, who was called from Canora, Sask., by the local attending physician, Dr. W. R. Neill.

While the four or more men involved in the attack on Miss Lindolum and the raid on the bank have not been taken, a message from Preeceville yesterday stated that the general impression of the people in the town and the probable theory of the Provincial police was that a gang who lived in the Preeceville district were responsible. It was held the attempt on the bank was too crude to be the work of a regularly organized gang of bank robbers.

Permit Red Cross Society To Dispose of Properties It Had Acquired.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 3.—(Canadian Press.)—Two bills were given third reading without debate in the House of Commons last night. One bill amends the Canadian Red Cross Society Act to permit the organization to dispose of properties which it had acquired. The other bill increases the proportion of the cost of railway grade crossings to be borne by the Federal government from 25 to 40 per cent. and setting the maximum expenditure at $25,000 instead of $15,000 on each crossing constituted under the terms of the Railway Act.

PROVOST OF TRINITY

the delegates rising and singing the doxology.

At the conclusion of the meeting Bishop Williams telegraphed Dr. Seager offering him the see and requesting an immediate reply, the meeting having adjourned until 8 o'clock for this purpose.

Bishop Williams said in regard to Dr. Seager that there was in Canada no man better fitted for the position. He had always found him a Christian gentleman, of great sanity in judgment and moderate in all things.

When the Synod re-assembled the Bishop of Huron reported that he had had a telephonic communication with Dr. Seager, who said he would accept the bishopric if the authorities of Trinity College would consent to his release. He promised to get in touch with these authorities at once and wire a definite answer to the Bishop. If the reply is in the negative another meeting of the Synod will be called next month to select a bishop.

Rev. Dr. Charles Allen Seager, was born in Goderich, where his father is County Crown Attorney for Huron. He was educated at the University of Trinity College, and graduated with high honors in Philosophy in 1895.

Dr. Seager held his first charge, following his ordination to the priesthood, at St. Thomas' Church, Toronto. There he served for one year under the present Bishop of Ottawa, Right Rev. J. C. Roper, before being appointed rector of St. Cyprian's Church. After fourteen years in charge of the latter parish, he moved to Vernon, B.C., in 1911, and a year later began his career as an educationist by accepting the principalship of St. Mark's Hall, in the Anglican Theological College fo British Columbia at Vancouver.

In 1917, St. Mark's Hall, having been practically closed through the enlistment of its students, he returned to Toronto to become rector of St. Matthew's Church. Later he was appointed special lecturer on the staff of Trinity College and on the retirement of Rev. Dr. T. C. S. Macklem in 1921, was chosen by the corporation to succeed to the Provostship of his alma mater.

In 1901, Dr. Seager married Miss Lillian Patterson, daughter of the late Rev. Charles Patterson. He is a Canon of St. Alban's Cathedral and Chancellor of the Chapter.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Do not use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much free alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

MARION DAVIES Whose beautiful hair enhances her charms

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is inexpensive and beats anything else all to pieces.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store, and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified. Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.

AN EASY WAY TO GET THIN.

A new way to get thin, discovered by Dr. G. Leven of the Therapeutic Society of Paris will interest stout people who dread the summer. It involves no medicine nor strenuous exercise, says Popular Science Monthly. In fact, the treatment may be taken in bed.

All that is necessary besides following an easy, non-fattening diet, it is reported, is to inhale very little air and to breathe out hard. The usual dose is five exhalations every half hour, fifteen to twenty times a day.

HOME-MAKING HELP

THE EMERGENCY SHELF.

No one realizes more keenly than the up-to-date housekeeper, the extreme friendliness of the emergency shelf. Company is apt to appear at any time, and even the best of housewives is not always ready for entertaining.

Never have there been so many goodies with which to stock a shelf as there are today. Every course from "soup to nuts" is provided for and a quickly prepared meal of excellence is the result of a raid on the shelf.

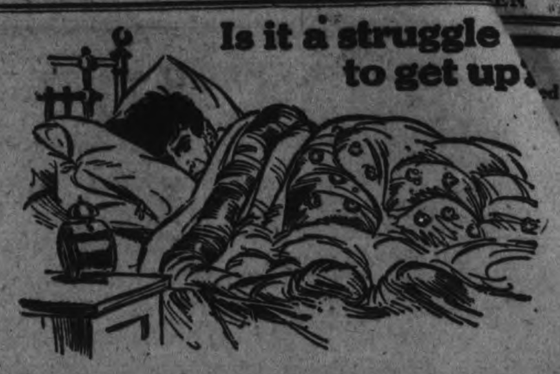
When stocking her shelf, the wise woman tries out various brands of a food and stocks that which is most satisfactory, with recipes at hand for its preparation. Can cookery is a bit different from fresh food cookery and must be studied a bit before one can be sure of a successful outcome. Many of the foods are already cooked, or partially so, and need only warming before serving. Sometimes they must be warmed in the can before opening, but they must not be over-cooked.

Ready-made French dressing and mayonnaise are a boon for the salad course. A well-filled spice box, bottle of curry powder, several of the better store sauces and dried flavorings are invaluable aids in this special branch of cookery. Excellent beef tea cubes make good foundation for a quick brown sauce. Canned spaghetti, ready to heat and serve, makes another dish excellent to help out the meal.

So many delicious things are prepared and put up in glass that it is an easy matter to find whatever one may need for an emergency. Lobster, shrimp, crab-flakes, creamed chicken, vegetables of all sorts are to be had, and make a valuable addition to the emergency shelf.

Canned fruits and puddings, even pudding sauces come in tins, should also be on hand to eke out the dessert, and with the popularity of the delicatessen stores, one is never at a loss when unexpected guests arrive.

Is it a struggle to get up?



Don't you wish you could always wake up fresh and brisk, ready to tumble out of bed jolly and bright-eyed?

Well, you can.

If you wake up feeling lazy and sluggish and sleepy there's a reason for it, and the reason is that your system is lazy and tired and sluggish.

Probably you lead a sedentary life, have to sit a good deal during the day, don't get enough open air, and physical exercise. Week-end walks or Saturday golf are not enough. Consequently your internal system becomes inactive. Liver and kidneys don't perform their natural functions actively enough.

As a result they let impurities creep into the blood which would never get there if you were leading an active, open-air life. The presence of these impurities in your blood causes constipation, depression, headache, "fits of the blues," and a general feeling of lassitude. Work is a drudge, your outlook is not so happy as it should be, you feel sleepy after meals and lazy in the mornings.

There's no need to feel like this. There's no need to envy those jolly, cheerful people who are always brimming over with fun and energy.

YOU

can feel like that too. Take a pinch of Kruschen Salts in your breakfast cup

EVERY MORNING.

Just a pinch only, as much as will lie on a 10 cent piece, but—it must be every morning. You can't taste it. You won't know you are taking salts, but you will soon notice the difference. Kruschen Salts restore the liver and kidneys to healthy activity so that they perform their natural functions thoroughly. Impurities are cleansed from the blood. Fresh, clear blood circulates all over the system, bringing new, tingling health to every fibre of the body. You wake up refreshed by sleep, cheerful, full of energy, ready to spring out of bed. All day and every day you feel happier, keener, physically and mentally.

Tasteless in Coffee or Tea

Put as much in your breakfast cup as will lie on a 10 cent piece. It's the little daily dimeful that does it.

Kruschen Salts

Good Health for Half a Cent a Day

The dose to cover a 10 cent piece every morning is found in practice just the right amount for a most invigorating daily tonic. The medicinal dose for persons suffering from pains of rheumatism and gout, or habitual constipation, with inactive liver, etc., is that given on the label of the bottle, viz., half to one teaspoonful in a tumbler of hot water before breakfast.

ECONOMY.—A 75c bottle of Kruschen Salts lasts nearly six months. Health and good spirits for half a cent a day. Get a bottle at your Druggist's to-day, and start to-morrow.

"THESE WOMEN"

By MALCOLM DUART

COPYRIGHT 1926

The Characters and Situations in this Story are entirely fictional.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

HARRY MORTON, visiting his mines in Arizona for the first time in many years, has just seen his ancient enemy convicted of crime and on his way to prison for a long term. The man has ruined Morton's boyhood sweetheart, and left Morton to bring up AUDREY, his sweetheart's child.

Morton has just received a letter from Audrey, now 19 years old.

Morton's home is in Peterborough, but he maintains an expensive apartment in Toronto.

A group of Toronto chorus girls have been visiting Audrey in Peterborough while Morton is gone. JOHN PARRISH, his secretary, has shown signs of love for Audrey, who in turn has loved her guardian.

NONA, a Toronto stage girl, also loves Morton.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XLII.

Placing the letter on his lap, Morton filled and lighted his pipe. Then, with his feet on the rough pine table, he opened the envelope.

"Dearest Daddy," the letter began.

Morton looked up.

"Can you tell me," he asked the superintendent, "why the average small, delicate girl will write in letters half an inch high? They all do it—or almost all."

"Yep, they do," agreed his companion. "I think I know why, though. You know women always talk emphatically, more than men do. Well, they write the same way."

Morton returned to his letter.

"I do hope you can come away from that terrible heat. I just pray that you won't be overcome. You haven't written anything about its being hot, but I remember, from the time when I was a tiny girl.

"Daddy, I'm getting worried about Mr. Parrish. The girls tormented him dreadfully at first. But finally he got to dancing with them, around the house evenings while I played the piano. Then he brought his guitar and played, and he even sang. Daddy, he is not a good singer. Two or three evenings he has taken the little blond girl out in his old flivver, and brought her home late. He is becoming a changed man. I thought I liked him better that way, to begin with, but he is positively becoming flippant, and not the way he used to be at all. I think a man should have some serious moments. Don't you? He has learned a lot of wise cracks from the girls and uses them all the time.

"Two telegrams came from Mr. Sunshine. First, he wanted the girls to come back, and they wouldn't go. Then he telegraphed that they couldn't appear in his revue. They did not care, as they said it was the first vacation with plenty of food they have had in a good while. But I am beginning to think it is time for them to go home now. I do not see how Mr. Parrish can be such a good secretary for you under their influence.

"Nona is back in Toronto, you know. The producer is going to open his show this summer instead of in the fall, as he intended at first. I had a letter from her yesterday. She says that the other show she was in—the one she left to rehearse with me—was a failure, and the thin girl who was mad at me is out of work again. Isn't that too bad?

"That Mr. and Mrs. Carver who came to see you called here today. I think they just wanted to see the chorus girls up close. Most of the girls were looking at picture books, and they behaved very well. The neighbors don't speak to me at all, but I don't care. Mr. and Mrs. Carver are going to Europe. Wasn't it funny the way she acted? I think she is positively a scream. But she called her husband 'honey love,' so I think everything is all right.

"Nona says she is to be featured in the new show. Isn't that gorgeous?

"Please come home soon, daddy dear. I miss you so much.

"Lovingly, AUDREY."

Morton folded the letter and put it in his pocket.

"Everything all right?" asked the superintendent.

"Yes," Morton told him, "but I'd better be starting back."

He strolled to the cabin where he slept, when at the mines, and calling Eli, packed his bags and loaded them into the car.

"I'll keep on this shirt and these overalls until I hit civilization, again," he said. "They're comfortable."

The two men traversed the long trail to Yuma, sociably silent, for the most part.

Morton's train did not leave until the following morning, and he took quarters at the hotel, bidding goodbye to his old friend.

"Don't wait so many years before you come back again," adjured Eli, as he took his departure.

"Maybe I'll come back here and live, when Audrey gets married," Morton said, smiling.

"Well, bring your bride along," said the other. "You're too young and spry to dodge the women, you know."

He drove off in his old car, Morton watching him until he was out of sight.

The next day, once more in the linen and tweeds of city life, Morton boarded his train, and settling himself in his compartment, turned to the pile of books he had purchased to lighten the journey.

He had telegraphed Audrey the hour of his arrival.

As he swung off the train, she ran to meet him.

"The girls have gone home and Mr. Parrish has had to go to Toronto because the butler and the cook in our apartment quit because it is too lonesome there when we are gone and he says he should get some others," she said, all in a breath.

He kissed her, and she clung to his arm as they left the station and climbed into his car.

"Any other troubles?" he asked.

She puckered her brow.

"Did you get my letter about the strange way Mr. Parrish is acting?" she asked. "Daddy, I think the real reason he went to Toronto is so he can see that blond girl!"

Morton raised his eyebrows.

"Indeed? His education is advancing."

"Well, I don't think it's right," she said. "They carried on, and laughed, and he danced with her more than with anybody else. Then one night she fixed up his face with rouge and lipstick, the way they fixed yours, and daddy, he imitated you!"

She waited for words of disapproval from him. Morton laughed.

"I would have enjoyed seeing it,' he told her.

"Did the red come off your nose?" she asked, the current of her thoughts suddenly changing.

"In the course of time," he said. "It came off in patches. I was told it was very funny."

She hugged his arm. "It's nicer having men around than girls," she said. "Girls can get so tiresome."

She considered. "Of course, Mr. Parrish conducted himself in a very tiresome way, too."

Morton was watching her face, amusedly.

"So you finally told the girls to go home," he said, with assurance.

"How did you know? Did they telegraph you?" She turned wondering eyes at him.

"You told me yourself—without intending to," he said. "It wasn't hard to add up what you said, and get the answer. What did you say to them?"

"I said you were coming home, exhausted from your trip, and would need quiet," she confessed.

"Blame it on me!" he chuckled. "But it's all right."

They alighted at their home, and were admitted by the little English housemaid. The chauffeur brought in Morton's bags, and carried them to the dressing-room upstairs. Morton followed, and leisurely bathed and changed his clothing.

When he came downstairs, luncheon was ready, and over their cups he told Audrey of the trials in Arizona, and of the final disappearance from the world of the man Smith.

She breathed a sigh of relief. "I didn't know how much I worried about that man, until you told me he's safe in jail," she said. "Will he ever get out?"

"Probably not," he told her. "The governor isn't likely to pardon an habitual criminal."

She placidly buttered a roll. "We don't have to be afraid of him any more, then, and Mr. and Mrs. Carver are on their way to Europe and the girls are back in Toronto. Daddy, there's almost nothing to worry about, is there?"

"Probably there is," he said. "We simply don't know what it is, yet. My experience is that there's ALWAYS something to worry about."

He went down to his office and spent the afternoon catching up with his neglected mail. There was a brief letter from Parrish, telling of his success in getting new servants for the Toronto apartment.

"If you want me to return at once, please wire," he said.

Morton telegraphed him to remain in Toronto until further orders.

At dinner that evening, Audrey appeared in a new frock.

"I bought it with my own money, out of the bank," she told him, proudly. "It cost a terrific lot."

"Pretty," he said abstractedly.

He finished the meal in silence, and sipped the glass of wine that the maid had set before him.

"Audrey," he said, "do you suppose that young fool Parrish is really running after that chorus girl?"

"I think so," she said seriously. "He began dressing in his knickerbockers every day, and in his evening clothes every night, after he got interested in her, and she said he was 'just grand'?"

"Let's go to Toronto," he proposed, with decision. "I suppose I ought to look after him. Besides, there's a lot of work for me to do in the office there. We'll go tomorrow afternoon."

A misty rain had wetted the streets of Toronto. Cars were skidding on the asphalt, and traffic policemen had difficulty in guiding the erratic vehicles that slipped sidewise as they turned at corners, or tried to stop.

Morton's big machine, leaving the station, took to a minor thoroughfare to avoid the crush of traffic. At one corner, however, a rushing taxicab failed to halt in time, and crashed into the side of the limousine.

Leaping out, Morton inspected the damage, the chauffeur angrily berating the taxi driver.

"We'll have to walk, or catch a taxi," Morton told Audrey. "It's only a couple of blocks."

He gave directions to the chauffeur about his baggage, and the care of the damaged machine, and then with the girl set off on foot.

Arriving at their apartment, damp and disheveled, the new butler failed to recognize them.

"Call the chambermaid," ordered Morton, curtly. "She'll identify us. I want to change my clothes."

The girl was summoned, and in a few moments, with the apologetic butler following behind, Morton ascended to his rooms. Audrey stopped to meet the new cook, and give instructions for service.

Throwing off his clothing, Morton drew another suit from the array that always awaited him in his closet. He laid it out on the bed, and went to the bathroom, where he turned on the shower.

He was interrupted by a discreet knock upon the door.

"What is it?" he shouted, turning off the noisy stream that was playing upon him.

"Lady below waiting for you," said the butler's voice.

"Confound the lady," roared Morton. "Tell her I'm in the bath. Call Miss Morton."

"She's in the bath, too," the butler said. "And the lady says she must see you and she can't wait. I think she is in trouble, sir."

"All right! All right!"

Morton took a huge bath towel, and rubbed himself down, vigorously. He donned his underclothing and hose, and stepped into a pair of slippers. Then he drew on a long silk lounging robe, and opening the door, passed into the hall and to the head of the stairs.

Looking down, he started.

Nona was sitting limply on a hall chair, her clothing torn, her hat gone, and with a long, bloody gash in her arm, which she held cradled in her other elbow.

DEBATE AT OMEMEE.

Young People's Union Hold Snap Debate—Decision For Affirmative.

OMEMEE, June 3.—The Young People's Union of Trinity United Church met in their final meeting of the season on Monday evening. The meeting was in charge of Cecil Kennedy. Following the devotional exercises, the Misses Katie and Mary Weir and Evelyn Bland with Elda Overholt as pianist, rendered a vocal trio, entitled, "Nailed to the Cross."

Several items of business were dealt with in connection with the programme to be carried out this fall, and F. G. Sandy and Miss Lila Parsons were appointed a committee to look after the special features to be given during the winter months.

A communication was read from Mrs. Golden, the district secretary, asking that the League open the doors of the church to the district debating teams who would like to meet here next Monday evening, this being the most central point. Consequently a motion was passed that a message be sent, heartily welcoming to Omemee the debating teams who are out to win the district shield. A committee was appointed to make all necessary arrangements, namely: the Misses Eva Race, Violet McBain, Marjory Connell, and Messrs. Vernon Lang and Irvine Connell.

The main feature of the programme, a snap debate, was then called. Sides were chosen with Miss Edna Morcombe as leader of the affirmative and Mr. Arthur Stinson as leader of the negative. The subject open for debate was "Resolved that the United church of Canada should cease to send missionaries to the foreign fields." The debaters were given one minute each in which to express their views. The judges were Rev. E. W. Rowland and the president, F. G. Sandy, with the latter acting as critic.

Considering that no preparation was given to the subject, it was well debated and the decision was given in favor of the affirmative.

Lunch was served at the close and a social time was enjoyed by all present.

NEW PLASTER DEADENS NOISE.

A new sound-absorbing plaster recently invented by Dr. Paul E. Sabine, of Geneva, Ill., will it is claimed, revolutionize modern hospital construction. According to Popular Science Monthly, it is said to absorb from eight to ten times as much sound as the ordinary plaster.

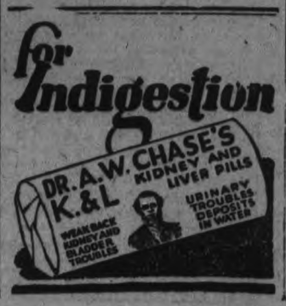
OMEMEE, June 3. — Herbert Latchford, of Bests Station, met with a painful accident at Sturgeon street station, Omemee, on Wednesday, when, helping to lay the heavy steel rails which are being put down, lost half of one middle finger on his right hand. The injury was dressed by Dr. Moir, the railroad doctor.



KING'S WHARF PERSONALS

KING'S WHARF, June 3.—The last couple of weeks have been wonderful weeks for the farmers, who are working from daylight until dark trying to get the crop in and are making great progress. The meadows look poor as there has been no growth and the people have to feed hay still to the cows as there is no grass yet.

Personals.

The Misses Lucy Sullivan, Marie O'Neill, Mary and Marguerite litzpatrick, of St. Joseph's Academy, Lindsay, spent the holiday at their home here.

Miss Minnie Guiry has returned to her home in Lindsay after spending a few days the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Guiry.

Miss Mary E. Harrington, of Lindsay, spent the holiday the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Harrington.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Perdue and family, of Peterboro', spent the holiday the guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Twomey.

Mr. and Mrs. Horton and family, who made cheese in the Maple Leaf Cheese Factory last summer, have moved to Dunsford where they intend to reside.

A man who gives his children habits of industry provides better than by giving them fortunes.—Whately.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

own Church), sermons become feeble apologies for that Word and weak solutions of it, reasoned doubts and moral platitudes, in which the great realities of sin and holiness, ruin and redemption, God and Eternity have small place, and the Church becomes a beneficiary society of men with God left out, and gradually sleeps the sleep of spiritual death.

"But the ministry also influences the Church by its life as well as by its teaching. A minister's most effective sermon is his daily life. On the other hand a single habit may spoil the influence of the best preaching. A minister should have no habits that a Christian mother would not wish to see indulged by her children."

Dr. Scott chose his text from Hebrews 13, 8: "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day and forever."

"On this Rock our fathers built the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and the rain descended and the floods came and the winds blew and beat upon that Church and it fell not, for it was founded upon a Rock," he said. "On this Rock we build our Church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. Our human part in the building of our Church includes three things: Doctrine, Polity, Life, and in all we build upon this Rock. On this Rock we build the doctrines of our Church. The two great central doctrines of the Christian faith, doctrines essential to a Christian Church, are the Deity of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and His atonement for sin, and both these doctrines meet us here, as in many another Scripture. On this Rock we build the doctrine of the Deity of Christ, for, if Jesus Christ be the same yesterday, to-day and forever, then He is God, for only of God can it be said that He is the 'same yesterday, to-day and forever.'

"For a moment of time in His changeless 'forever,' God touched our humanity to redeem it. In the words of our Shorter Catechism, 'Christ the Son of God became man by taking to Himself a true body and a reasonable soul, being conceived by the power of the Holy Ghost in the womb of the Virgin Mary, and born of her, yet without sin.' A wondrous mystery is the incarnation. We cannot understand it. But our own human life is mystery and yet we live it and love it. Much less can we expect to understand this mystery divine, 'God manifest in the flesh,' but a great multitude which no man can number have rested upon Him and trusted in Him, and of all that uncounted multitude none have ever found Him to fail.

"This great central doctrine of the Christian faith has been in all ages a special object of attack by rationalism in its varous forms, ever the enemy of that faith. That attack has been most constant and persistent upon His miraculous entry into our life, His virgin birth. And the denial of that virgin birth is usually a step to a denial of His Deity, and the reduction of Christianity to a system of morals, which offers in Christ an example to follow, but has no Divine Redeemer for a lost and helpless humanity, unable to follow.

"But in spite of attacks through all the ages, this doctrine, the Deity of Christ, shines out in an ever widening circle of light over a world sitting in darkness and in the region and shadow of death, and greater numbers to-day than ever before, join heart and voice in the great confession—Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God. On this Rock too we build other precious doctrines which gives the Deity of Christ its supreme value to a lost world, the doctrine of Christ's Atonement for Sin. If Jesus Christ were only a man, then His death upon the cross was no atonement for sin, but only one of the world's list of martyrdoms which began when the first brother of the human race killed his brother over a matter of worship.

"But if He be God then no one took from Him His life. He laid it down to Himself, the sinless Christ for sinful man. In His own words, 'I am the Good Shepherd. The Good Shepherd giveth His life for the sheep.' If He be God, then the Cross is not a tragedy but a triumph, not the power of evil, putting a good man to death, but the power of Love Divine bearing man's sin, giving Himself for man's redemption.

"There follows of necessity the sufficiency of that Atonement for all who will accept of it and surrender themselves to Christ; for if it be God's holy law that man has broken — if God Himself decides what will satisfy the truth and righteousness of that law, and open a way for man to come back to God, and if God in His infinite love satisfied that demand; if the truth that demands and the love that satisfies are one, then that satisfaction must be complete; and there is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit. Wondrous Redemption! Wondrous Love!

"There are two other doctrines of our Presbyterian Church akin to each other. One of these doctrines, often misrepresented and laughed to scorn by lack of knowledge and of thought, is that all things have their place in the eternal plan or purpose of God. Call it predestination, foreordination, the divine decree, or any other name; it had here, as in many another Scripture, its foundation; for if Jesus Christ be the same yetserday, to-day and forever, then He knows no change. He knows no past nor future. All is ever present with Him, and it can only be ever present with Him because it is His own will, His own eternal plan.

"The other of these two important kindred doctrines is a very precious one, the comfort of Christians in every age, the doctrine of the believer's final perseverance, and it too we build upon this Rock; for if Jesus Christ be the same yesterday, to-day and forever, and we have accepted His atonement for our sin, and surrendered heart and will and life to Him, and He has accepted that surrender and made us His own, then He will not, cannot, rescind that acceptance, that forgiveness, that adoption into the Family of God."

OBITUARY.

WILSON HULIN

One of the older residents of Stirling and one well known to nearly all in North Hastings passed away on Sunday night after a long illness, in the person of Wilson Hulin, who had been a stage driver and mail carrier for over 40 years retiring from the work in 1920. No road was too rough or storm too bad to hinder him from going his journey day after day. He was in his 80th year and was in good health until a few years ago. He was a life-long Liberal although he served under the rule of each party, always giving the best of service. Surviving him are his wife, who is an invalid, a daughter and four sons, one of which is Stirling's postmaster, all residing here.

The funeral was held from his late residence and was conducted by Rev. C. W. Barrett of the United Church. Interment was made in Stirling cemetery.

ALBERT BYRON GERMAN

HASTINGS, June 3. — The funeral of Albert Byron German was held on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. After prayer was offered at the home by the pastor, Rev. M. L. Hinton of the Hastings United Church, a service was held in the United Church.

The funeral was held under the auspices of the Masonic Order of which deceased had been a member, and the Percy Order and Hastings Lodges preceded the funeral procession to the church.

When a boy of ten years of age he came from Prince Edward to Percy to live with his parents and resided there uiftil about 12 years ago, when he came to Hastings, where he has since made his home.

The hymns sung at the service were "Come ye Disconsolate, where-e'er ye Languish," "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "Rock of Ages," and "Shall we Gather at the River?"

The text was taken from I Cor. 15, 21: "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead."

The bearers were Messrs. Alex. Wilson, James Stinson, John Collins, John Cruikshanks, John Jones, R. C. Doxsee.

The floral offerings were many; a wreath from the family, a pillow from Susie Kathryn, Ray and Chris, in Alberta, wreath, Masonic Lodge, Percy, wreath, Masonic Lodge, Hastings, spray, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. A. SMITH.

NORWOOD, June 3.—A cloud of sorrow overspread Norwood and vicinity on Wednesday when a telegram was received conveying the sad news of the sudden death of Mr. W. A. Smith, which occurred in the hospital at Esten, Sask.

The deceased was born in Norwood and was in his thirty-eighth year. When a boy he began his apprenticeship as a tinsmith with Mr. J. W. Rork. A little over nineteen years ago he went west, where, after a few years, he took up a homestead about eight miles from Esten. Last winter the deceased came east on a visit, and spent two months in the village a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Weir. He made many warm friends while here, who were shocked to hear of his death. What makes his sudden demise doubly sorrowful is the fact that he was to have been married in a few weeks to Miss Ona Finlay, who just left Norwood on Tuesday afternoon to spend a short time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Finlay, of Sudbury, prior to her marriage. Words cannot express the sorrow and sympathy that goes out to his fiancee, his mother, Mrs. E. A. Smith, of Toronto, and his sisters, Mrs. F. Jarvis of Toronto, and Mrs. T. Johnson, of Esten, who are left to mourn his loss.

The deceased was a Past Master of the Masonic Order.

The remains will be brought east for burial. The funeral will be held on Sunday upon the arrival of the C.P.R. noon train and interment will be made in the Norwood cemetery.

WELLAND, June 3.— (Canadian Press.)—Picking up a .22 calibre rifle which she found lying on a bed, Jula Molner, ten year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Molner, Crowland, was fatally injured when the weapon was discharged, the bullet entering her abdomen. The girl was rushed to Welland County Hospital, but died three hours later.

PILES GO QUICK

Without Salves or Cutting.

Thousands who have piles have not learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal medicine. Neither cutting nor any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a complete stagnation of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt was first to find the remedy and called his precription HEM-ROID. Dr. Leonhardt tried it in 1000 cases with the marvelous record of success in 98 per cent. and then decided it should be sold by druggists everywhere under a rigid money-back guarantee.

Don't waste any more time with outside application. Get a package of HEM-ROID from McDermid & Jury to-day. It has given safe and lasting relief to thousands and will do the same for you.

SUTHERLAND STARTS

submit his ruling to the House. The speaker, however, said that the question was whether the chairman's ruling was to be sustained and was a matter for the House to vote on.

The chairman's ruling then was sustained upon the ayes and nays being called.

Mr. Sutherland said he was "not surprised at the ruling of the chair in view of previous rulings."

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, amid loud Government shouts of "order, order," demanded that the member withdraw his reflection on the chair.

Chairman Duff also demanded the withdrawal. This met with loud protest from Conservative benches. "Withdraw what?" was shouted out several times.

Reverses Statement.

Mr. Sutherland said he was prepared to reverse his statement by saying "I am surprised at the ruling of the chair."

"Both statements are out of order," declared the chairman, while there were shouts and applause on both sides.

"If I could find some intermediate description between being surprised and not being surprised I would be prepared to make it," said Mr. Sutherland.

Mr. Meighen interjected the remark that the action of the chair had made impossible the ancient privilege of appeal.

Mr. Lapointe again protested against the "conduct of the leader of the Opposition in his attempt to impair the dignity of the chair."

Premier Kng took up the debate and referred again to the letter he had written to Mr. Woodsworth saying that it was written prior to his going to Prince Albert when he did not know whether or not he would return to the House as a member, and it was done to place on record the position of the Government.

The Minister of Justce again took up the point of the withdrawal of the reflections made upon the chairman's ruling.

Mr. Sutherland said he was "surprised" at the treatment given him by the Premier and the chairman. Later he stated he was "not surprised at the treatment." Mr. Sutherland then withdrew the word "surprised."

Hon. Lucien Cannon, Solicitor General, said it was the duty of members to respect the chair. He did not think the member for South Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) should take part in the deliberations of the committee unless he followed the chair.

Mr. Meighen said no reflection and no offence had been given to the chair. Mr. Sutherland had withdrawn the word "surprised."

Robert Forke, Progressive leader, expressed his disappointment at what had taken place in the House. Members should obey the chair. Finally, Chairman Duff asked if he had withdrawn the word "surprised." Mr. Sutherland said that he had done so, which statement Chairman Duff said he wold accept.

TOOTH EXTRACTION.

You examine a tooth following its extraction and you wonder just why it was so hard to pull.

And also, being just bony tissue, as it seems, you cannot see how it could hurt quite as much as it did.

But the tooth is not simply bone tissue encased in bone, for, between the two there is a soft tissue lining called the pericementum. It is into this tissue that are attached the myriads of tiny fibres which hold the tooth in place.

Now you will remember how in "Gulliver's Travels," the Lilliputian Chains were like so many fragile strands of thread yet, together, in their thousands, they sufficed to hold Gulliver securely to the ground.

So when a tooth is 'drawn,' these countless fibres have to be literally torn across, requiring a great expenditure of force; with this rending, they 'cry loudly,' causing pain.

Remember too, that in the single rooted teeth, there is oftimes a bulbous portion on the root while with the multi-rooted teeth, these roots are generally spreading and not infrequently crooked, all of which make for their stability in the bony jaw.

So that in extraction the problem presents of forcing these enlarged and spreading or crooked roots through the narrow aperture of the supporting bone, which snugly fits the tooth neck.

Where the alveolus is tight, this is fairly easy of accomplishment, through springing apart the alveolar 'plates,' but where the bone is thick and dense, or the roots unduly spread or crooked, greater difficulty is met. In such cases, the difficulties are overcome through resorting to other methods of extraction.

But of course it does seem but a simple matter to have a tooth pulled, doesn't it?

Yet, it must not be forgotten that every extraction, no matter how apparently simple, is a surgical operation, wherein the body tissues are exposed to infection, with its grave consequences to health and life, and hence, tooth extraction should not be too lightly regarded.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

DOTTY SEES A QUEER LITTLE HONEY POT.

"Look! Look!" Dotty exclaimed, when the little ant sitting on a fragrant flower drew out a big drop of honey from the blossom's honey well. "That's the first time I've ever seen an ant gather honey like that. What kind of an ant are you anyway, I'd like to know?"

"I'm Mrs. Honey Ant," replied the little ant, bowing very politely to Dotty. "Haven't you ever seen a Honey Ant before?"

"Never heard of one," said Dotty. "Why do they call you a Honey Ant?"

"Because I gather honey like the bees do," replied Mrs. Honey Ant. "It's plain to be seen, you haven't been in Mexico very long."

Dotty shook her head.

"No I don't live here, I'm just visiting my aunt. We don't have any honey ants up in the New England States I'm sure. But tell me, what are you going to do with that honey?"

"What do you suppose?" laughed Mrs. Honey Ant. "Take it home and put it into my honey-pot. Come along and let me show you one of the queerest honey-pots you ever saw in your life. Then when you go home you can tell your little friends about me."

Smacking her wee little lips, Mrs. Honey Ant ran down a little path in the grasses with Dotty at her heels. They soon reached Mrs. Honey Ant's house, a low gravel-covered mound about six inches wide and about three inches high.

"I Am a Honey Ant."

Mrs. Honey Ant led Dotty down a tunnel, about four inches long, into a queer little chamber. At first Dotty couldn't see a thing. Mrs. Honey Ant blew her breath on Dotty's head and the whole place seemed flooded with magic light.

On the very ceilings of the little chamber Dotty could see funny little ants hanging. The front part of their bodies were just like Mrs. Honey Ant's but the back part of their bodies were great big things. They looked like great big glass bottles. The skin was to transparent you could see they were filled with honey.

"Isn't that too funny for words," Dotty whispered to Mrs. Honey Ant. "Are those your honey pots? Where did they get all that honey? How did they get back home with it?"

"Yes, these are our honey pots, I was telling you about," replied Mrs. Honey Ant. "But they have never left the home. You see we select so many out of every hatch and call them honey-pots. They are never allowed to leave the house but must always hang upon the ceilings. When we come home with honey we just put that honey into their mouths. The back part of their body holds that honey until it is needed by the workers. If you'll notice, they couldn't get away if they wanted to, their bodies are too heavy for their legs. But they are glad to be of some use in the world; so they hang there and hold honey for the workers. We'd better get out before some native discovers us or they will steal our honey pots. These Mexican natives eat the honeypots you know." Then Mrs. Honey Ant led Dotty back into the sunshine just as her Mama called her home for dinner.

Dotty's Mama thought she had dreamed the whole affair when she told it at the supper table; but Dotty's Aunt said it was all true. So after dinner she took them all out into the woods to show them the home of the real-live honey-pots.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

FRIDAY, JUNE 4.

Conflicting testimonies rule the chart for this day. Although there are several excellent conditions foreshadowed, with much activity to make the day a memorable one, yet certain hazardous figures presage perplexities and complications. There may be opportunity for important change or travel, but these should not be embraced rashly or impetuously. Tumultuous and quarrelsome tendencies should be suppressed. With proper consideration of affairs in hand, especially of a commercial nature or in the matter of publications, things may flourish. Domestic, social and affectional matters should give satisfaction.

Those whose birthday it is are assured an important year, with change of benefit, new opportunities for advancement, provided they do not precipitate matters with undue haste or rush into them without proper consideration. Also the temper should be controlled and litigation shunned. Personal affairs should thrive. A child born on this day should be enterprising and adventurous, but may be cloud its best interests by impetuous or irritable conduct or rash acts.

Under the candle-flowered chestnut trees of the Champs Elysées, very much in the public eye on the Avenue Bois de Boulogne, down the shady alleys of the Bois itself, juvenile Paris rolls its hoops in frocks whose chic can be measured by inches. A new model from the Rue Saint Honoré is smocked at the shoulder and tied at the hip. Paris makes it mostly of crêpe de Chine and wool jersey and the new dotted silk or cotton crêpes. Pale-blue linen with bindings of apple-green bias tape makes an enchanting little frock. Pale-brown pongee with dark brown in one's eyes, hat, smocking and slippers make a chic ensemble.

HER OWN WAY by A GIRL of TODAY

SEX.

When I got back to the store, I slipped into the rest room for a moment. As I looked into the glass I wondered if I was really good looking, and just as I was trying to make up my mind, I heard a strange noise. On opening a door I found Miss Cleaver stretched out prone on the floor, her body writhing in agony.

I hastily called the attendant, and she brought the store physician and a nurse.

Some way I seemed to feel that this man was not so concerned with the recovery of Miss Cleaver as he was in keeping all knowledge of her condition away from everyone in the store.

After giving the woman a dose of medicine, which he had to pour down behind her clenched teeth, he left her unceremoniously in the care of the nurse and went to the telephone in the outer sitting room. Here he held a low-voiced conversation with someone.

In a few moments he came back and poor Miss Cleaver was hurriedly taken down the freight elevator into a covered delivery wagon. I immediately knew that an ambulance would be too conspicuous. It all seemed so unfeeling to me.

When I asked the doctor if she was being taken to the hospital, at first he said no, and then he informed me that Mr. Robinson had ordered her to a private hospital where she would have every care and consequently have a great chance of recovery.

"So there is only a chance of recovery," I said in a hushed voice.

"I didn't say that, young woman," answered the doctor tartly. "There is no need for you to stay here any longer. You may go back to your place in the store. And if I were you I would say nothing about what you have seen here."

I didn't deign to answer the man, who I could see was a regular old toady and hypocrite. I was really faint and sick as I took my post behind the counter.

How I hated Robinson. How I hated all men. From Charlie Becker to Buddy Tremaine, from Mr. Hathaway, Senior, to Mr. Robinson: from Jimmy Costello to Jerry. They were all obsessed with one thing.

Whether they honorably propose marriage, or whether their proposition was more ambiguous, they only bowed to and served the urge of the great power of the universe—sex.

If you want something better—try it.

Rip Van Winkle was a funny man,
His one best bet was his frying pan;
He cooked his meals on the mountain steep,
And left his wife all alone to weep.
'No man can treat me thus!" said she,
And off she flew, to be set free,
When poor old rip came back one day,
He found his wife had gone away.

Thus the silver screen introduced Rip Van Bluebeard, a gay young duffer of a bird, lazy but good-looking, and, as the picture soon proved, a bit brainless, for he managed to do himself out of a wife and home. Here is the rest of it.

He was vain and foolish, but he found a swell bird-box.

Now, when a swell chap has a swanky home and good looks, and Nature provides wings for autos, and free food is added, it does not take a whole movie reel to tell the world that some wise girl will become crazy enough to marry him.

He jollied a quiet and sane little lady bluebird into joining him. She went about her household duties, content in the happiness of a pretty husband and a fine bird-box home.

But she soon found out her mistake.

The box had to be cleaned out, he made her do it. He sang to her, which made the work easier for a while, but the wort was yet to come, for he was a silly, empty-headed rattler; he knew nothing about a home, and didn't want to know. He was a man of the world.

"The Bluebird for Happiness" was his idea of life. He wanted nothing but the bright lights, week end tours, and fat garden worms.

Every time his lady love took nesting material into the box, he pulled it out again. At first she thought it was only love tricks, but it soon became no joke; then she scolded; then she became angry.

He was lolling in the sun, on the edge of the bird-bath, flirting with another feathered beauty, when he received a peevish peck on the back, which knocked him into the water with her, and as he mounted awing, his angry spouse gave chase again.

Dripping and empty-headed, he was no match for his wife, so he deliberately flew to the birdhouse hole, shot through it like a bullet, then turned and poked his head out, defied her. He even stuck out his tongue at her.

About that time, along came another young dandy in blue and brown, and, taking in the whole situation, he kept the wet and conceited coward a prisoner in his own box, while he offered the abused lady a better home, and away they flew, leaving Rip Van Bluebird alone in his deserted house.

GUELPH MINISTER IS MODERATOR OF CONTINUING PRESBYTERIANS

Rev. Dr. A. J. MacGillivray Is Elected—Only Two Nominated.

BORN IN CANADA.

New Moderator Has Held Three Charges Since His Ordination.

MONTREAL, June 3 (Canadian Press)—Rev. A. J. McGillivray, of Knox Church, Guelph, Ontario, was last evening elected moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, at the first sederunt of the General Assembly held at Knox Crescent Church here.

Only two were voted on, the other being the Rev. Banks Nelson, of Knox Church, Hamilton, Ontario.

Following the first vote the election was made unanimous.

Born in Bruce county, near Port Elgin, the new moderator is graduate in art of Princeton, New York, where he took also his theological course. Later he took post graduate work at Edinburgh and Glasgow. He has held three charges in Canada, the first at New St. John Church, London, Ontario, then St. John's Church, Vancouver, and for the past 12 years has been minister of Knox Church, Guelph. Dr. McGillivray took an active part in the Union fight and was chairman of the organization committee.

The Rev. Principal Daniel J. Fraser of the Presbyterian College, Montreal, was supported for moderator by Rev. J. G. Inkster, Toronto, as mover and Dr. MacGillivray, as seconder. Dr. Fraser pleaded that his college duties were too heavy to allow him to give the needed time to the moderatorship. He in turn named Dr. MacGillivray, seconded by Rev. Malcolm Campbell of Montreal. About two hundred commissioners had registered for the opening sederunt and another one hundred and fifty registrations are expected today.

U. S. LOWER HOUSE PASSES AGREEMENT

Senate Will Hold Bill Till France Ratifies Debt Settlement.

WASHINGTON, June 3 (Canadian Press).—Ratification of the French degt settlement is now up to the French Parliament. The House of Representatives voted its approval yesterday, which is as far as it intended to go over here until the National Legislature of the debtor country has accepted the Berenger agreement. The measure will be held in the U. S. Senate until France has acted. The vote followed a ruling that there could be no amendments to the settlement as reported by the debt commission. The reason for this is the fear that should the United States ratify first, the opponents of the Briand policies in Paris might hold it up indefinitely as an expedient of French local politics. Arrangements had to be under way to provide a loan of half a billion dollars to France.

FAREWELL PARTY TO MANY FRIENDS

Lady Leaving For England Entertains Many of Her Friends.

A very enjoyable farewell party was given in St. John's parish house on Tuesday evening, June 1st, by Mrs. McFarlane, to the members of St. John's W.F.B.C., also friends from the Ladies' Auxiliary G.W.V.A., the Female Voice Choir, the Daughters of England, and Ladies' Orange Lodge, numbering nearly 150.

In the first part of the evening a short programme was given. Mr. H. McFarlane opened the programme with a march "The Burning of Rome." Miss Harrison sang very daintily "Always." Mr. D. Rathbone gave a piano solo, "Minuet by Paderewski," and had to respond to an encore; Mrs. Jackson sang "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise," and as an encore sang "I Passed by Your Window." Both these numbers were given in splendid voice. Mr. and Mrs. Buckton played a piano duet, "Moonlight Revels," and were warmly applauded.

After this dancing was indulged in, there being two very pretty moon light waltzes. Refreshments were served at 10.30. Dancing was resumed until 11.30. Each organization thanked Mrs. McFarlane very warmly for a very enjoyable evening and tendered her their very best wishes for a safe journey and all success in the Old Country.

The evening closed with "God Save the King" and all joining hands sang "Auld Lang Syne."

Conditions at Home and Abroad Reported To Assembly.

MONTREAL, June 3 (Canadian Press).—"Our membership strength today is well over the 150,000 mark and our budget for the year calls for an expenditure of $600,000, says one section of the report of the general board of missions for 1925-1926, presented to the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, today." In five years' time, from January 1, 1927, we believe our budget will be $1,000,000 a year, nearly double to what it was before the disunion." The foreign missions report said "We feel that the need of the hour is for more volunteers for foreign work—evangelists, physicians, nurses, and teachers," The report enumerates that "Over one hundred and fifty congregations have been settled since the last assembly; the commission on the completion of ministers has received forty into the church; supply for congregations requiring it from Sunday to Sunday, totalled 7,600; and over one hundred and thirty students have been appointed to fields for the summer.

A multiude of activities of the Women's Missionary Society throughout Canada were reviewed. One part of the report reads "In China, civil war and a bitter anti-Christian and anti-foreign, Communistic movement, particularly directed against the British, made everything exceedingly difficult and our missionaries suffered much persecution and were driven from work which had been built up by long years of Labor and long devotion."

Easy to Gain With Yeast and Iron

New Combination of Yeast with Vegetable Iron Quick Way to Build Up Weight

This new combination of yeast vitamines with vegetable iron, renews the action of sluggish blood cells, drives out dangerous body poisons, increases energy and endurance and supplies the system with vitamines that build up weight.

For years yeast has been known as a rich vitamine food, but not until we perfected "ironized yeast"—which comes in concentrated tablet form was it possible to take yeast and iron in the right proportions to build up weight.

Vegetable "Iron" when combined with yeast is quite easy to digest, therefore better for the system. And "yeast" when ironized, becomes just twice as beneficial as ordinary fresh or cake yeast.

Ironized Yeast Tablets are composed of concentrated food elements, therefore, they are pleasant to take and free from drug-like effects. If you are under weight, do not enjoy good health, lacking in energy and force, "ironized yeast" tablets will pick you right up, and if they fail, you get your money back.

Sold by druggists at $1.00 for a large 60-tablet package or sent direct from laboratory on receipt of price. Ironized Yeast Co., Fort Erie, Ontario, Canada.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

THE QUEER CITY OF ANY PLACE AT ALL.

Nancy and Nick did not remember leaving the tiny car that rolled them along through Drowsy Land, but suddenly they were standing right on their feet in a big city. The pink ticket track had rolled itself up with a snap and jumped back into Nick's pocket.

"What place is this, do you suppose?" said Nancy, looking around at the buildings, which were, if possible, queerer than those of Shut-Eye Town. The ticket stuck its head up out of Nick's pocket again and looked at them with its round pink eyes. "This is called 'Any Place At All,'" it said, and then went back to its pocket.

"Oh, ho! Any Place At All!" cried Nick. "Then I suppose anything at all may happen to us, don't you think so, Nancy. I wonder what—"

I don't know exactly how he was going to finish his sentence, for suddenly a hand as large as a room whisked the Twins off their feet and before they could say "boo" (although it probably entered their heads to say that) they found themselves looking into a pair of eyes as large as plates.

"Oho! What a funny pair of bugs!" said an enormous voice. "I never saw such funny bugs before. Look, Mama!"

"It's a giant boy!" shouted Nick to Nancy, for the giant boy had started to laugh and it sounded like thunder. "It's a giant boy who's got us. Let's jump."

But when they looked down at the ground it seemed like a million miles, for the giant boy was as tall as a church.

"Don't wiggle so," roared the giant boy. "If you do I'll squeeze you."

With that he took Nick between one finger and thumb and Nancy between the other finger and thumb and held them more firmly. He really was not pressing very hard, but a queer thing happened. Nick felt his head going down and his feet coming up. Nearer and nearer they came toward each other until suddenly he was only three inches high. And looking over at Nancy he discovered that she had done exactly the same thing. She was only three inches high, too.

"I was right," thought Nick. "Most anything at all can happen to you here and I guess one thing has happened already. We look like Mr. and Mrs. Tom Thumb."

Suddenly Nick had an idea, and at the same time Nancy had the same idea. And I guess, if you had been held tightly between a giant boy's finger and thumb and squeezed until you were only three inches high, you'd have had the same idea, too. They pinched him! The Twins pinched the giant boy.

With a horrible yell the giant boy flung the Twins away as hard as he could. "They're bees!" he cried. "Or wasps! Or hornets! Oh, Mama, I'm killed!"

I don't know what Mrs. Giant did for her big little boy. Most likely she put on soda or unguentine, but anyway our story isn't about him. We must follow the Twins.

The Twins kept falling and falling and falling, down through a million miles of space, it seemed, and at last they landed softly on the ground. But wonders had not ceased. For both of them had melted on the way and were now as flat as rain-drops. They were as large around as wash-tubs, but as flat as fried eggs or wheat cakes. They felt very queer, but not at all uncomfortable. "Now who is going to scrape us up?" said Nick to Nancy."

GAME OF SURPRISES.

Hopes For British Success Have Sunk To a Low Ebb.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, June 3.—(Canadian Press).—Great Britain's challenging Walker Cup team could not get going in today's foursomes over the links of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club and, when the thirty six hole matches were done the defending invaders from the United States showed three victories to the British one.

Roger Wethered and Sir Ernest Holderness, two of the greatest golfers who ever grew up on the links of England, were the only successful challengers today. Wethered's brilliant game put them four and three against Francis Ouimet and Jesse P. Guileford.

To retain the cup the United States needs to win half of tomorrow's single while the British to capture the trophy must take five of the eight matches and halve another.

In to-day's events Jess Sweetser, recently crowned British amateur champion, and George Von Elm had to their credit the most decisive victory, defeating Robert Harris and Major C. O. Hezlet, 8 and 7.

Bobby Jones and Watts Gunn, the Atlanta Pair, took a commanding lead of six holes over the former British amateur champion, Cyril Tolley, and Arthur Jamieson in the morning round, but in the afternoon they fell back and it was a hard fought contest which ended four and three in favor of the invaders.

Robert Gardner, the United States captain, and Roland MacKenzie battled it out with E. F. Storey and W. G. Brownlow, winning one up.

The pairings in the singles today are as follows:

Jones vs Tolley; Sweetser vs Holderness; Ouimet vs Wethered; Von Elm vs Hezlet; Guileford vs Harris; Gunn vs Brownlow; MacKenzie vs Storey; Gardner vs Jamieson.

Hope for British success appeared last night to have sunk to a low ebb. Nevertheless, golf is a game of surprises, as instanced strikingly in yesterdays match between Gardner-Mackenzie, Storey and Brownlow. Going out in the morning the United States pair were four up at the ninth and had increased their lead to six at lunch time. Then, in the afternoon, their British opponents began to display their mettle. They whittled down the lead hole by hole to a single hole when the 27th was reached. The victory was not achieved until the Britishers had taken their opponents to the last green for a sensational finish.

DEMAR IS PREMIER MARATHONER IN U.S.

Set a Terrific Pace Right From the Start.

PHILADELPHIA, June 3.—(Canadian Press).—Clarence H. Demar is still king of the marathon runners of the United States. The 38-year-old national champion demonstrated his supremacy again yesterday in convincing manner when he outraced a field of 62 distance men in the sesquicentennial marathon.

Carrying the colors of the Melrose, Mass., American Legion poet, Demar set a terrific pace that forced his foremost rival, Albin Stenroos, of Finland, to drop out after covering eleven miles and carried him to the finish nearly one mile in front of Albert (Whitey) Michelson, of the Cygnet A.C., East Portchester, N.Y.

Demar covered the full marathon distance of 26 miles, 385 yards, in 2 hours, 42 minutes, 50 seconds. The time was 17 minutes slower than the worlds mark set by John Miles, of Sydney Mines, N.S., in this year's Boston classic. The race was run under a blazing sun and before an estimated crowd of 100,000, of whom 25,000 greeted the winner in the stadium at the exposition grounds.

Percy Wyer, of the Monarch A.C. Toronto, finished in seventh place in 3:04:37, while F. T. O'Donnell, Canadian Recreation Club, Montreal, was tenth in 3:10:31.

One half of the original starters covered the distance.

Stenroos, winner of the 1924 Olympic matathon, gave Demar a nip and tuck battle for the lead until he was forced to withdraw because of a "stitch" in his side and blistered feet. After that Demar jogged on unchallenged and adding steadily to his lead. Michelson clung to second place in spite of the closing efforts of Frank Wendling, of Buffalo; Frank Zuna, of Newark, N.J. and Bill Kennedy, gray haired veteran of East Portchester, N.Y., who finished in that order.

HELPFUL HINTS BY GOLFING STARS

By Special Arrangement With Colliers' Magazine.

JOHN DUNCAN DUNN—PRACTICE SHORT SHOTS.

I am glad to note that all really great golfers like Barnes and Hutchison are unanimous in that short game is the thing that counts most in golf.

All the great masters when preparing for a championship put in most of their time practicing approaching and putting. All the dubs who come into golf schools for free practice immediately make for a wooden club and swat the ball for all they are worth and the champion dub was one whose proudest achievement was that he burst two targets.

Get that out of your mind and instead fill your mind full of the greatest "secret in golf," namely, that perfection in the short game is the principal thing that counts, and furthermore, that in perfecting the short game you are perfecting the full swing, because the half-swing is half of the full swing and if you achieve accuracy in the short game you are bound to achieve accuracy in the long game.

"Accuracy first" should be the golfer's motto. Don't be in a hurry to speed up.

Visitors Play Terrible Ball — Rain All Through Game.

SCORE IS 18-0.

KINGSTON, June 3 (Canadian Press).—Kingston walked all over Belleville in the C.O.B.L. game here last night, winning by the score of 18 to 0, in one of the loosest games of the year. The locals played sparkling ball behind the sterling pitching of Van Young, who allowed only four scattered hits, and had no trouble in scoring a shutout, but the visitors were terrible in fielding, batting and pitching.

After four runs were scored in the first inning, the game was called for fifteen minutes owing to rain. When it was resumed Oulette refused to pitch, and Gibson was sent in. He allowed three runs in the fifth and in the seventh allowed two runs, then filled the bases and forced in another. He was pulled out and Blakely went in, but he was worse and was hammered all over, a homer by Halbert spelling his end. Harry Mills went to the mound and managed to retire the side. In the eighth Kingston scored one more on errors at first by Meagher, who filled in when Mills went in to pitch. It was wretched weather for baseball, raining most of the time, but though the ball was slippery, Kingston contributed some fine fielding plays, Batstone's stop and throw in the fourth being one of the features.

The teams were:
Kingston. — Teepell, rf; Halbert 2b; Batstone, 3b; Cherry, cf; Thompson, cf; Britton, ss; Purvis, 1b; Scott, lf; Arniel, c; Young, p.

CORONACH WINS BRITISH DERBY FAVORITE FINISHING THIRD

Day Was Marred By a Deluge of Rain.

MUDDY TRACK.

Huge Sums Are Won in the Different Sweepstakes.

EPSOM, June 3 (Canadian Press).—Lord Wolavington's Coronach, son of Hurry On and half-brother of the famous Captain Cuttle, who negotiated the fastest Derby ever run, became king of all horsedom yesterday afternoon when he in turn cantered proudly home winner of that historic classic by five lengths.

W. Singer's bay colt, Lancegaye, was second, and Lord Derby's Colorado, favorite in the betting, finished third.

Coronach, clean limbed three-year-old, not only captured the crown but gained sweet revenge and retrieved his reputation, which was badly smirched when Colorado beat him by an identical five lengths in the Two Thousand Guineas Stakes recently. Until then Coronach had been favorite for the season's greatest turf event, but he had to step down in favor of Colorado, who today started a red-hot, almost universal, favorite.

Colorado's downfall was great, for third place was the best he could achieve, and he carried a vast fortune of something like ten million dollars of his backers' money. Just a short head in front of him as he passed the finish was the rank outsider Lancegay, who was at the big odds of 40 to 1.

How Lancegay nosed his way so far forward, none can say of a surety, but the race was run in mud and a deluge of rain, and Lancegay demonstrated that he was a good mud horse, which was more than some of the others could claim.

Some assert that Colorado and Lord Astor's much favored Swift and Sure may have had a bit of hard luck, for as they were in close pursuit of Coronach around Tattenham Corner, a small dog dashed out among the runners. Barking furiously, the dog just missed Coronach, and bounded forward almost under Colorado's heels. The favorite swerved sharply and may have been thrown slightly out of his stride. The dog then dashed between the legs of Swift and Sure, and Lord Astor is quoted as saying that but for this incident, he again, as on five different occasions, would have been runner-up, instead of fourth.

This was the 143rd renewal of the Derby, over a distance a little more than a mile and a half, which the winner covered in 2 minutes, 47 4-5 seconds. Captain Cuttle's victory in 1922 established the record of 2 minutes 34 3-5 seconds. The value of the Derby was about $60,000. Coronach was at odds of 11 to 2.

To add to the grievances of this mud Derby, Sir Abe Bailey's much touted Lex went to the post at 10 to 1 and trailed hopetessly next to the last in the field of nineteen horses. Lex was well backed on all sides. Even Lady Aastor, on a recent visit to a mining district in Wales, when asked regarding the chances of her husband's Swift and Sure, gave Lex as her selection.

By Coronach's victory, Lord Wolavington wins his second Derby, as he also owned Captain Cuttle. Joe Childs, the popular forty-year-old jockey, who had the leg up, is celebrating his winning.

"My horse was the winner all the way," he said, after the race.

As in the past two years, Derby Day was marred by a deluge of rain, which turned Epsom Downs into a marshland. Despite this, dogged John Bull would not be deterred from his annual trek to the racing Mecca. From early morning, long lines of motors, charabancs, buses and every conceivable kind of vehicle crawled along towards Epsom from all directions through the downpour. The King and Queen, the Prince of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of York, Princess Mary and Viscount Lascelles were among those jointing in the endless procession. Many enthusiastics camped about the course all night or slept in hedgerows, and they were in a truly wretched plight when the great race started.

Not much better off were thousands more who hit the long trail to Epsom yesterday, except that they did not have to endure the cold flood so long. It was a gloomy crowd, but adopting the philosophy of one spectator, who remarked that perhaps next year the sun would shine, they saw it through and even mustered a cheer for the winner.

The winning of the Derby each year means fortune to the winners of the many sweepstakes. The richest of all the sweepstakes on the Derby is the Calcutta, and this yesterday was won by Robert Bishop, manager of a brokerage firm, who held the ticket on Coronach, but retained only one-eighth of it for himself. Even though he had disposed of seven-eighths, Bishop's winnings are placed at more than $80,000.

Another big winner in the same sweeps was Cyril Stileman, who drew Colorado. He sold half his share, and in all, his winnings amounted to about $175,000.

A London woman, Miss Farr, holder of a ticket in the Stock Exchange Sweepstakes on Lancegaye, celebrated her winnings of $150,000 by taking a cup of tea. She was watching a motion picture when the glad news was broken to her.

C. A. Harris, a clerk in a Midland bank, drew Colorado in the Stock Exchange Sweep. He sold half his share for $40,000. The ticket won from $50,000 to $75,000.

Ordinary public sweepstakes in England are not allowed under the law, but to evade this they are ostensibly private and are called the "Derby Mutual Subscription Fund," ten per cent of the proceeds going to charity.

In the case of the London Stock Exchange, tickets cost 20 shillings (about $4.80); the purchaser receives a ticket acknowledging receipt of a one pound subscription. It is restricted to members of the Stock Exchange, and outsiders can only get tickets through a member of the Exchange.

A week or so before the race, tickets corresponding to those purchased are placed in a large drum-like machine, which is rotated rapidly by some neutral person, who then draws out, one at a time, and the ticket number is placed against the name of a horse in the list of those originally entered for the race. A similar procedure is adopted in the case of the smaller sweepstakes in England.

Calcutta Sweepstakes tickets, costing 15 shillings each, but in this case the subscriber is supplied only with a number and nom de plume, because of the English law, and when numbers are drawa to correspond with the horses in the Derby, the agents supply tickets to Britishers cable the name of the horse drawn. The winners get their money through an authorized bank.

The horses in the Calcutta sweepstakes are drawn in a similar ,but perhaps more elaborate, manner to the Stock Exchange sweeps..

Hopes For British Success Have Sunk To a Low Ebb.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, June 3.—(Canadian Press).—Great Britain's challenging Walker Cup team could not get going in today's foursomes over the links of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club and, when the thirty six hole matches were done the defending invaders from the United States showed three victories to the British one.

Roger Wethered and Sir Ernest Holderness, two of the greatest golfers who ever grew up on the links of England, were the only successful challengers today. Wethered's brilliant game put them four and three against Francis Ouimet and Jesse P. Guileford.

To retain the cup the United States needs to win half of tomorrow's single while the British to capture the trophy must take five of the eight matches and halve another.

In to-day's events Jess Sweetser, recently crowned British amateur champion, and George Von Elm had to their credit the most decisive victory, defeating Robert Harris and Major C. O. Hezlet, 8 and 7.

Bobby Jones and Watts Gunn, the Atlanta Pair, took a commanding lead of six holes over the former British amateur champion, Cyril Tolley, and Arthur Jamieson in the morning round, but in the afternoon they fell back and it was a hard fought contest which ended four and three in favor of the invaders.

Robert Gardner, the United States captain, and Roland MacKenzie battled it out with E. F. Storey and W. G. Brownlow, winning one up.

The pairings in the singles today are as follows:

Jones vs Tolley; Sweetser vs Holderness; Ouimet vs Wethered; Von Elm vs Hezlet; Guileford vs Harris; Gunn vs Brownlow; MacKenzie vs Storey; Gardner vs Jamieson.

Hope for British success appeared last night to have sunk to a low ebb. Nevertheless, golf is a game of surprises, as instanced strikingly in yesterdays match between Gardner-Mackenzie, Storey and Brownlow. Going out in the morning the United States pair were four up at the ninth and had increased their lead to six at lunch time. Then, in the afternoon, their British opponents began to display their mettle. They whittled down the lead hole by hole to a single hole when the 27th was reached. The victory was not achieved until the Britishers had taken their opponents to the last green for a sensational finish.

DEMAR IS PREMIER MARATHONER IN U.S.

Set a Terrific Pace Right From the Start.

PHILADELPHIA, June 3.—(Canadian Press).—Clarence H. Demar is still king of the marathon runners of the United States. The 38-year-old national champion demonstrated his supremacy again yesterday in convincing manner when he outraced a field of 62 distance men in the sesquicentennial marathon.

Carrying the colors of the Melrose, Mass., American Legion poet, Demar set a terrific pace that forced his foremost rival, Albin Stenroos, of Finland, to drop out after covering eleven miles and carried him to the finish nearly one mile in front of Albert (Whitey) Michelson, of the Cygnet A.C., East Portchester, N.Y.

Demar covered the full marathon distance of 26 miles, 385 yards, in 2 hours, 42 minutes, 50 seconds. The time was 17 minutes slower than the worlds mark set by John Miles, of Sydney Mines, N.S., in this year's Boston classic. The race was run under a blazing sun and before an estimated crowd of 100,000, of whom 25,000 greeted the winner in the stadium at the exposition grounds.

Percy Wyer, of the Monarch A.C. Toronto, finished in seventh place in 3:04:37, while F. T. O'Donnell, Canadian Recreation Club, Montreal, was tenth in 3:10:31.

One half of the original starters covered the distance.

Stenroos, winner of the 1924 Olympic matathon, gave Demar a nip and tuck battle for the lead until he was forced to withdraw because of a "stitch" in his side and blistered feet. After that Demar jogged on unchallenged and adding steadily to his lead. Michelson clung to second place in spite of the closing efforts of Frank Wendling, of Buffalo; Frank Zuna, of Newark, N.J. and Bill Kennedy, gray haired veteran of East Portchester, N.Y., who finished in that order.

Several of the leading jockeys on the English turf make $25,000 or more a year, and that sum has been paid as a retaining fee alone.

HELPFUL HINTS BY GOLFING STARS

By Special Arrangement With Colliers' Magazine.

JOHN DUNCAN DUNN—PRACTICE SHORT SHOTS.

I am glad to note that all really great golfers like Barnes and Hutchison are unanimous in that short game is the thing that counts most in golf.

All the great masters when preparing for a championship put in most of their time practicing approaching and putting. All the dubs who come into golf schools for free practice immediately make for a wooden club and swat the ball for all they are worth and the champion dub was one whose proudest achievement was that he burst two targets.

Get that out of your mind and instead fill your mind full of the greatest "secret in golf," namely, that perfection in the short game is the principal thing that counts, and furthermore, that in perfecting the short game you are perfecting the full swing, because the half-swing is half of the full swing and if you achieve accuracy in the short game you are bound to achieve accuracy in the long game.

"Accuracy first" should be the golfer's motto. Don't be in a hurry to speed up.

PONIES WALLOP BELLEVILLE NINE

Visitors Play Terrible Ball — Rain All Through Game.

SCORE IS 18-0.

KINGSTON, June 3 (Canadian Press).—Kingston walked all over Belleville in the C.O.B.L. game here last night, winning by the score of 18 to 0, in one of the loosest games of the year. The locals played sparkling ball behind the sterling pitching of Van Young, who allowed only four scattered hits, and had no trouble in scoring a shutout, but the visitors were terrible in fielding, batting and pitching.

After four runs were scored in the first inning, the game was called for fifteen minutes owing to rain. When it was resumed Oulette refused to pitch, and Gibson was sent in. He allowed three runs in the fifth and in the seventh allowed two runs, then filled the bases and forced in another. He was pulled out and Blakely went in, but he was worse and was hammered all over, a homer by Halbert spelling his end. Harry Mills went to the mound and managed to retire the side. In the eighth Kingston scored one more on errors at first by Meagher, who filled in when Mills went in to pitch. It was wretched weather for baseball, raining most of the time, but though the ball was slippery, Kingston contributed some fine fielding plays, Batstone's stop and throw in the fourth being one of the features.

The teams were:

Kingston. — Teepell, rf; Halbert 2b; Batstone, 3b; Cherry, cf; Thompson, cf; Britton, ss; Purvis, 1b; Scott, lf; Arniel, c; Young, p.

Belleville.—Ross, cf; Goyer, rf; Weir, 2b, 3b, ss; Blakely ss, p, 2b; H. Mills, 1b, p; Hagerman, s; Gibson, 3b, p, 3b; Latchford, rf, cf; Palmer, lf, rf; Oulette, p; Meagher, 2b, 1b.

CORONACH WINS BRITISH DERBY FAVORITE FINISHING THIRD

Day Was Marred By a Deluge of Rain.

MUDDY TRACK.

Huge Sums Are Won in the Different Sweepstakes.

EPSOM, June 3 (Canadian Press).—Lord Wolavington's Coronach, son of Hurry On and half-brother of the famous Captain Cuttle, who negotiated the fastest Derby ever run, became king of all horsedom yesterday afternoon when he in turn cantered proudly home winner of that historic classic by five lengths.

W. Singer's bay colt, Lancegaye, was second, and Lord Derby's Colorado, favorite in the betting, finished third.

Coronach, clean limbed three-year-old, not only captured the crown but gained sweet revenge and retrieved his reputation, which was badly smirched when Colorado beat him by an identical five lengths in the Two Thousand Guineas Stakes recently. Until then Coronach had been favorite for the season's greatest turf event, but he had to step down in favor of Colorado, who today started a red-hot, almost universal, favorite.

Colorado's downfall was great, for third place was the best he could achieve, and he carried a vast fortune of something like ten million dollars of his backers' money. Just a short head in front of him as he passed the finish was the rank outsider Lancegay, who was at the big odds of 40 to 1.

How Lancegay nosed his way so far forward, none can say of a surety, but the race was run in mud and a deluge of rain, and Lancegay demonstrated that he was a good mud horse, which was more than some of the others could claim.

Some assert that Colorado and Lord Astor's much favored Swift and Sure may have had a bit of hard luck, for as they were in close pursuit of Coronach around Tattenham Corner, a small dog dashed out among the runners. Barking furiously, the dog just missed Coronach, and bounded forward almost under Colorado's heels. The favorite swerved sharply and may have been thrown slightly out of his stride. The dog then dashed between the legs of Swift and Sure, and Lord Astor is quoted as saying that but for this incident, he again, as on five different occasions, would have been runner-up, instead of fourth.

This was the 143rd renewal of the Derby, over a distance a little more than a mile and a half, which the winner covered in 2 minutes, 47 4-5 seconds. Captain Cuttle's victory in 1922 established the record of 2 minutes 34 3-5 seconds. The value of the Derby was about $60,000. Coronach was at odds of 11 to 2.

To add to the grievances of this mud Derby, Sir Abe Bailey's much touted Lex went to the post at 10 to 1 and trailed hopelessly next to the last in the field of nineteen horses. Lex was well backed on all sides. Even Lady Aastor, on a recent visit to a mining district in Wales, when asked regarding the chances of her husband's Swift and Sure, gave Lex as her selection.

By Coronach's victory, Lord Wolavington wins his second Derby, as he also owned Captain Cuttle. Joe Childs, the popular forty-year-old jockey, who had the leg up, is celebrating his winning.

"My horse was the winner all the way," he said, after the race.

As in the past two years, Derby Day was marred by a deluge of rain, which turned Epsom Downs into a marshland. Despite this, dogged John Bull would not be deterred from his annual trek to the racing Mecca. From early morning, long lines of motors, charabancs, buses and every conceivable kind of vehicle crawled along towards Epsom from all directions through the downpour. The King and Queen, the Prince of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of York, Princess Mary and Viscount Lascelles were among those joining in the endless procession. Many enthusiastics camped about the course all night or slept in hedgerows, and they were in a truly wretched plight when the great race started.

Not much better off were thousands more who hit the long trail to Epsom yesterday, except that they did not have to endure the cold flood so long. It was a gloomy crowd, but adopting the philosophy of one spectator, who remarked that perhaps next year the sun would shine, they saw it through and even mustered a cheer for the winner.

The winning of the Derby each year means fortune to the winners of the many sweepstakes. The richest of all the sweepstakes on the Derby is the Calcutta, and this yesterday was won by Robert Bishop, manager of a brokerage firm, who held the ticket on Coronach, but retained only one-eighth of it for himself. Even though he had disposed of seven-eighths, Bishop's winnings are placed at more than $80,000.

Another big winner in the same sweeps was Cyril Stileman, who drew Colorado. He sold half his share, and in all, his winnings amounted to about $175,000.

A London woman, Miss Farr, holder of a ticket in the Stock Exchange Sweepstakes on Lancegaye, celebrated her winnings of $150,000 by taking a cup of tea. She was watching a motion picture when the glad news was broken to her.

C. A. Harris, a clerk in a Midland bank, drew Colorado in the Stock Exchange Sweep. He sold half his share for $40,000. The ticket won from $50,000 to $75,000.

Ordinary public sweepstakes in England are not allowed under the law, but to evade this they are ostensibly private and are called the "Derby Mutual Subscription Fund," ten per cent of the proceeds going to charity.

In the case of the London Stock Exchange, tickets cost 20 shillings (about $4.80); the purchaser receives a ticket acknowledging receipt of a one pound subscription. It is restricted to members of the Stock Exchange, and outsiders can only get tickets through a member of the Exchange.

A week or so before the race, tickets corresponding to those purchased are placed in a large drum-like machine, which is rotated rapidly by some neutral person, who then draws out, one at a time, and the ticket number is placed against the name of a horse in the list of those originally entered for the race. A similar procedure is adopted in the case of the smaller sweepstakes in England.

Calcutta Sweepstakes tickets, costing 15 shillings each, but in this case the subscriber is supplied only with a number and nom de plume, because of the English law, and when numbers are drawn to correspond with the horses in the Derby, the agents supply tickets to Britishers cable the name of the horse drawn. The winners get their money through an authorized bank.

The horses in the Calcutta sweepstakes are drawn in a similar, but perhaps more elaborate, manner to the Stock Exchange sweeps.

SECRETS of STARS on INSIDE BASEBALL

as told to BILLY EVANS

BY BABE RUTH.

There are few batters without a certain weakness no matter how great their reputation.

While some have no glaring fault, yet of three styles—the fast, slow and curve ball—the curve ball may prove more troublesome than the other two. That might be referred to as their weakness.

Since 1921, opposing pitchers have been trying to figure my weakness. They seem to differ on the type ball that is hardest for me to hit, so perhaps I have more than one.

I have heard it said that a slow ball, low and outside, a fast ball, pitched inside, letter high, a slow ball in the pinch and various other deliveries bothered me.

As a matter of fact, the pitching in the two big leagues is so good that I am of the opinion most any style is pretty hard to hit. Once I set a home run record, it seemed to me every pitcher put more stuff on the ball when pitching to me than against the rest of the team.

I suppose that was the result of a desire on the part of the pitcher to make the "Babe" look like a sucker. And I must confess the boys have often made me look that way.

On the other hand, I have turned the tables myself many a time. After looking foolish on a slow one, taking it for the third strike, I have knocked the ball out of the lot the next time up when the pitcher went to work on me again with the old slow stuff.

Every batter has a certain style delivery that bothers him most. Some of us have several. To overcome one or more faults, make the pitchers in morning or batting practice feed you that style pitch. That has been my system.

Any player can remedy a batting weakness at least 50 per cent. if he will work to eradicate his fault.

HELPFUL HINTS to GOLFING STARS

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH GOLFERS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO

JOYCE WETHERED—PUTT REAL STROKE.

In putting, the ball is definitely struck. It is firmly dismissed upon its journey. It is not scraped up to the hole. The grip is generally a divided one. The left hand may be, if anything, rather under the shaft than over it, and the right hand is also slightly underneath. The blow which is delivered is a level blow, which causes the ball to glide over the green with the least possible desire to disturb its surface.

For the less fortunate individual who finds this part of the game a thorn in the flesh, and who is compelled to labor heavily over the process, some essentially workmanlike method must be adopted. He may get the ball into the hole, but he putts less naturally.

The difference in the running of the ball is at once apparent There is not the same purposeful freedom of motion. It moves in a more sober manner over the ground.

Still the ordinary person is thankful for satisfactory results, however they are obtained, and he has the additional consolation that the artistic putter may not by any means be the best holer out.

CITY LEAGUE OPENING.

Rotary and Kiwanis Meet at James Stevenson Park To-night.

A real battle is expected to-night as an opener in the Peterborough City Baseball League, at James Stevenson Park. The Kiwanis team is pitted against the Rotarians in the Juvenile series. J. A good crowd is anticipated as no doubt the Rotarians and Kiwanians will be well represented to back their respective teams. The boys all play classy ball and this game should be a real treat.

On Monday, June 7th, the Rotary team is matched against the Lakefield Juvenile, in the latter's home town.

AMERICANS HOLD WALKER TROPHY

Close Finish To Match When British Make Final Stand.

TIE GAME COUNTS.

ST. ANDREW'S, Scotland, June 3. — Canadian Press. — The Walker Cup, the premier team trophy of amateur golf, will remain in the United States for another two years. The invading stars, after gaining a lead of three matches to one in yesterday's foursomes, came successfully through the singles to-day.

The British put up a gallant fight, however and the final point score was America six and a half, Great Britain five and a half.

George Von Elm's feat in holding Major C. C. Hezlett to a tie, gave the needed margin to win. Bobby Jones, Jess Sweetser and Watts Gunn won their matches by good margins. Francis Ouimet was defeated by Roger Wethered, the bright star of the British team.

Jesse Guilford fell before Robert Harris, another former British champion. Roland Mackenzie was defeatured by E. F. Storey in a close match, and Robert A. Gardner bowed to Arthur Jamieson, Jr.

Results of to-day's eight matches follow:

Bobby Jones, United States, defeated Cyril Tolley, 12 and 11.

Jess Sweetser, United States, defeated Sir Ernest Holderness, 4 and 3.

Watts Gunn, United States, defeated Hon. W. G. Brownlow 9 and 8.

Roger Wethered, Great Britain, defeated Francis Ouimet, 5 and 4.

Robert Harris, Great Britain, defeated Jesse Guilford, 2 and 1.

Arthur Jamieson, Jr., Great Britain, Jr., defeated Robert A. Gardner, 5 and 4.

C. F. Storey, Great Britain, defeated Roland MacKenzie, 2 and 1.

George Von Elm, United States, and Major C. O. Heslet, Great Britain, ended their 36 holes all square, giving each ½ a point.

MUST BEAT PONIES ON SATURDAY HERE

The Kingston Crew Are Making a Runaway of Central Race.

If the Kingston Ponies are going to be stopped from running away with the Central Ontario League honors, it is up to the Petes to step into them good and plenty on Saturday, when Joe Daley will lead his men into action at the Stevenson Park. The Ponies made a mess out of Belleville yesterday, beating the Gerowmen, 18 to 0, in a weird game and they did the trick with Young on the rubber, thus keeping Lefty Cairns ready for the Petes Saturday. That means Joe Daley's crew will have their full battle array in action against the home talent and the latter will have to play peppery ball to get a verdict over the leaders. Manager Johnston's team expect to be in the best of shape for this battle and are confident of breaking into the win column at the expense of the Ponies. Alex. Kay and Ed LeBarr will get the teams away at 3 o'clock sharp.

There was a good attendance in the hall of the Conservatory of Music last evening for the recital by piano pupils of Mrs. W. A. Greenslade, from Introductory to Junior Grades. HOW TO KEEP PAINT BRUSHES.

A paint brush can be kept in perfect condition by placing it, when not in use, in a covered oil-tight tin containing enough raw linseed oil to cover the bristles. A slot is cut in the lid with a chisel to take the handle of the brush, and a nail inserted in a hole bored through the brush handle holds the brush suspended in the oil.—Popular Science Monthly.

MOVIGRAPHS

NEW YORK.—Perhaps the first thing one notes in comparing east and west coast film studios is the difference in "extra" types.

Hollywood draws its fair aspiring damsels from every nook and cranny of the "states." The line that forms at the left is likely to be made up of "regulars," side-by-side fresh-eyed girlies from Main Street who never have seen a movie camera.

In New York studios, Broadway furnishes the "extra" material, and very few novices come to crash the eastern gates. For Broadway has a never ending supply of chorus girls, actresses "resting" between engagements, models, night club entertainers, theatrical people willing to make an honest "extra" penny and all the rest of the Broadway parade.

In answer to a question on this subject William Cohill, casting director for the new Griffith picture, "The Sorrows of Satan," supplied the following diverse list from among "extras".

Elsie Nichols, sister to Anne Nichols, who made fortune and fame with "Abie's Irish Rose."

Dorothy Donelly, well known illustrator, who uses her "extra" job as an opportunity to sketch types.

George and Phil Bloom, prizefighters.

Pierre le Colosse, Belgian wrestler.

Mary Huntington, who under the pen name of "Mlle. Nagene," writes a fashion column for a leading newspaper.

Edith Hadley and Cherrie Andt, who double in operating a smart hat shop on Fifth Avenue.

The Baroness de Mondell and the Princess Mikeladze, both Russian refugees.

Leah Penman, formerly a prominent stock and stage star, poet and little theater director.

Several wives of directors and assistant directors "learning the game," a dancer from the Paris Folies Bergere, and so on.

No, you never can tell who you'll meet in an "extra" parade. There is, for instance, the case of May Thweatt.

She was graduated by Woman's College of Alabama, but determined to "make" the films. Day after day she appeared at the studio in the "bread line" but couldn't catch on.

Then her college education came in handy. She used her head. She got a job in the Paramount studio cafeteria. Thus she managed to come into the notice of directors and, being a very attractive young lady, soon had their attention.

She is now on her third picture.

MUCH INTEREST IS BEING TAKEN

In Visit of Danforth Ladies (Dominion Champions) Soft Ball Team Next Wednesday.

TO PLAY C.G.E.

Peterboro softball fans have been more than interested in the coming game on Wednesday next, June 9th, at the Riverside Park, between the Danforth Club, Dominion champions and the C. G. E. local ladies' team.

They are probably the two best matched teams in the province, and the game will be a great one.

In Toronto on Saturday night, a game was played between the Danforth Ladies and the Hope Ladies team, at which 6000 people were present, Danforth winning the game. They have played to date this season twelve games, and have not, as yet, met with a loss.

That the Toronto softball wollowers are looking upon the game in Peterboro with a great deal of enthusiasm is shown when the following will accompany the Danforth Ladies here: Alderman Somerville, Alderman Smith, Mr. Childs, J.P. (father of Grace Childs, pitcher); Miss Mabel Ray, secretary of the Women's Softball Association, and His Worship Mayor Foster is endeavoring to make it possible to be present as well, in addition to several of the Danforth business men, who are supporters of the team.

Miss Grace Childs, the pitcher, who holds the record for strike outs in Canada, Bonnie Bater and Jen McMurray, rated as two of the best catchers in the city, the Gimlet sisters, fielders, Vera Leslie, third base, E. Edwards, second base, Ethel Taylor, Ollie Heaton, Tillie Evans, Laura O'Donohue and Edna Bourne, will be the playin members of the team.

Mr. Moore, business manager, who has managed the team for three years, is a former Peterboro man, and his little daughter Annie Moore, is the mascot of the team.

Altogether it will be a big event in softball circles in Peterborough, and the visitors will undoubtedly receive a fine reception.

THEATRE AT THE REGENT

"The Sea Beast," the spectacular Warner picture starring John Barrymore, which opened yesterday at the Regent Theatre, ranks amongst the few truly great photoplays ever filmed.

John Barrymore gives a thrillingly perfect and powerfully moving performance in the role of Ahal Ceeley, a harpooner of the days of 1840, when the whaling industry supplied adventure romance for young men who followed the sea. This picture is based on "Moby Dick," written by Herman Melville and adapted to the screen by Bess Meredyth.

Dolores Costello gives a finely finished performance as the girl whom both brothers love, and George O'Hara as the younger brother, whose jealousy almost ruins the life of Ahab, is vividly convincing.

"The Sea Beast," directed by Millard Webb, is a stirring, beautiful and gripping production, and John Barrymore has never done anything on the screen that equals the power of his latest characterization.

Carl Anderson, coach of the Newark A.C. is planning to take about a dozen American athletes to Europe this summer to compete in meets to be held in England, France, Germany and Sweden.

Owing to the crowd turned away last night we have decided to hold the "SEA BEAST" for the remainder of the week.

KID PRANKS.

Yea, every day, and all day long, the thing that rubs all mothers wrong, is tendin' to the young folks pranks—a task to which there is no thanks.

It's "mamma this," and "mamma that," and "mamma, where's my coat and hat?" "I wanna cracker—wanna drink." Say, how can mothers stop ta think?

The doorbell rings the live long day. My, gosh, the kidlets think that's play. With windows washed, the work's in vain, for paddies quickly smear the pane.

"Aw, mumsy, rock me on yer lap. Gee, I don't wanna take a nap. The housework piles up in a heap, while mother rocks a child ta sleep.

The daily cry of "mother's pet," is, "Look—I got my feet all wet." Yea, every day, and all day long, kids' pranks are what rub mothers wrong.

PUBLIC SCHOOL ART EXHIBITED

Fine Display of Work Done By Pupils of Different Grades.

PROGRAMME GIVEN.

A very interesting exhibit of the art work done by the pupils of the Public schools of the city was on view yesterday afternoon and evening in the kindergarten room of the Central School, and will again be exhibited on Friday evening of this week. Last night, a special musical programme was also given, under supervision of Miss M. Rannie, when children's choirs from the schools rendered several pleasing selections. Those taking part were classes from Mr. Steer's room at the Central, Miss MacNaughton's room at the Queen Mary, Miss Richardson's room at the Prince of Wales, and Messrs. Bolton and Langford's rooms at the King Edward school.

This exhibit of the children's art work shows decided improvement from year to year, and the demonstration yesterday contained many excellent examples of their cleverness in this line. Several things strike the observer; the real artistic sense they show in many color combinations of the simple three-color scheme of red and yellow and blue in which they work, the part which imagination plays in many of the drawings and sketches illustrative of poetical quotations and such things as the "Little Town of Bethlehem," which the very youthful artist shows with one or two rude dwellings under a dark sky lighted by a crescent moon, and the faculty they have in common with older people of drawing best that which they like. There wasn't a single sketch of pussy willows in the whole room that wasn't drawn really well. The children evidently like these soft grey catkins and trees are another of their favorites. There is a quality of action, too, in many of the pictures, and much humour in several of the drawings, like the section devoted to representations of "David and Goliath." Here one small child has depicted the large gentleman with a policeman's helmet and attended by a faithful henchman carrying a shield, the couple regarding with curious looks the small David approaching with fierce courage. One of the attending teachers last evening volunteered the information that this was quite according to the school-book version of the famous encounter, Goliath having had, according to the tale an attendant who bore his shield before him.

The part of imagination plays a prominent role in the work of the very small artists. In the Primer section, they are strong on "What I want to be when I am a man." A brave soldier with large head-piece and epaulettes forms one child's conception of what he wants to do in life, while a sailor posed against a many-masted sailing ship is another ideal. "The street I live on" is a place of many crooked houses and "What my father does" shows one gentleman busy cutting people's hair under electric lights, another working in a shop with much machinery above and around him, and still another busily engaged in making a canoe. "What I did on Christmas Day" in one instance shows a small lady perched on her father's knee. This gentleman had been away and returned for the holiday and the little girl spent most of the day in this position.

Impressionistic sketches of purple trees against orange skies appear in the larger children's work, with many excellent examples of fine work in little outdoor drawings and conventional designs for wall paper. These same conventional designs appear again in the geometrical patterns for linoleum in the junior children's classes, and an interesting section here also is the differing conception, as it appears to the child's eye, of the bud of the salvia, used as a motif for several interesting patterns in colored chalks.

Until they reach the Junior Third Form, the children work only in crayons of a few simple colors and in plain black, with occasional ink sketches, done with a broad brush and without outline work, which also comes later. The posed drawings in these smaller classes show observation of a high type in many of the children, drawing them, as they do, from companions who pose before the classes for the occasion.

Printed mottoes, done with careful attention to straight lines and clear lettering, red water-color valentines, painted covers on small needle cases, book covers, colored pictures of still life in vegetables and fruits, action pictures showing children running and playing and swinging, object drawings of whisk brooms and kettles, little funny things like the plaintive black kitten, who is lost and is asking a worried-looking cow just now to get home, startling versions of "The Heroine of Vercheres," with ferocious Indians running wild over the landscape, pretty little colored sketches of water and trees and vague sky-lines, a black cat chasing a black mouse with an elongated tail, all appear on the walls of the kindergarten room, and will be on view again on Friday evening. It is an interesting demonstration of the work of these small children along artistic lines.

AROUND THE CITY.

The Kiwanis Club will be addressed at the luncheon to-morrow by Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., on the subject, "Our Scattered Nations."

BALLOON MAKES LONG NIGHT TRIP

Lands on Swedish Coast After Crossing Baltic Sea.

WINS BENNETT CUP.

(By Ole Cavling, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

COPENHAGEN, June 3.—W. T. Van Orman, pilot of the balloon Goodyear III, which won the 1926 James Gordon Bennett Cup in flying 535 miles from Antwerp to Solvesberg, Sweden, planned to leave to-day for Antwerp by airplane. In an interview with the United Press he told of the hazardous voyage.

"Our night trip over the Baltic was a reckless piece of ballooning," Van Orman, who raced with Walter W. Horgan as his assistant pilot, said.

"When we passed over the North Sea drifting at an altitude of 3,000 feet we suddenly began to sink. Only by throwing out 500 of our 750 kilograms of ballast were we able to keep going and to reach land.

"After we passed over Bremen we drifted to the Baltic where we encountered a heavy rain storm. To escape the rain we were forced to use oxygen.

"At 8.30 o'clock on Monday morning we found ourselves near the Swedish coast. Our ballast was exhausted and we decided that the time had come for us to land.

"We took a great risk in that night trip over the Baltic, but it won us the race. I believe that 16 hours and 35 minutes for 535 miles flown, constitutes a record time for distance made by a free balloon.

Every Eye Does The Best It Can

Often its best is a very poor service. Every eye tries to overcome any abnormality that may exist in it and this ATTEMPT means some sort of discomfort as a rule. These abnormalities can be overcome only by the made-to-measure lense. It is very unwise for a person to continue to strain the eyes when help is so readily secured. Glad to help you.

WEDDING BELLS.

CUTT—DYER

A very pretty wedding took place Saturday, May 29, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cutt, 142 Parsells Avenue, Rochester, N.Y., when their son, Cyril, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Irene Mae Dyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dyer, 429 Chambers Street, Peterborough. The ceremony took place in the living room of the bride's home, which was beautifully decorated with lilies of the valley and white lilacs. Rev. Compton of Ascension Church performed the ceremony. The Wedding March was played by Mr. Arthur Roberts and Miss Lillian Carr sang "Oh Promise Me" very sweetly during the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Mr. Lent, wore a beautiful gown of rosewood georgette trimmed with gold and brown and large picture hat and shoes and stockings to match, and carried a shower bouquet of butterfly roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid, Miss Ethel Forrest, wore a lovely frock of powder blue georgette trimmed with grey, a large grey hat and grey shoes and stockings. She carried a basket of sweet peas peas and sweetheart roses. The flower girl, Miss Eva Cutt, sister of the bridegroom, was very pretty in white French voile trimmed with satin ribbons and a silver hair band. She carried a basket of swet peas and narcissus. Mr. Willis Cutt, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served to relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Cutt left later for a two-weeks' Canadian trip.

STARTLING EVIDENCE AT THE CUSTOMS PROBE

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS AT BEEBE ADMITS ALLOWING POSSESSION OF CAR CONTRARY TO REGULATIONS

Former Preventative Officer Says He Was Told To "Lay Off."

VERY BOLD LANGUAGE.

Even Children Were Disinclined To Give Information To Help Officers.

OTTAWA, June 4 (Canadian Press).—J. F. Paquette, aged 63, bookkeeper of the customs office at Rock Island, was the first witness before the customs committee yesterday. Mr. Paquette said he had been appointed to the customs service in 1882 and had worked for twenty years, giving all his time during the day to the work at $500 a year. He was at present getting $1,680 a year. He was also an insurance agent and as such sold fire policies to the R. & G. Company, the Rock Island Overall Company, and the J. A. Gilmore Company, all of Rock Island. Mr. Calder only examined the witness for a few minutes.

E. Brownlee, collector of customs at the port of Beebe, was the next witness. He had been in the service since 1890 and had not, prior to the inquiry, been aware of any extensive smuggling. It was said in evidence that Mr. Turner, president of the Snag Proof Overall Company, held a mortgage of $3,000 on Mr. Brownlee's house.

Mr. Stevens asked why the witness had allowed Mr. Wilkinson of Beebe to have an American car in his possession without payment of duty.

"On the authority of a letter from the deputy minister," was the reply.

"Contrary to your regulations?"

"I think it was," replied the witness, who agreed to produce the letter.

Mr. Donaghy questioned the witness respecting the report that "Truck loads of goods are being brought from the United States into Canada without paying customs."

"I never suspected it," replied Mr. Brownlee. Questioned further, he stated that he had not thought that conditions were as bad as reported until he had read recent newspaper reports, although Rock Island was always "Supposed to be a bad place even before I went there."

Mr. Stevens asked if he had not heard that smuggling was being done by Turner, Jenkins and Gilmore, "and so on down the line—by business men."

"According to reports," was the reply.

Mr. Brownlee's recommendation to prevent smuggling was "To check the manufacturers about twice a year."

Men Dismissed

Asked whether any men had been transferred from the customs service at these points, Mr. Brownlee said that one man named Cowan, whom he thought had been discharging his duty fairly, had been transferred in 1914 to another point. Another officer had been dismissed, while in 1922 an official whom he considered as "fair" in the matter of competency was transferred.

J. Kellett, a former customs preventive officer at Montreal, was recalled. He had not made a seizure with respect to Turner, a business man at Rock Island, "As we were told to lay off."

"Who told you to lay off?" asked Mr. Stevens.

"Mr. Bisaillon," was the reply.

Boots Mussed Up Rug, And So He Took 'Em Off

DETROIT, June 4.—Clarence Hunt complains, in a bill for divorce filed yesterday, that his wife, May, compelled him to take off his shoes as soon as he entered the house and that, to shut out dirt, she kept the crevices of the windows plugged with rags day and night. When he returned from visiting relatives or friends, he had to change his clothes immediately because his wife feared they contained germs, he says.

COMMITTEES OF COUNCIL MEET

Works, Finance and Parks Committees Clear Off Files.

ROUTINE BUSINESS.

Three committees of the City Council met last night to clear up their files before the June meeting of the Council. First on the programme came the Board of Works. The Board decided to award the contract for pumping equipment for the station at the foot of Simcoe Street to the Babcock Wilcox Company. It was also decided to give notice of intention to construct concrete sidewalks on Homewood Avenue and the Monaghan Road.

Mr. Gillespie of the Toronto Globe addressed the Finance Committee on the matter of advertising in a special vacation number being issued on June 10. His proposal was heard with attention, but the value of the advertising did not appeal to the members, so nothing was done. The Mayor and chairman, with Ald. Ackerman, were appointed a committee to see about getting some cards printed for handing out to tourists and to be attached to goods leaving the city.

F. Dummitt will build the new dressing-room at Inverlea Park. His tender was the lowest of five submitted to the Parks Committee last night, and was accepted. The chairman was authorized to find out how much more it would cost to have a concrete floor put in, and if he deems it advisable, will have the change made. Ward MacDonald and Frank Larone were chosen from the six applicants for caretakers at the civic bathing beaches.

THE WEATHER.

The temperature was down to 35 degrees last night, and there were traces of white frost this morning Highest point yesterday 54 degrees. Last year about this date we had some very warm days. On June 3rd it was 86; on the 4th, 84, the 5th 89, 6th 90 and 7th 91 degrees.—W. P.

Farming Quebec Sticks To the Spinning Wheel

OTTAWA, Ont., June 4. Canadian Press. — Showing the extent to which the farming population of Quebec still go in for home industry, George Bouchard, M.P., for Kamouraska, in an address here yesterday, said that there were two companies in the province exclusively engaged in the manufacture of spinning wheels for the habitant.

As an indication of the skill attained by these home weavers, he stated that nearly all of the clothing he wore at the luncheon was made for him on the spinning wheel by his constituents in Kamouraska.

COUNCIL ORDERS TRACK REMOVED FROM HIGHWAY

North Monaghan Council Orders Street Car Rails Off Monaghan Road.

NEAR JACKSON PARK.

Franchise Forfeited By Failure To Use Line—Council Meeting.

The Hydro-Electric Power Commission will be asked to have the rails removed from that portion of Monaghan road from McDonnel street to Jackson Park. As that portion of the railway is not being operated the franchise has expired, and the present condition of the track makes it very difficult to do any work on the road with satisfactory results.

This was decided on at a meeting of North Monaghan Council.

The Council met as a Court of Revision on Saturday, Bay 29, all the members being present. Deputy-Reve Lillico was elected chairman

The first appeal heard was that of J. O. De Laplante, that lots 145, 225, 226, plan 45, be assessed in the name of Susan A. De Laplante and appealing against the assessment of lots 145, 225 and 226, 203, 204 as being too high. The first part of the appeal was granted. The appeal on the valuation of the lots was not granted and the assessment was confirmed.

J. C. Masterson appealed to be assessed as a Separate school supporter for lot 26, plan 56. Appeal granted.

N. S. Routley and Edna N. Routley appealed to be assessed as owners of lot 27, township lot 12, concession 13. Appeal granted.

A resolution was passed that the assessment roll be accepted.

The Court of Revision adjourned and the Council proceeded to business.

Joseph Madill appeared before the Council in regards to arrears of taxes on lots 21 and 22, plan 30. Mr. Madill stated that the owner of these lots lives in Toronto and that has been acting for him here He also stated that he has paid the taxes on this property for some years and and he feels that there is considerable hardship in paying two years' back taxes. Mr. Madill thinks that some mistake has been made and in proof of his arguments the Council has granted a stay of sale for the year 1926 to give the owner an opportunity of producing the tax receipts.

The following bills were passed and ordered paid: Joseph Madill, 24 yards of gravel, $3.60; John McIntosh, searching for titles in registry office, $2.75.

LAVOIE KNITTING COMPANY, LTD. BUYS HOWARD BLOCK, HASTINGS

Will Employ From 25 To 30 Hands—Move Plant From Peterboro.

NEW BUILDING.

Labor Will Be Recruited From People in the Village.

(By a Staff Reporter)

HASTINGS, June 4—The Lavoie Knitting Company of Peterboro has purchased the Howard block and will move their plant here occupying the entire three floors and employing between 25 and 30 hands. In the transaction which was completed Thursday it is understood the company paid $10,000 for the property, a spacious red brick building erected in 1918 after the fire of 1917 had levelled the Howard stores on the south-west corner near the bridge and leaped across the street destroying a hotel.

Reeve Hess told the Examiner that the Lavoie company had neither asked nor received any concession from Hastings town council, and he hoped the new factory would meet with the fullest success in their new quarters. He expectd that all the labor required would be recruited from the people of Hastings.

Mr. P. M. Howard was inclined to reticence about the price. "My wife set the price at $$10,000," he finally remarked with the implication that she received that amount.

After 35 years of prominence in the business life of Hastings the name of Howard is about to yield up its place, and its successor is likely to be Hugh McDonald of Norwood, whose offer for the business has been accepted although up to yesterday afternoon there had been no payment of cash.

For 35 years Mr. Howard has conducted an undertaking establishment in Hastings and as a merchant was a furniture dealer and at one time with his late brother carried on a drygoods business on the present Howard premises. The family has been for many years one of the first in this town and was also well known throughout the entire district.

The agreement with the Lavoie Company provides for the continuance of the furniture stock in the store until other quarters have been secured.

Suicide Will Die Anyhow But Not From Strangling

NEW YORK, June 4. United Press. — A neighbor's presence of mind prevented George Koskoska, who the police said was drunk, from committing suicide on Thursday, but the friend forgot that the would-be suicide was hanging in mid-air, three flights above a concrete yard.

The friend cut the clothes' line by which Koskozka was hanging. The physicians say he will probably die but not from strangling.

Socially Prominent Woman Arrested For Jewel Theft Police Think She Stole For "Thrill" and Not Profit

NEW YORK, June 4 (United News)—After a four year search for a woman against whom Fifth Avenue jewelers had made complaints, police arrested Mrs. Mildred Dervoe in front of the exclusive Ritz Carlton Hotel Thursday, and confiscated gems valued at $30,000 which she carried in a handbag.

Mrs. Devoe claims relationship to socially prominent families She was plainly dressed. Jewels valued at several hundred thousand dollars have been lost through the activities of a woman described by the police as a "thrill kleptomaniac," who seeks little or no financial profit but only excitement in her thefts.

Two jewelers are said to have identified Mrs. Dervoe as having obtained pearl bracelets and a diamond brooch from them.

MADE IN CANADA WEEK PROPOSED

Merchants Discuss Special Effort To Push Canadian Goods.

ANOTHER MEETING.

Suggestions that a "Produced in Canada Week" be held in Peterboro some time next month were laid before a general meeting of representatives of retail merchants this morning in the Council Room of the Chamber of Commerce. J. J. Turner, representing the Business Standards Committee of the Kiwanis Club, introduced the proposal to the members. In his remarks he emphasized the necessity of keeping Canada-made goods to the fore, not only during the projected campaign, but throughout the fifty-two weeks in the year. Spasmodic efforts, he suggested, were seldom productive of much permanent results.

He stated that in the event of the scheme being adopted, The Examiner could be relied on to give support as had been done on Dollar Days of previous years.

The merchants present expressed belief in the soundness of the proposal, and it was agreed to get into touch with the chairman of the Local Retail Merchants' Association with the object of calling a meeting on Monday next in order further to discuss the matter.

B. Coyne, K.C., in an address at a gathering of the members of the Manitoba Bar Association yesterday, declared the time had come when Canada should follow in the footsteps of Australia and South Africa, absolve all appeals to that tribunal, and make the Supreme Court of Canada the last resort for Canadian litigants.

CITY LOOKS GAY AS FLAGS FLOWN

Over 150 Emblems In Streets Commemorate Kings Natal Day.

Peterborough took on an aspect of carnival yesterday as the merchants hung out their flags on the poles at the edge of the sidewalk in honor of the King's birthday.

Over 150 flags were put out on the business area of the city, besides others which were flown from the flagstaffs of the County Buildings, the Collegiate Institute, the G.W.V.A. Hall, the Public Library, and several private business premises. From the City Buildings a tattered veteran floated in the breeze, and on the top of the Armouries was seen the flag which is displayed there every day, being put up at daybreak and taken down at sunset all through the year.

The overwhelming majority of the flags flown were Union Jacks. A few red Canadian ensigns were in evidence while on two places—one opposite the store of J. A. Simons in Charlotte Street and the other opposite the residence of L. Anthony in Water Street — two poles were seen from which waved the Union Jack and an Allied flag, the Italian tricolor, thus coupling together the emblems of the native and adopted countries of the citizens named.

WINNIPEG LOCAL VOTES ON STRIKE

It was announced that a strike vote was being taken in Manitoba.

STOMACH TROUBLES ARE DUE TO ACIDITY

Tells of Pleasant Home Treatment to Bring Swift Relief

So-called Stomach Troubles—Indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, sourness, etc., are, in probably nine cases out of ten, evidence of "too much acid in the stomach" souring the food, causing the formation of gas and starting acid indigestion.

Gas distends the stomach and causes a full, oppressive burning feeling known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate stomach lining. Get rid of Gas and Acidity, and you get rid of Indigestion.

To stop or prevent the sourness and gas, to neutralize the stomach acids and keep the stomach sweet and free from indigestion, a teaspoonful or four tablets of Bisurated Magnesia should be taken in a little water after eating or whenever gas, sourness, pain or acidity is felt. This quickly sweetens the stomach, neutralizes the acidity, stops the pain and is harmless and inexpensive to use.

Bisurated Magnesia, powder or tablets only, can be obtained from any drug store and its daily use keeps the stomach in fine condition, enabling it to do its work without the aid of artificial digestants.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SATURDAY, JUNE 5.

Judging by the lunar transits of this day business may be expected to move along in the accustomed grooves, although there may be some delays or postponements. These are advisable, since the influences ruling the finances are read as unfriendly, and also all those ventures of a new character involving initiative or departures from the old order are discouraged by the sidereal operations. The sway is good for those in the employment of others.

Those whose birthday it is are admonished to devote themselves to the old lines of endeavor, as new projects are under a baneful sway and also the financial outlook is weak. But those in the employment of others are encouraged to push for recognition or preferment from those in authority over them. It is likely to be a year of slow progress generally for others. A child born on this day will be endowed with fairly good talents and versatility, but will make its best success in the employment of others.

HER OWN WAY

by A GIRL of TODAY

A MYSTERY.

There had been a queer atmosphere in the store the whole afternoon. I knew that gossip had been stirring about, but no one said anything to me.

About four o'clock I saw Mr. Robinson strolling complacently down the aisle, and my blood boiled as I thought of poor Miss Cleaver as I had found her in the rest room, her face covered with a cold clammy swat. She wasn't a pretty creature. He probably would have thought she was not. He was looking for something fresher and more beautiful.

Evidently this man didn't know that I was the girl who had seen Miss Cleaver in her agony, for he said to me with an unctuous smile

"I am afraid, Miss Dean, that you have not been under the discipline of the workaday world long enough to know that all the rules of the store must be obeyed. I happened to observe that you were away at lunch for almost two hours. I am going to be lenient with you this time, however, because I think you didn't know."

"I returned in time, Mr. Robinson. I was only gone an hour. But when I went into the woman's room to hang up my coat I found Miss Cleaver very ill. I was afraid she was dying, and I stayed to help. Was that against the rules of the store?"

It did my heart good to see that man crumple.

He grew pale and leaned over the counter toward me.

"Don't, please don't tell this to anyone. It would hurt the business of the store if anyone should hear the he store if anyone should hear thes story. There would be all sorts of gossip going about. I am afraid that someone would even say that she had tried to poison herself."

"Well, didn't she?" I asked tersely.

"Of course not, of course not," answered Robinson quickly. "Doctor Flint told me that he thought it was a kind of epileptic attack. He has no doubt that she will not recover."

"I am glad you told me that, Mr. Robinson, for I thought it was poison she had taken. You see, I saw her, and I picked up a bottle on the floor with this label on it."

Before he could recover from his astonishment I thrust the bottle with the red skull and cross bones on it into his hands.

"THESE WOMEN"

By MALCOLM DUART

The Characters and Situations in this Story are entirely fictional.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

AUDREY MORTON and her guardian, HARRY MORTON, have returned to their apartment in Toronto from their home in Peterborough.

Audrey has had as her Peterborough guests a bevy of chorus girls from Toronto, whom she met while trying for a stage career. She tells Morton that his secretary, JOHN PARRISH, has become interested in a little blond in the group of her guests, and so she sent them home.

Morton, middle-aged, unmarried and wealthy, is attractive to women, and particularly NONA a Toronto stage girl, just preparing to be starred as a dancer, and Audrey herself, have declared their love for him.

Morton is called from his bath, the morning of his arrival in Toronto, to find Nona, badly hurt, waiting for him in the reception hall below.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XLIII.

With an exclamation of dismay, Morton ran down the stairs, lifting his robe so it would not catch his feet.

"In Heaven's name, Nona!" he cried.

Lifting her wounded arm, he made a hasty inspection of the jagged gash that ran from elbow to wrist. It was bleeding profusely, but was not deep.

"What happened?" he asked.

Without waiting for an answer, he turned to the butler, who stood uncertainly on the bottom step.

"Bring hot water, some sterilized cotton, and that bottle of antiseptic on the shelf in my bathroom," he ordered, sharply.

The man hastened away. Nona's head was sinking. Morton lifted her from the chair, and laid her on the floor. Then he ran to the kitchen, and returned a moment later, the cook following him. He bore a towel, dripping with cold water, and with this he bathed the girl's face and throat.

Her eyes fluttered, and turned toward him.

"I was starteng to faint," she said, feebly.

She stirred, in an effort to get up.

"Stay where you are, a moment," he said.

The butler came with a pitcher of steaming water, and with the cotton and antiseptic liquid that Morton had asked for. With gentle fingers Morton bathed the cut in Nona's arm, washing away the blood that had hardened, and staunching the flow from the broken flesh.

"Don't talk," he said.

With dampened cotton laid loosely on her arm, she lay still while he bathed her face. There was a bruise on her forehead, and a long scratch that extended from her ear, across her throat and down to her bosom. The upper part of her silk dress was in rags.

Picking her up as one would life a child, he turned to the stairs and carried her to the guest chamber that lay beyond Audrey's room.

"Tell Miss Morton to come as soon as she can," he told the butler. "Call her maid to come here right away."

He laid Nona on the bed. When the maid appeared, he directed her to undress the injured girl, and to get her comfortably under the covers.

"Call me as soon as she's ready," he said.

He went back to his own room and hurriedly donned his clothes. By the time he came out, the maid was outside his door.

"She is all right, sir," the servant said. "Miss Morton is in there with her now."

Without knocking, Morton re-entered the room where Nona lay. Audrey was kneeling beside the bed, her loose boudoir gown open, her hair still uncombed after her bath. Nona smiled as Morton came in.

"I almost flopped," she said.

Pushing back her hair, she raised herself to a sitting position. The maid had put one of Audrey's night dresses on her. The wounded arm, still with its heap of soft cotton, lay outside the coverlet.

"Tell me about it," said Morton, pulling up a chair.

"It was Joe—Joe and that little thin girl!" she said.

"The man that tried to get money from me?" gasped Audrey.

Nona assented. "And the girl that tried to get money from Harry. They came in before I was up this morning. They got my diamond bar pin, and all my rings, and everything! And look what they did to me!"

As Morton listened, sternly impassive, and to the accompaniment of interested, sympathetic gasps from Audrey, Nona told her story.

She had been aroused by a pounding at her door. She had called to her visitor to wait, outside, and had hurriedly dressed herself. She was expecting Abe Sunshine to call early, with some music. When she opened the door, the girl was waiting outside. The girl came in, and holding the door ajar, called: "Joe!"

The large young man, her dancing partner, ran in and slammed the door behind him. Without a word, he threw one arm about Nona's neck, and held her mouth shut with his other hand. She struggled. She could see the girl entering the bed-chamber. Joe threw Nona to the floor, and placed his knee on her chest, still holding her mouth. She bit him on the arm. With a curse, he struck her in the temple. Dimly, she remembered keeping on with the struggle.

She believed they still were there, when her eyes opened. She moved, and tried to scream, but she was too weak. Looking around, she found that they were gone. Her arm was throbbed, and her clothing was torn about the shoulders, evidently in the fight with Joe upon the floor.

When at last she was able to totter to her feet, she went to her dressing table. The hat pin and her pearl necklace, and her rings were gone.

She went to the telephone, and called Morton's apartment, in the faint hope that he might be back in Toronto. The butler told her that Morton and Audrey had just arrived.

"So I came, just this way, in a taxi," she smiled, "and almost fainted on your hands. The elevator man at my apartment paid my fare. And everybody stared at me so!"

She lay back.

"We'll call the police right away, daddy," proposed Audrey.

Morton was wrapped in thought and did not reply.

"That girl always hated me, from the time she tried the 'badger game' on you," Nona told Morton. "And she lost her job in the show, and I think they were desperate for money."

"We'll not call the police," said Morton, with decision. "There'll be no reports of 'Butterfly Robbed of Gems.' Do you know what I think?"

The girls looked at him expectantly.

"I think we're rid of those people," he said. "They'll have two or three thousand dollars, even from a thieves' broker, for that jewelry. And they'll run away, and they won't come back. If we have them arrested, they'll be out of the penitentiary in a year or two, and there's no forecasting what they'll do next.

"This way, they're gone, and I think they're gone for good."

He arose, and with his hands in his pockets, strode up and down the room.

"You stay here," he said to Nona, "until you're well again. I'll telephone Abe Sunshine and your producer that you're ill for a few days. Audrey, you and I will dress that cut in her arm. We won't need a doctor. And a rest will do you good, Nona."

She beamed at him gratefully.

"You're the best man, and the smartest man, in the world," she told him.

It was nearly a week before Nona was able to be abroad again. Her torn arm healed quickly, but the great purple lump on her forehead, placed there by her assailant's fist, took its own time in disappearing.

She stayed indoors, sang with Audrey, and cautiously restored the suppleness of her bruised muscles.

"Are you going to start in again on your stage career?" she asked Audrey.

The younger girl smiled. "That was a piece of nonsense, wasn't it? You know why I started, don't you?"

"I had an idea," asknowledged Nona.

"Mr. Morton liked to be with you so much, and with some of the other stage girls, that I was going to find out how they managed to fascinate him so," Audrey said.

"Did you learn?" Nona was idly strumming at the organ.

"In a way, yes," said Audrey, thoughtfully.

Nona swung around to face her, and waited.

"You, and those girls in the chorus, are natural," Audrey continued. "You do whatever you think of doing, without worrying what people will say. Most women are stiff. They follow a set of rules that they've laid down for themselves or that have been laid down for them by their friends, and so they're unnatural.

"They mustn't say or do this, and they must always do so-and-so because it's correct. No wonder Mr. Morton likes to be with women who laugh naturally, and cut up when they feel like it, and say whatever pops into their heads."

Nona considered.

"Some of the girls are pretty coarse," she commented.

"I don't think he likes that," Audrey surmised. "But I imagine he'd rather have them natural, and coarse, than pretending all the time."

Nona turned to an aspect of the subject that was more important to her. "You don't suppose he's interested in some girl, do you?" she inquired.

Audrey shook her head. "He's awfully impersonal. He likes you, and me—but he always thinks of me just as a little girl in pinafores. Nona, I've actually proposed to him four or five times, and he simply will not listen!"

She laughed a little. "On the train yesterday afternoon, a woman asked him to read her palm! A woman he never had seen before!"

"Old stuff," observed Nona. "Anything to hold hands."

She returned to the organ, and abstractedly fingered the keys.

The first day she ventured abroad, Morton and Audrey took her driving, through the park, and out into the country. She breathed deeply of the sweet summer air. The machine, heavy-springed, silent, powerful, glided along the highway without a jar.

"Life like this is better than life like mine," Nona said. "Comfort, folks to love you, peace!"

She sighed.

"Don't know that I've had much peace in a good while," said Morton.

"But you know where your next meal is coming from," Nona told him, "and you don't have to worry about getting clothes, and stage managers don't swear at you."

He patted her hand. "Don't be blue. Is the glitter of your career wearing off?"

"My career isn't due to start until next week," she said. "No, the glitter isn't wearing off. I want to go ahead with it. You want me to, don't you?"

Audrey, at Morton's other side, cast a quick glance at Nona.

"Are you doing it for him?" she asked.

"Of course," Nona told her.

Morton leaned forward to give a direction to the chauffeur. As he sank back, he felt in his pocket, and produced a scrap of paper. It was a penciled line in the close handwriting of John Parrish.

"See that?" he asked. The girls craned their heads to look.

"Third time in a week that Parrish has left a note for me that he would be late to work in the morning."

He restored the paper to his pocket.

"You've noticed that he hasn't been at our apartment since we came back to Toronto."

"I noticed," Audrey said.

"Well, there's a reason. I've been looking after the young man a bit in the last week, and he's getting into trouble, fast."

STIRLING NEWS

STIRLING, June 4.—Mr. Sptental village engineer, is busy extending the water system to those who did not have the service last year.

The Wednesday half holiday for the summer months starts today.

St. Andrew's Guild

At the meeting of St. Andrew's Guild on Monday night an interesting and instructive programme was carried out under the supervision of Mr. W. L. Anderson as chairman. Mr. Simpson read the scripture lesson which he termed as the pioncer chapter, viz., Hebrews, 11th chapter, as the subject of the topic was Pioneer Missionary Work. Miss Smith and Cathie Simpson sang a duet; Mrs. Williams gave a piano solo; Arthur Duncan sang; Geo Tulloch and Arthur Duncan sang a duet.

It being the last meeting until fall, a report was given of the work of the past six months, which showed that the Guild had been doing good work under the presidency of Mrs. Harper Rollins.

Mr. Simpson then gave a lecture, illustrating it by showing upon the screen a number of pictures of actual occurrences that happened on his journey to the Peace river country in 1903. Mr. Simpson blazed the way for Presbyterianism in this far northern country, and suffered many hardships on the journey as well as during his sojourn there. Mrs. Simpson was an able assistant in many ways in the work her husband was called to do.

Mr. Simpson was very optimistic regarding the posiblities of this part of the great north country going so far as to say that the capital of the Dominion might be located there yet. A lunch was then served by the ladies and a pleasant social time spent.

St. Paul's United Church

St. Paul's United Church held the last meeting of their Epworth League on Monday night. The principal item of the program was the showing of 100 slides by Mr. S. Hardy, being views of important places in Canada from coast to coast.

Agricultural Society

At a meeting of the Stirling Agricultural Society last Friday night it was decided to sell a portion of land to the village to be used as a dumping ground for refuse. It was also planned to hold the District Championship School Fair in conjunction with the Stirling Fair on September 29th. This fair is the gathering together of exhibits of all the prize winners at the various school fairs —some 20 in number — which will be held during September throughout the county of Hastings, and offers suitable prizes to the boys and girls who have already done so well at their own school fair.

Stirling Agricultural Society will offer valuable prizes in the various classes to the amount of $185.00.

Personals

Mr. Albert Bird, the well known machinist, was taken seriously ill last Wednesday. The Belleville Hospital ambulance was sent for and he was hurried away to the hospital where he is still very sick. Mr. Bird does all the cheesefactory work in this part of the country and his absence from duty will mean inconvenience in many cases.

Mr. A. D. McIntosh of Toronto was a visitor in town Monday night and was an attendant at St. Andrew's Guild meeting.

Mrs. Findlay of Carleton Place visited her daughter, Miss Findlay, of the High School staff, last week.

Mrs. Clifford Hatton and two children, Toronto, is visiting her father, Mr. Lindsay Meiklejohn.

Miss Helen MacDonnell returned home on Tuesday from a visit to friends in Toronto and Orillia.

Rev. Mr and Mrs. Payne and two children of Athens are visiting Rev. and Mrs. Byers at the rectory.

VILLAGE LIGHTS OFF.

OMEMEE, June 4.—Shortly after eight o'clock on Tuesday evening the town was left in utter darkness, which forced many citizens to recall bygone days. A strong gale blew up at dusk, which broke a limb off a tree, thus striking a Hydro wire on Sturgeon street and breaking it. The power was cut off from the main street at once. The Hydro man, Mr. C. L. Morcombe, was soon on the scene and found a live wire on the road. Fortunately, no damage occurred before it was discovered. Coal-oil lamps and candles were brought to use for the entire evening as it took some time to repair the line.

MISSION CIRCLE MEETS.

St. John's United Young Ladies Spend Pleasant Evening.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 4.—The young ladies of the Mission Circle of St. John's United Church held their regular meeting on Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Alma Upton, Sebastapol street. There were about twenty-five members present. After the devotional and business part of the meeting was over a splendid programme was given. Several of the members gave short missionary readings and Mrs. Turner sang a solo. Arrangements were made for a picnic to be held at Crow River sometime in June. Miss Upton served lunch, for which the ladies gave her a hearty vote of thanks.

The next meeting will be held on the first Tuesday in July at the home of Mrs. Searl Chessel.

When she opened the door, the girl was waiting outside. The girl came in, and holding the door ajar, called: "Joe!"

The large young man, her dancing partner, ran in and slammed the door behind him. Without a word, he threw one arm about Nona's neck, and held her mouth shut with his other hand. She struggled. She could see the girl entering the bed-chamber. Joe threw Nona to the floor, and placed his knee on her chest, still holding her mouth. She bit him on the arm. With a curse, he struck her in the temple. Dimly, she remembered keeping on with the struggle.

She believed they still were there, when her eyes opened. She moved, and tried to scream, but she was too weak. Looking around, she found that they were gone. Her arm was bleeding from a long gash. Her head throbbed, and her clothing was torn about the shoulders, evidently in the fight with Joe upon the floor.

When at last she was able to totter to her feet, she went to her dressing table. The hat pin and her pearl necklace, and her rings were gone.

She went to the telephone, and called Morton's apartment, in the faint hope that he might be back in Toronto. The butler told her that Morton and Audrey had just arrived.

"So I came, just this way, in a taxi," she smiled, "and almost fainted on your hands. The elevator man at my apartment paid my fare. And everybody stared at me so!"

She lay back.

"We'll call the police right away, daddy," proposed Audrey.

Morton was wrapped in thought and did not reply.

"That girl always hated me, from the time she tried the 'badger game' on you," Nona told Morton. "And she lost her job in the show, and I think they were desperate for money."

"We'll not call the police," said Morton, with decision. "There'll be no reports of 'Butterfly Robbed of Gems.' Do you know what I think?"

The girls looked at him expectantly.

"I think we're rid of those people," he said. "They'll have two or three thousand dollars, even from a thieves' broker, for that jewelry. And they'll run away, and they won't come back. If we have them arrested, they'll be out of the penitentiary in a year or two, and there's no forecasting what they'll do next.

"This way, they're gone, and I think they're gone for good."

He arose, and with his hands in his pockets, strode up and down the room.

"You stay here," he said to Nona, "until you're well again. I'll telephone Abe Sunshine and your producer that you're ill for a few days. Audrey, you and I will dress that cut in her arm. We won't need a doctor. And a rest will do you good, Nona."

She beamed at him gratefully.

"You're the best man, and the smartest man, in the world," she told him.

It was nearly a week before Nona was able to be abroad again. Her torn arm healed quickly, but the great purple lump on her forehead, placed there by her assailant's fist, took its own time in disappearing.

She stayed indoors, sang with Audrey, and cautiously restored the suppleness of her bruised muscles.

"Are you going to start in again on your stage career?" she asked Audrey.

The younger girl smiled. "That was a piece of nonsense, wasn't it? You know why I started, don't you?"

"I had an idea," asknowledged Nona.

"Mr. Morton liked to be with you so much, and with some of the other stage girls, that I was going to find out how they managed to fascinate him so," Audrey said.

"Did you learn?" Nona was idly strumming at the organ.

"In a way, yes," said Audrey, thoughtfully.

Nona swung around to face her, and waited.

"You, and those girls in the chorus, are natural," Audrey continued. "You do whatever you think of doing, without worrying what people will say. Most women are stiff. They follow a set of rules that they've laid down for themselves or that have been laid down for them by their friends, and so they're unnatural.

"They mustn't say or do this, and they must always do so-and-so because it's correct. No wonder Mr. Morton likes to be with women who laugh naturally, and cut up when they feel like it, and say whatever pops into their heads."

Nona considered.

"Some of the girls are pretty coarse," she commented.

"I don't think he likes that," Audrey surmised. "But I imagine he'd rather have them natural, and coarse, than pretending all the time."

Nona turned to an aspect of the subject that was more important to her.

"You don't suppose he's interested in some girl, do you?" she inquired.

Audrey shook her head. "He's awfully impersonal. He likes you, and me—but he always thinks of me just as a little girl in pinafores. Nona, I've actually proposed to him four or five times, and he simply will not listen!"

She laughed a little. "On the train yesterday afternoon, a woman asked him to read her palm! A woman he never had seen before!"

"Old stuff," observed Nona. "Anything to hold hands."

She returned to the organ, and abstractedly fingered the keys.

The first day she ventured abroad, Morton and Audrey took her driving, through the park, and out into the country. She breathed deeply of the sweet summer air. The machine, heavy-springed, silent, powerful, glided along the highway without a jar.

"Life like this is better than life like mine," Nona said. "Comfort, folks to love you, peace!"

She sighed.

"Don't know that I've had much peace in a good while," said Morton.

"But you know where your next meal is coming from," Nona told him, "and you don't have to worry about getting clothes, and stage managers don't swear at you."

He patted her hand. "Don't be blue. Is the glitter of your career wearing off?"

"My career isn't due to start until next week," she said. "No, the glitter isn't wearing off. I want to go ahead with it. You want me to, don't you?"

Audrey, at Morton's other side, cast a quick glance at Nona.

"Are you doing it for him?" she asked.

"Of course," Nona told her.

Morton leaned forward to give a direction to the chauffeur. As he sank back, he felt in his pocket, and produced a scrap of paper. It was a penciled line in the close handwriting of John Parrish.

"See that?" he asked. The girls craned their heads to look.

"Third time in a week that Parrish has left a note for me that he would be late to work in the morning."

He restored the paper to his pocket.

"You've noticed that he hasn't been at our apartment since we came back to Toronto."

"I noticed," Audrey said.

"Well, there's a reason. I've been looking after the young man a bit in the last week, and he's getting into trouble, fast."

STIRLING NEWS

STIRLING, June 4.—Mr. Sprental village engineer, is busy extending the water system to those who did not have the service last year.

The Wednesday half holiday for the summer months starts today.

St. Andrew's Guild

At the meeting of St. Andrew's Guild on Monday night an interesting and instructive programme was carried out under the supervision of Mr. W. L. Anderson as chairman. Mr. Simpson read the scripture lesson which he termed as the pioneer chapter, viz., Hebrews, 11th chapter, as the subject of the topic was Pioneer Missionary Work. Miss Smith and Cathie Simpson sang a duet; Mrs. Williams gave a piano solo; Arthur Duncan sang; Geo Tulloch and Arthur Duncan sang a duet.

It being the last meeting until fall, a report was given of the work of the past six months, which showed that the Guild had been doing good work under the presidency of Mrs. Harper Rollins.

Mr. Simpson then gave a lecture, illustrating it by showing upon the screen a number of pictures of actual occurrences that happened on his journey to the Peace river country in 1903. Mr. Simpson blazed the way for Presbyterianism in this far northern country, and suffered many hardships on the journey as well as during his sojourn there. Mrs. Simpson was an able assistant in many ways in the work her husband was called to do.

Mr. Simpson was very optimistic regarding the posiblities of this part of the great north country going so far as to say that the capital of the Dominion might be located there yet. A lunch was then served by the ladies and a pleasant social time spent.

St. Paul's United Church

St. Paul's United Church held the last meeting of their Epworth League on Monday night. The principal item of the program was the showing of 100 slides by Mr. S. Hardy, being views of important places in Canada from coast to coast.

Agricultural Society

At a meeting of the Stirling Agricultural Society last Friday night it was decided to sell a portion of land to the village to be used as a dumping ground for refuse. It was also planned to hold the District Championship School Fair in conjunction with the Stirling Fair on September 29th. This fair is the gathering together of exhibits of all the prize winners at the various school fairs —some 20 in number — which will be held during September throughout the county of Hastings, and offers suitable prizes to the boys and girls who have already done so well at their own school fair.

Stirling Agricultural Society will offer valuable prizes in the various classes to the amount of $185.00.

Personals

Mr. Albert Bird, the well known machinist, was taken seriously ill last Wednesday. The Belleville Hospital ambulance was sent for and he was hurried away to the hospital where he is still very sick. Mr. Bird does all the cheesefactory work in this part of the country and his absence from duty will mean inconvenience in many cases.

Mr. A. D. McIntosh of Toronto was a visitor in town Monday night and was an attendant at St. Andrew's Guild meeting.

Mrs. Findlay of Carleton Place visited her daughter, Miss Findlay, of the High School staff, last week.

Mrs. Clifford Hatton and two children, Toronto, is visiting her father, Mr. Lindsay Meiklejohn.

Miss Helen MacDonnell returned home on Tuesday from a visit to friends in Toronto and Orillia.

Rev. Mr and Mrs. Payne and two children of Athens are visiting Rev. and Mrs. Byers at the rectory.

VILLAGE LIGHTS OFF.

OMEMEE, June 4.—Shortly after eight o'clock on Tuesday evening the town was left in utter darkness, which forced many citizens to recall bygone days. A strong gale blew up at dusk, which broke a limb off a tree, thus striking a Hydro wire on Sturgeon street and breaking it. The power was cut off from the main street at once. The Hydro man, Mr. C. L. Morcombe, was soon on the scene and found a live wire on the road. Fortunately, no damage occurred before it was discovered. Coal-oil lamps and candles were brought to use for the entire evening as it took some time to repair the line.

MISSION CIRCLE MEETS.

St. John's United Young Ladies Spend Pleasant Evening.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 4.—The young ladies of the Mission Circle of St. John's United Church held their regular meeting on Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Alma Upton, Sebastapol street. There were about twenty-five members present. After the devotional and business part of the meeting was over a splendid programme was given. Several of the members gave short missionary readings and Mrs. Turner sang a solo. Arrangements were made for a picnic to be held at Crow River sometime in June. Miss Upton served lunch, for which the ladies gave her a hearty vote of thanks.

The next meeting will be held on the first Tuesday in July at the home of Mrs. Searl Chessel.

INVERLEA PARK.

Although the weather conditions have not been such as to stimulate a great deal of interest in swimming, the season is at hand, and in this connection the Examiner has been asked to bring to the attention of the Council the advisability of installing a temporary water service into Inverlea Park for use both by the public and the caretaker.

A line of pipe laid above ground, such as is used at the Exhibition Grounds, would serve the purpose of providing a supply of water for use by bathers in ridding themselves of the dirt picked up in walking from the river to the bathing-house and by the caretaker in keeping the dressing-rooms clean.

It is almost impossible for the bathing quarters to be kept in a proper condition otherwise, as the bathers are continually tracking in sand and mud, and the caretaker has no water supply available, except through the slow and laborious process of carrying it by the pailful from the river.

A tap just outside the dressing-room door would effectually solve the whole problem, and the service would not involve much expense.

A STRIKING SUCCESS.

Speaking to the Examiner yesterday, Mayor Holloway commented upon the impressive appearance of the business section of the city, adorned as it was with Union Jacks in honour of the King's birthday.

"If the merchants as a whole would adopt the scheme and leave no gaps whatever in the array of flags, the effect would be still more striking," remarked His Worship.

The Great War Veterans' Association, which is responsible for the introduction of this simple and effective method of decoration, deserves credit for the success of the scheme, which while securing funds for the work of the association, has made it possible for the centre of Peterboro to look on national holidays like a community that is proud to be a city of the British Empire.

The contrast between the appearance of the business section yesterday as compared with the King's birthday last year was a remarkable one, and when the G.W.V.A.'s campaign is completed and the downtown streets are lined with unbroken ranks of Union Jacks, the full effect of the plan will be appreciated.

Peterboro is learning to fly the flag, and that is a development over which there should be general satisfaction.

CIVIC HOLIDAY.

A committee representative of the Kiwanis Club is to wait upon the City Council at its next meeting to urge that the date of Peterboro's Civic Holiday be changed to conform with that of the majority of Ontario cities.

While the first Monday in August is observed by most centres as Civic Holiday, Peterboro has chosen the second Monday of the month.

For a number of years there has been a strong feeling that this city should fall in line with others, but the Kiwanis' action is the first real step toward bringing such a change about.

One obvious advantage in a uniform Civic Holiday from the viewpoint of Peterboro merchants is that local stores each year lose a considerable amount of business through local citizens visiting Toronto on Peterboro's Civic Holiday and doing a large amount of their fall buying.

If the date were the same in both cities this practice would, of course, be impossible.

Other arguments in favour of the change are apparent, and the deputation which will wait upon the Council at its meeting on Monday night should not have much difficulty in presenting a strong case.

There are those who are opposed to the changing of our Civic Holiday to correspond with Toronto, and one of the objections they raise is that Toronto people in large numbers come to Peterborough, both by train and motor cars, and considerable purchasing is done in Peterborough on Toronto Civic Holiday. Not only that, they feel they should be taken care of when they do come to the city.

AN ASPECT OF INSTALMENT BUYING.

There is an aspect of instalment buying which has not had anything like the consideration it deserves. It is being brought out effectively in places where "highbrow" editorials and interviews with eminent bankers do not circulate. The man who is getting most vocal about it is the commercial traveller whose customers are small town and country storekeepers. He says new business and collections are both slow and that the storekeepers in the smaller towns complain that their customers are skimping on necessities, and especially textiles, in order to meet weekly instalments on motor cars, vacuum cleaners, radio sets, furniture and other things beyond their real purchasing capacity. Wages are good and in many departments as high or even higher than they were during the war. But in a time of good wages and fairly full employment people are darning their old clothes, and that means trouble in the textile industry. One traveller, recently returned from the Middle West, said that the crossroads grocery store had become a sort of gloom centre with an obvious reaction on already discontented farmers.

People interested in the textile and other industries supplying the necessaries of life and some comforts, as distinguished from luxuries, are talking about organized measures to restrict production. There are certainly too many spindles for consumptive needs, even if the consumer had not been overspending elsewhere. But housekeepers will observe, even in the city department stores, that prices of textiles are well maintained. There may be occasional bargains, but that part of the cost of living does not reflect depression in its manufacture. Henry Ford stimulates a fresh market every time he reduces the price of his motor car. Perhaps some courageous cotton spinner will try a like experiment for sufficient time to show whether more attractive prices will not uncover a new stratum of buyers. The consumer is beginning to ask where he comes in, if ever. There is no reason to get pessimistic about it, but a condition seems to exist which will have to be met in some other way than by creating artificial scarcity. It will be remembered that the department stores in 1921 ultimately handled the question of inventories in a decidedly drastic fashion.—Barron's.

A REFUSAL OF ARBITRATION.

The coal strike in England continues, and apparently the only thing that will prevent it being a fight to a finish, with the inevitable vast amount of suffering to the miners and loss to the public, will be Government action in the matter. If this be taken by Mr. Baldwin's Government, the chances are that public sympathy will be heartily behind it. It may be that the working miners are unreasonable in refusing to consider either a decrease of wages or reduction of hours in any of the mining districts of Great Britain, despite the fact that in some of these districts mining is carried on at a loss; but, on the other hand, it is also certain that a majority of the owners of the coal mines are equally unreasonable, and without the excuse that many of the hard-pressed workers have when they refuse a lowering of their compensation.

Premier Baldwin in his final communication to the Mine Owners' Association after the collapse of the general strike found it necessary to express "great regret that your association has thought it necessary to adopt the uncompromising attitude" the association was showing; and after disclaiming the idea that anyone had desired to interfere from a political point of view, he went on to say that whatever action had been necessary had been "entirely due to the incapacity of the coal industry, unlike other industries to settle its disputes for itself," and he proceeded:

> "The essential feature of the proposal laid before you by the Government was that both sides should agree to leave the crucial point of the dispute—the figure of the minimum percentage on a basis in various districts—to be determined in last resort by arbitration. This is a principle that has been accepted over and over again by other great industries."

We think it is impossible to respect the attitude of any intelligent and educated man, whether employer or employed, who holds out against arbitration as a final resource in the effort to check strikes or lockouts. The heads of any big business who prefer fighting to arbitration are not, in our opinion, altogether decent men. Arbitration is peace; a strike or a lockouts is war. The aim of any decent man should be to accept every possible means to preserve peace in preference to entering into war, whether national or industrial. Refusing arbitration, the majority of the members of the Coal Owners' Association of Great Britain do not deserve any sympathy in their troubles. It is deplorable that British prosperity must suffer through their pigheadedness, and it is to be hoped that Government action in England in the premises will be vigorous.—Ottawa Journal.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

The annual report of the Civil Service Commission not only recommends the need of reorganization and consolidation in the interests of economy, but points out several practical means by which they can be brought about. Thousands of dollars are being wasted annually because this problem of Civil Service reform is not courageously taken in hand. Is it not time that the Government made a start in a general reorganization of the Service?

As for the civil servants themselves, a large number of them have become sick of the very word reorganization, because in the past it has meant either further insecurity in employment, or greater complexities in classification, in other words, more and more red tape and muddle. Civil servants should have at least the same permanency in their employment as workers in other fields. They are supposed to have more, but as a matter of fact for some years they have had a great deal less. Outside workers engaged in occupations of similar character can be assured that if they live up to certain common-sense standards of conduct, and are conscientious in their duties, they need not fear summary dismissal. This has not been the case with the Service, and in any reorganization which is undertaken it should be distinctly understood that the wielding of the axe is not the object in view, but such a readjustment of the existing personnel as will bring greater efficiency and economy.

On this question of surplus staff, no one knows better than civil servants themselves that there are some branches which are over-staffed. This state of affairs is just as hard on the persons employed as on the taxpayer who pays the shot. No one with a drop of red blood in their veins wants to be a drone, or the fifth wheel to a coach. Some of these people have more than average ability, but it is absolutely thrown away in a place where there are three men doing one man's job. Not only is every chance of promotion blocked, but they haven't even the satisfaction of knowing that their work is of the slightest value to anyone except as an excuse for the payment of a monthly cheque.

In the past thousands of this class have been thrown on the street, with a great deal less consideration than would be shown to the faithful employes of any reputable business concern. Since that time other thousands have been taken on the Government pay roll. The situation is farcical. There is plenty of work and work essential to carry on the business of the Government for all those now employed, but there must be intensive concentration on the problems of reduction in individual branches, intelligent transfer, study of available personnel, and strict limitations on new appointments until the existing staff is properly absorbed.

The readjustments in the Post Office and the Printing Bureau have resulted in considerable annual saving to the country. Is there any reason why similar adjustments cannot be instituted in other branches of the Service?

There are also big general questions such as overlapping branches, consolidation, and the centralization of special technical services. The solution of these problems is indicated in the annual report of the Commission, but it would be absolutely fatal to think that it can be satisfactorily tackled by any outside body, or with equity and efficiency in any hurried or half-hearted manner. The real fact is that Civil Service reform is, and always has been, a most complicated question, and can only be satisfactorily solved by big men in a big way.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Wasn't June supposed to be a summer month?

The Missouri visitor to Atlantic City who protested against the scantiness of the bathing suits must surely have been making much ado about nothing.

It looks as if the iceman was just a little premature in laughing at the coalman.

SIR WM. OSLER'S LIFE REVIEWED

Dr. Norman Gwynne Gave Halliday Lecture in Public Library Hall.

A GREAT TEACHER.

An interesting account of the life and work of Sir William Osler was presented in the hall of the Public Library last night by Dr. Norman Gwynne of Toronto who was the Halliday lecturer for the occasion. The audience numbered less than a hundred and contained a goodly sprinkling of medical doctors.

Dr. A. W. McPherson who occupied the chair and introduced the speaker, extended a welcome on behalf of the Medical Society, to those who had attended, coming as they did, he said, at a time when lectures were considered very dry and not nearly so interesting as the movies. He reviewed the character and ideals of Dr. Halliday to the perpetuation of whose memory the lectures were instituted.

Dr. Gwynne thanked the Peterborough Society for the opportunity of speaking on a subject which was very interesting to him as he had been household physician to Sir William Osler. Sir William had often said that it was difficult to estimate the benefit to a community of a well trained general practitioner and he recognized that most of the eminent physicians of his day achieved their success by way of the path of the general practitioner.

But Osler's success was due in the first place to his determination not to be a general practitioner. He was the first to recognize that the division and dividing line had come and that the great teachers had to forego general work and confine himself to hospital work and to study.

Life In England.

In discussing the life of Osler there was a temptation to put stress on his life and work in England but in reality this period was to a large extent one of retiral from active work. Oxford was for him a place where he assorted experience to be given later to the world.

Few realized the sharp change in his career when he went from Baltimore to the small hospital of not more than 150 beds in Oxford. In a few years he figured on the stage of English national life. Mr. H. A. L. Fisher, Minister of Education in the Lloyd George Coalition government, had borne testimony to the enduring testimony of Osler's contribution to medical history.

Osler came into conflict with the Royal College of Physicians at one time when his name was used without warrant. On this occasion, he made a dignified protest against the action of the College which had merely reprimanded him instead of coming to his defence.

Sir William Osler was the first physician to be appointed chairman of the British Classical Association—an appointment which was in itself a tribute to his extensve classical knowledge.

The speaker said it was difficult to form an adequate idea of his medical services during the war. He was invariably a peacemaker in times of friction between the military and civilian authorities. The War Office listened to him more attentively than to any other physician when medical matters were concerned.

If a teacher could be judged by his students said Gwynne, Osler was the best of teachers of medicine. In 14 schools in the American continent the influence of Osler was paramount and his ideal permeated over half the medical schools. For an explanation of the apotheosis of Osler by doctors something more than mere sentimental effervescence was required. To medical men he was always a kindly man, one inspired to an almost uncanny degree.

When the necessity arose, however, he could speak very candidly. For example he publicy protested against the appointment of a secretary, giving as his reason, the sheer incompetence of the suggested nominee. On another occasion he told the president of the Red Cross that she was a burden on the bank of progress.

Seeking an explanation of Osler's extraordinary ability, the speaker dwelt on his heritage from his parents. Osler's father, said Dr. Gwynne, was an intellectual giant while his mother was a dark imaginative Celt who passed on to him some of the qualities of seer and diviner with which he was endowed. Brought up in a country parsonage, he was trained in the qualities of self-denial, responsibility and the realization that he was indeed his brother's keeper. He was also favored by being placed in the care of two remarkable teachers.

In his early days he realized that he could not reach his highest efficiency as a general practitioner. He told his students that the general practitioner spent about 60 per cent of his time in getting about and in listening to petty uninteresting complaints. Like many others, he was considered a visionary at first. Much of his contribution to progress arose from his extraordinary ability to think straight, clear, and away from the ordinary channels of ordinary medical thought.

Some interesting reminiscences of Osler's forbears and pictures of different phases of his life concluded the lecture.

DOG CATCHER STARTS WORK

Has Already Five Dogs in the Pound—One Very Vicious.

HELD 48 HOURS.

Mark Pengilly, who has been appointed official dog catcher, has taken up his duties and yesterday had no less than five dogs—two hounds, two collies and a fox terrier—in the pound. One of the collies is a particularly vicious specimen, which knocked over a child yesterday and was picked up after an attack on a team of horses one of which bled copiously after being bitten.

Dogs are kept in the pound for forty-eight hours after which they are liable to be destroyed by the police. For every dog thus despatched, the catcher is paid $1 by the city. A similar sum is paid by the owner of any dog which is picked up and is reclaimed. This money also forms part of the catcher's renumeration.

A fine hound bearing a Norwood tag has been kept in the pound since last Monday.

WIND AND VIOLENT RAIN STORM FORCE FIFTY FAMILIES TO FLEE

Claims Seven Lives and Causes Damage Estimated at Half a Million Dollars—Five Members of Family Are Drowned.

APPROXIMATELY SIX INCHES OF RAIN.

PAWHUSKA, Okla., June 4. — High waters, lightning and wind accompanying a violent rainstorm in Osage and Creek Counties yesterday claimed seven lives and caused damage estimated at between $300,000 and $500,000.

Five members of the family of F. L. Blocker, an itinerant salesman, were drowned by the sudden rise of a creek near Hominy, Okla., when a wall of water washed away the approach to a bridge and engulfed them.

Albert L. Addams, 25, employee of a power company, was killed by a bolt of lightning near Drumright, Okla., and Harlin Emerson, 32, an oil worker in Osage County, lost his life when he came in contact with a power wire that had been blown down.

Service on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway was halted in Osage County yesterday by washouts near Hominy. Approximately 6 inches of rain fell in that vicinity. fifty families were forced to flee from their homes in the creek bottom.

BLIND ATTORNEY WALKS STREETS AWAITING SUPPOSED KIDNAPPERS OF WOODSTOCK WOMAN PREACHER

Hunt in Vain For Former Radio Operator at Mrs. McPherson's Temple.

MYSTERIOUS NOTE.

Mother of Victim Leaves on Hurried Auto Trip For Secret Destination.

LOS ANGELES, June 4 (Canadian Press).—The tangled skein of inquiry into the death or disappearance of Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, who dropped from sight at the Santa Monica-Venice Beach May 18, yesterday led investigators to three widely separated points on the California coast, exclusive of Los Angeles, where the hunt started.

At Long Beach, a blind attorney, R. A. McKinley, walked the streets awaiting a tap on the shoulder which would tell him that the supposed kidnappers of the woman preacher and self-proclaimed healer had come back for a second interview.

McKinley reported Tuesday to the district attorney that two men had accosted him on the street, told him they could produce Mrs. McPherson, and demanded $25,000 for so doing, of which they promised McKinley $5,000 for opening the negotiations.

Mrs. McPherson's mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, gave McKinley four test questions to transmit to the mysterious pair to be answered by their prisoner, if Mrs. McPherson really was held by them, but so far they have failed to come back.

At San Francisco, Captain Herman Cline, chief of detectives of the Los Angeles police force, hunted in vain for Kenneth G. Ormiston, former radio operator at Mrs. McPherson's headquarters, Angelus Temple here, and close friend of the missing or drowned woman. Cline's assistants had Ormiston in their presence at the beach a few days ago and put him through a casual interrogation, then let him go. Since that time he has been reported flitting up and down the coast in a blue coupe, sometimes with a woman companion, sometimes alone. Cline wants to question Ormiston again.

Ormiston's wife, Ruth, before she returned to Australia several months ago with her father, F. A. Peters, of Sydney, threatened to sue him for divorce and name Mrs. McPherson as co-respondent. Friends of Mrs. Ormiston said yesterday that she intends to return to California to open the divorce action next January.

Mrs. Kennedy, accompanied by the missing evangelist's 11-year-old son, Rolf, and a corps of searchers, also hunted the coast at the foot of the Palos Verdes hills, south of here, in a fruitless search for Mrs. McPherson's body yesterday. The trail ended at the Santa Monica-Venice Beach, where Rolf gazed for the first time on the stretch of water

PRESBYTERIANS HOLD MISSION DAY AT ASSEMBLY

Even Under Most Trying Conditions Men Have Appeared, Says Speaker.

ADVISES CAUTION.

N. H. McGillivray Says Old Church Was Over Governed and Over Officered.

MONTREAL, Que., June 4 (Canadian Press)—Yesterday was "Missions Day" at the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, now in session at the Knox Crescent Church here. Reports on home and foreign missions, women's missionary society, and on missionary and deaconess training were heard.

A rented house on Huron street, Toronto, has been taken for the training of deaconesses, C. S. McDonald, Brampton, Ont., reported. Women continually would take a greater part in both home and foreign work and it was necessary that there should be a home to train the young recruits.

Dr. Banks Nelson, Hamilton, was gratified to know a new deaconess house was under way and told that in Hamilton a recognition service had recently been held for the first deaconess appointed by the Presbyterian Church since its division from the uniting body.

Dr. Andrew S. Grant told of how an original shortage of ministers had been coped with. There had been no failure to deliver the message of the gospel to all sections of the church. Under the most trying circumstances, he said, men appeared, and it had never been necessary to rfuse an appeal for a preacher. The Presbyterian Church, he declared, had as high an average of men occupying pulpits as before union.

"We have the largest home mission field in Canada relative to our present strength that we ever had," Dr. Grant said in another place. He believed it would soon be possible to settle all congregations who could support them with ministers. The church, too, had met all its budget requirements and could meet all demand at home and abroad.

The question of assistance to struggling groups who had lost their churches had not yet been solved but a scheme was under way by which it was hoped to give assistance in the near future.

LLOYD GEORGE SAYS ATTITUDE JUSTIFIED

Won First Round in Conflict With Earl of Oxford.

LONDON, June 4 (Canadian Press).—Lloyd George apparently has had the advantage in the first round of his conflict with the Earl of Oxford and Asquith. As leader of the Liberal party, Lord Oxford and his supporters have taken Lloyd George, as chairman of the Parliamentary group of that party, to task for his attitude in refusing to participate in party councils when the general strike was in progress.

In accordance with a request of members of the party, Mr. Lloyd George summoned a meeting for yesterday. It was held in the House of Commons, and after three hours' discussion, was adjourned until Tuesday next.

Mr. Lloyd George himself made a long and impassioned speech, justifying his attitude, and a large majority of those who spoke supported him. There was a motion of confidence in Mr. Lloyd George before the meeting, and it was clear that if it was pressed to a division it would be carried by an overwhelming majority.

Accordingly no vote was taken, as Lord Oxford's partisans thought it would be desirable first to acquaint him with "the sense of the meeting," and the object of the adjournment until Tuesday is to hear his reply.

Sir John Simon, Walter Runciman and Sir Godfrey Collins, Chief Liberal Whip, an official communique states, will convey "the sense of the meeting" to Lord Oxford.

It was to Sir Godfrey Collins that Lord Oxford addressed his recent letter virtually reading Lloyd George out of official connection with the party.

Exactly what "the sense of the meeting" implies has not been divulged, for all the participants declare themselves vowed to silence, but it is freely asserted that the mission of the delegates to the Liberal leader is not a very congenial one.

About thirty-four members of the Parliamentary party attended, of whom twenty-two are believed to have been supporters of Lloyd George, who presided. The proceedings are described as exceedingly animated, those taking part in the debate becoming so absorbed that the calls of the division bells in the Commons were completely ignored.

There will be other meetings of the leaders of the Liberal party over the week-end, and the present intention is to move a vote of confidence in Lord Oxford at a meeting of the National Liberal Federation to be held at Weston - Supermare within a few days.

MOUNTED POLICE SEARCH FOR MAN

Woman's Body Found Clad Only in Flannel Night Gown.

SEARCH FORESTS.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 4. (Canadian Press).—Canada's famous Royal Mounted Police joined yesterday in what has now become an international search for Lewis J. Ring, of Minneapolis, sought in connected with his wife's death.

They were enlisted in the hunt when the county officials learned that a man identified as Ring had either penetrated or skirted the north-west angle country of Minnesota and had slipped across the border while posses of rangers, woodsmen and settlers hunted through the forest fastness for him.

The Mounted Police got on the trail at Kenora, Ont., about 100 miles east of Winnipeg. Their search will extend westward through Winnipeg.

Minneapolis, pursuing their investigations through International Falls, announced a Thief River Falls man had identified a picture of Lewis J. Ring, Minneapolis man, wanted for murder, as the man who boarded a train at Thief River Falls on May 28.

The Minneapolis authorities immediately wired all Customs officials at Noyes and Emerson on the border, as well as Winnipeg, Man., to be on the lookout for the man.

Mrs. Ring's body was found in Lake Pepin, April 23, clad only in a flannel nightgown.

All the water in which vegetables are cooked should be saved to use in gravies, soups and sauces. They contain the minerals that are invaluable to health and are boiled out during the process of cooking.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., June 4 (Canadian Press).—Two men, one near death from 12 knife wounds, and the other with a foot and one hand in bandages, were found lying on a blanket on the lawn of the Park Emergency Hospital yesterday.

Both men were conscious, both gave fictitious addresses and neither of them would talk to the police. The man with the knife wounds was rushed to the operating table in an effort to save his life. The other, whose wounds were properly attended to, was taken to the police station for questioning.

SHIELDS FORCES GET BAD DEFEAT

Motion of Censure To McMaster Governors Is Voted Down.

BY TORONTO BAPTISTS.

TORONTO, June 4.—(Canadian Press).—A decisive defeat for the forces led by Dr. T. T. Shields in the controversy over the administration of McMaster University Baptist Theological College, was registered yesterday by the 275 degelates to the convention of the Association of Toronto Baptist churches in session here. Dr. Shields had moved a resolution of commendation of Prof. P. S. Campbell, coupling with it an expression of censure upon the governors of McMaster University for having superannuated Dr. Campbell. The Shields' motion was defeated by 188 to 108.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS

"Did you 'lay off'?" asked Mr. Stevens.

"No, I walked away," replied Mr. Kellert, while the committee roared with laughter.

D. F. Maranville, customs officer of Beebe, testified that he had never seen any large scale smuggling and that he had never caught any of the manufacturers of the town smuggling.

The witness had built an eight-tube radio set for Mr. Turner of the Snag Proof Company for $120.

Some Very Bad Language

A. F. Holmes, of the customs service at Rock Island, who was in charge of keeping a record of the automobiles, said that there was nothing to prevent truckers from using back roads. At night, there was only one man to cover the four or five back roads of the district. Under examination, the witness told of having gone to the Jenkins Overall Company in the performance of his duty, as he had reason to believe that a barrel of buttons had been shipped to the company from Derby Line, Vermont. Jenkins had used "Some very bold language" and said that he was a strong Liberal and if the customs men wanted their jobs they would let the company alone. Mr. Holmes said he had not insisted on a search but had reported the matter to his sub-collector.

A. Laing, sales tax staff, Montreal, was recalled. In the fall of 1914, he and two other officers had proceeded to Rock Island to make an inspection of the books of manufacturing companies there. Some twenty-two odd firms had been inspected "insofar as records were available." Records, said Mr. Laing, had been found to be "incomplete."

"Would it be unfair to say that these records were deficient, especially in such records as would interest the revenue of Canada," asked Mr. Calder.

"It would appear that way," was the reply.

Instructed to Lay Off

Mr. Laing stated that while at Rock Island he had received instructions in a letter from R. Bisaillon to "lay off" the books of the Snag Proof Overall Company, of which Mr. Turner was president. He produced this letter, dated December 12, 1924. Mr. Calder commented, after reading the communication, that he would construe it as an order to "lay off" an inspection.

M. A. Sawyer, customs officer, freight shed, Rock Island, was then called.

Mr. Calder read from a Mounted Police report, which stated that Sawyer had called at the office of the Jenkins Company the night the auditors started to work on the records in the freight sheds and shortly before the records were stolen.

Mr. Sawyer admitted this, but said that it had nothing to do with customs matter; he had forgotten what he talked to Mr. Jenkins about that nigh. In his evidence, Mr. Sawyer also stated that Seguin, who owned the trucks which brought goods across the border, had only been seen in Rock Island one day since his name had been mentioned in the committee.

Admits Smuggling

L. P. House, president of the B. B. Glove Company, was called. The company building and office was destroyed by fire in April and only the records in the fire proof safe had been available to the auditors. These were incomplete and only went back as far as September, 1925. Mr. House admitted having paid a fine of $1,112 for smuggling in 1924.

"You were just testing the process," suggested Mr. Calder.

"Well, Yes," replied the witness, who added that "nothing has been smuggled since except one or two things of which there was a record."

F. W. Cowan, health department, Ottawa, formerly with the customs department, said he had been transferred from Rock Island to another point in 1914 "at his own request." He and other customs officers there had been "active" in customs matters; and the revenue had been increased considerably on goods entering Canada at that place. He was a stranger also at Rock Island; and as a married man asked to be transferred to another point.

Mr. Cowan said that even children were disinclined to give information which would assist customs officers. The situation at Rock Island was unique, jewellery stores and the like being located right on the boundary line.

"It is a pity there is not a bar on the line," interjected Mr. Calder.

"There is," promptly replied Mr. Cowan, while members of the committee laughed.

W. V. Poaps, president of J. B. Goodhue Co. Rock Island, was the next witness. Mr. Calder read a report made by an inspector, to the effect that the books of this company had been inspected and found to be complete. All sales tax had been paid by this concern, the report stated.

Mr. Poaps said his firm had never smuggled in goods for the purposes of trade, during his connection with it. He wished to say that he had found the people at Rock Island "The most decent class of people" with whom he had ever lived. With respect to smuggling there, he thought this could be stopped by more adequate measures being taken. He believed that some of the smuggling had ben done for "self protection" against those who were smuggling. If smuggling were stopped, all firms would be placed on an equal basis.

"I think it is a relief to have one man come here that there is not a case of smuggling against," commented Mr Stevens.

Mr. P. M. Poaps was promptly discharged; W. V. Poaps, secretary of the company, was informed that his evidence would be unnecessary.

Records Unreliable

The two Gilmore Brothers went on the witness stand together. They own the firm of James A. Gilmore Overall Manufacturers. The committee auditors reported that the books of the company were incomplete and the records unreliable.

W. J. Gilmore said that after Mr. Bisaillon had inspected the books of the firm in 1924 he had said that he had no further use for them and they were destroyed. In 1924, $910 had been paid as a fine for smuggling.

"At that time you were smuggling," said Mr. Calder.

"Yes," prior to the war when the father of the witnesses had owned the business, other fines had been paid.

Questions were pressed by Mr. Calder regarding a bank account which the company was supposed to have had in Derby Line, Vermont, but the witnesses declined to commit themselves.

"Isn't it a fact that you had that American bank account in order to conceal payments to American firms?"

"I can't say," was the only reply which Mr. Calder could get from W. J. Gilmore.

Contempt of Committee

"This is contempt of the committee," said the counsel. "leave the witnesses in the committee's hands." When the committee rose at six o'clock the chairman said that the witnesses would be given until the evening sitting to reconsider their attitude.

R. L. Calder, committee counsel, said that the Gilmore Brothers who were reluctant to testify at the afternoon sitting, had made certain statements to him during the dinner recess, regarding conditions on the other side of the border. If these statements were true, said counsel, there was reason for withholding evidence at this time. He suggested that the Gilmores be given an opportunity over the week-end to consult with counsel and the auditors, and see what information they had to give.

This was agreed to. C. W. Bell of West Hamilton, suggested the two witnesses be compelled to give full information as to the radio parts they had imported. Those they had paid duty on and those they had not.

H. S. Pocock of Beebe explained the destruction of certain books of the Perfecto Manufacturing Co. He had paid sales tax, in good faith, for months on a basis which proved to be incorrect.

The government officials closely checked his books and assessed him with a certain sum. It was pointed out to him by a friend that he was foolish to keep these old records. Without them the government could not have checked up so closely, so he destroyed the books. For the same reason he had formerly kept his bank account on the United States side, and he did not feel that he could give details of this account.

Pressed for details witness admitted that he could not say he had smuggled lately. It was pretty hard, he said, for anybody who lived on the border to say that. Mr. Calder said he was referring not to an occasional necktie but to smuggling on a commercial scale. Witness declined to give details of his banking in the United States (Orleans Trust Co.) This account had been closed out and he could not say what were the details. Until he could examine the bank books he would not even pledge himself to produce the details.

Mr. Calder asked if it was not true that the United States account was used to pay for goods purchased in the United States and not entered through Canadian customs.

"Why were all these accounts kept on the American side of the line?" demanded counsel.

"For a purpose, I suppose."

"Don't play with us," warned Hon. H. H. Stevens.

Mr. Calder suggested that if the witness really meant that he had stopped smuggling in 1924, when a seizure had been followed by a heavy fine, he ought not to have any reluctance to reveal the details of his bank account since that time. If he persisted in his refusal he would walk out of the committee room a man under grave suspicion of having continued smuggling. Witness continued counsel, had permitted the auditors to think that the Orleans Trust Account had been closed out long ago. Now he said that he had put through entries in that account this year. If there was some good and quite personal reason why he could not discuss his banking affairs, he could give it to the committee. If there was not not, why not give the evidence asked for." The witness hesitated for a long time.

Isn't it a fact that you continued smuggling until the amendment to the Customs Act made smuggling punishable by imprisonment?" Mr. Calder asked the witness.

Mr. Pocock said that he might have smuggled before the amendment was passed.

Used Motor Car.

He was asked how he conducted his smuggling. He replied that it was done in different ways. He used a motor car sometimes.

"Will you furnish the auditors with the record of your Orleans Trust account?" asked Mr. Calder.

"I will," replied the witness.

"Complete records?"

"Yes."

"Including deposit slips?"

The witness said that he had no deposit slips.

Mr. Stevens said that he could get them from the bank. He asked Mr. Calder to make it clear to the witness that he must furnish the committee with a genuine record of the account.

"You understand that you are in contempt of this committee if you do not do that?" queried Mr. Calder.

"Yes," was the reply.

It was arranged that the auditor would send a man down to Beebe to-day to obtain the records so that they could be placed before the committee on Monday. In the meantime, Mr. Pocock was asked to see the auditors. He will be called when the records are available.

in which his mother's secretary, Miss Emma Schaeffer, says the evangelist was drowned May 18.

The boy, wearing his first long trousers, which were his mother's last gift to him, cried as his eyes swept the Santa Monica surf.

Sheriff's officers combed Bouquet Canyon, north-east of here, Thursday morning in search of a clue which would solve the meaning of a scribbled note found on a street corner Thursday indicating that the writer was held prisoner in the vicinity. There was nothing in the note to directly connect it with Mrs. McPherson.

The note was written in a woman's handwriting and shaky, according to the officers, who said that it probably had been written in a moving automobile and thrown on the road.

An attempt to identify the handwriting as that of Mrs. McPherson failed when officers learned that Mrs. Kennedy, mother of the woman evangelist, had left early Thursday morning with Miss Emma Schaffer, secretary, on a hurried auto trip, the destination of which was kept secret.

The finding of the note and the subsequent search by the sheriff's men followed the report Wednesday night of a possible kidnapping plot and a demand for the $25,000 reward offered by Mrs. Kennedy for the safe return of her daughter.

PRESBYTERIANS HOLD MISSION

Dr. Banks Nelson rose to point out that the church was asking in its budget for $1,300,000 from 150,000 people, and compared this favorably with the effort of other denominations with larger congregations.

Mrs. L. H. Moore of North Sydney and Halifax, president of the Eastern division of the Women's Missionary Society, reported that her organization was in good financial standing to cope with the requirements of work at home and abroad when the Presbyterian church was alloted its share of the foreign mission field. Never was the church in such good condition as today in regard to home missions, she said.

The women of the Eastern division hoped to help in the building of churches for minority groups. They were prepared to provide bursaries where necessary to send girls to the Toronto Deaconess Training School.

Mrs. Moore stressed the need of port worker at Halifax, which work had been taken over by Miss Lena Fraser, of Hopewell, N.S. Recently the Baltic had landed one hundred and fifty Presbyterians at Halifax who were received by Miss Fraser and given information concerning the church. Their names would be forwarded to the northwest whence they were going. It was necessary that incoming people be met so that they might not have any wrong impression concerning the status of the Presbyterian body in Canada.

The Women's Missionary oSciety had given one thousand dollars to the Maritime home in Truro, and Mrs. Moore told of the work being carried on by that institution. They were also interested in the rescue home in Sydney.

N. H. McGillivray, chairman of the General Boaard of Missions, spoke on foreign missions. The old church, he said, had been over-governed, over-colleged, and the present situation in the Presbyterian church was largely the result of officialdom. Enough officers were needed but not too many and he advised caution in appointments. He asked that the general board carry on for another yar as constituted with the exception that a committee be appointed examine into the whole mission situation and that he be replaced as chairman for reasons of health.

HORSE TRADE ENDS IN COURT

Farmer Fined For Cruelty To Animal He Got From Gypsies.

AT WARKWORTH.

WARKWORTH, June 4.—As a lesson from a "horse trade" with a band of gypsies which has cost him $70.60 and the demerit of a police court mark against him, Harold Sheppard, 26, a farmer near Codrington has learned the significance of that ancient axiom of barter "let the buyer beware."

Before County Magistrate Floyd of Cobourg here on Thursday, Sheppard pleaded guilty to a charge of cruelty to the horse, which he was alleged to have neglected, and was fined $25 and costs, the total amounting to $45.60. Added to that was the $25 he paid for the horse he be traded to the gypsies, which sum vanished from his meagre resources when he had to kill the suffering animal he got in the transaction.

"I have only $22," said Sheppard who has a wife, three children and a rented farm.

Magistrate Floyd read the statute which fixed the penalty at not more than $50 or three months in jail.

"So you see I could fine you $50" said His Worship, several times expressing his surprise at the young farmer's dealing with gypsies and his subsequent neglect.

"When can you get the rest of the money," asked the Magistrate after imposing a fine of $25 and tacking on the costs.

"I don't know," Sheppard answered. "It might be a month or a week."

"Well, I'll give you until June 26 to pay the balance, and if you fail you are liable to three months, and there's no fun in that", remarked Colonel Floyd.

So Sheppard parted with his $22, seemingly the last of his cash, and went back to his family and his rented farm.

A week ago last Saturday he fell in with the gypsies, and had their horse just a week. He drove to Warkworth with it, but it became so lame he left it at his grandfather's, so he said, expecting it would receive attention. The agony of the animal three days later so aroused some persons that they called the police.

"I don't know how he ever got here with it,' said Dr. F. W. Barrett, V.S., of Warkworth. "Gangerene had got into both feet and one of them was almost rotted of. It must have run on three legs.'

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH TO REACH PRE-UNION STRENGTH IN 10 YEARS

Western Clergyman Prophesies Great Growth on Prairies.

INCREASE IN YEAR.

Number of Congregations Increases in Four Western Provinces.

MONTREAL, June 4 (Canadian Press).—"In ten years time the Presbyterian Church in Canada will be back to pre-Union strength, and the greatest percentage of that growth will be west of the Great Lakes," Rev. W. Brown, Saskatoon, prophesied before the General Assembly here last night. It had been forecast, he said, that only twenty-four congregations would be left to the Presbyterians in Western Canada after the Union, but to-day there were instead two hundred and forty-two. British Columbia was left at Union with eighteen remaining churches, and now there are forty-four, while preaching stations had risen from twenty-two to sixty-seven. Alberta had increased twenty-eight congregations to forty-three, in addition to eighty preaching stations. Saskatchewan had grown from six to thirty-six, with sixty-two preaching points, while Manitoba, with sixteen, had doubled to thirty-two.

Missions continued to dominate the Assembly last night. Mrs. D. Strachan, Toronto, presented some details of the work of the Women's Missionary Society. At the Union the society had been left without work to do, and it had to seek fields for activity. This it had found, and she told of extensive work among the Chinese in British Columbia, which work was being increased. In Alberta an outpost hospital had been opened 360 miles from Edmonton, with a nurse in charge.

CIRCUS COMES HERE JUNE 25

Ringling Bros.-Barnum and Bailey Show Coming To City.

NO PARADE.

Oh Jim-min-ee! The circus is coming!

The biggest circus that mortal eyes have ever gazed upon is on its way to Peterborough. It's the combined Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Greatest Show on Earth that is being advertised to exhibit here both afternoon and night on Friday, June 25.

Fifty bill-posters, lithographers and bannermen armed with tons of eye-snaring posters are making the fact known for miles around to-day. Needless to say, the announcement is meeting with the thorough approval of youngsters of all ages and both sexes, and from one to another the good news wings its way.

The first of the three publicity cars devoted to the extensive billing of the vast amusement institution arrived this morning, and before noon vivid pictorial promises of what may be seen in actuality under the "big top" were emblazoned from windows, walls and billboards throughout this territory.

The advance press representative states that the mammoth program presented by the circus this season is in every respect bigger than anything in gigantic entertainment heretofore witnessed. Such amazing features—as five massive wooden rings of imposing displays and six elevated stages of arenic wonders are now presented for the first time in history. Three hundred and fifty performing horses, one act alone bringing into superb action 200 dancing, marching thoroughbreds are offered in a dazzlingly beautiful "Equine Ballet."

The "great tented colossus" is now travelling on one hundred double-length railroad cars specially designed to carry more than 1,600 people, including 800 of the greatest men and women stars ever assembled. Entire families and troupes of famous performers are presented in acts and features of unprecedented scope and newness. These extend over the entire length of the huge 700-foot long main tent, frequently there being no less than eleven groups in action simultaneously.

Five herds of performing giant and baby elephants appear in a single display.

One hundred of "the funniest clowns on earth" will bring carloads of laughter for the kiddies and grown-ups. The enlarged menagerie of more than one thousand perfect specimens of rare wild animals includes a recently imported tiger, said by naturalists to be the largest and handsomest ever exhibited.

MURRAY STREET SUNDAY SCHOOL PLAN IS STUDIED

Delegation Coming From St. Catharines Next Sunday.

MANY INQUIRIES.

Theological Class Advised By Professor To Study System.

Murray street Baptist church has been advised that a delegation from the Queen street Baptist church St. Catharines, will visit Peterborough on Sunday next to study at first hand the unified church and Sunday school service which has been adopted with such signal success in the Murray street church.

The scheme has attracted widespread attention in the Baptist and other denominations, the Baptist Year Book describing and commending the arrangement as the "Peterborough plan of a unified Sunday school."

Already inquiries regarding the system have come from places as far apart as Owen Sound and Charlottetown, P.E.I., a school and church in the latter town having followed the example of the Peterborough church and Sunday school. The plan has also been adopted in three other smaller centres.

One of the Professors in Victoria College, Toronto, has advised his Theological Class to study the system and has intimated his intention of visiting the Murray street church to see the working out of the experiment.

Since the adoption of the scheme Murray street church has been visited on several occasions by parties from other churches interested in modern methods of Sunday School work.

SITUATION IN EGYPT BETTER

Zaghloul's Decision Not To Be Premier Eases Tension.

STRONG PRESSURE.

LONDON, June 4.— (Canadian Press.)— Former Premier Zaghloul Pasha, the Egyptian National leader, has decided not to form a government in Egypt himself and this announcement from Cairo considerably relieves the tension felt in Government quarters here. An extremely grave view of the Egyptian political situation has been taken since Zaghloul's victory in the recent elections. The Nationalist leader's decision is interpreted here as a direct result of strong pressure which the British government brought to bear on him through Lord Lloyd, High Commissioner in Egypt. The pressure was backed by the despatch of a battleship to Egypt and the announcement that others are held in readiness to follow at a moment's notice.

THREATEN MAN WITH SENTENCE TO HOUSE TOWER

S. B. Telford Refused To Obey Orders of Customs Probe Committee.

ARRESTED TO-DAY.

Customs Officer Feared That He Would Try To Escape.

OTTAWA, June 4 (Canadian Press).—For the first time in many years, a Canadian was threatened last night with imprisonment in the tower of Parliament for disobedience of an order of Parliament.

S. B. Telford, of Rock Island, Quebec, who owns a warehouse just across the international border in Derby Line, Vermont, refused to open this warehouse to the inspection of accountants representing the Federal customs probe committee, on the ground that the warehouse was on foreign territory. He was taking this stand on the advice of his attorney, he said. Because the customs committee believed that he had been misled by his attorney in the United States, Chairman Paul Mercier gave Mr. Telford until to-day to get fresh advice from his counsel.

Arrested Today

Telford, who is the proprietor of Telford Brothers, bathrobe and pyjama manufacturers of Rock Island, Quebec, was arrested in his room at the Chateau Laurier, at 1.45 this morning on a charge of having smuggled goods.

The complaint was signed by James E. Knox, of Montreal, a special customs officer who, when asked for the reason for the move, in view of the fact that the customs committee had given Telford until 10.30 this morning to reply to questions, said, "I have reasons to believe he was going to beat it."

Telford was in his pyjamas when the officers arrived. He was taken to the city cells and was arraigned today before Magistrate Hopewell on a charge of harboring and concealing smuggled goods, and remanded one day. Officer Knox of the customs department, who laid the charge, intimated that other charges would be laid and that a change of venue, to Montreal would be sought.

Others Fail to Answer

T. O. Chapman, C. R. Jenkins, C. J. Marois, A. G. Moore and A. J. Bissonette, five Rock Island merchants, whose names were called when the customs probe was resumed today, failed to answer. They will be served with summonses by Royal Mounted Police.

JUDGE M'GLADE ADDRESSES CLUB

Tells Kiwanians All True Service Is Founded on Christianity.

INSPIRING SPEECH.

His Honor Judge McGlade of Cobourg was the speaker today at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis club in the Empress Hotel The speaker was introduced by Kiwanian Joseph Wearing.

The fact that he had promised to speak at very short notice, said the speaker, reminded him of an incident in his college days. He was one of a number of students who took part in a debate in which none of them had covered themselves with glory. The principal of the college was, rightly, very angry and said: "The man who undertakes to make a speech in public without adequate preparation is a fool." He had never before felt the force of these words as he did now (Laughter). He often found that it was difficult to start speaking and when started he sometimes found difficulty in stopping.

The Kiwanis organization was one of service. For such clubs, he had nothing but the profoundest admiration. The aims and objects that brought men of these clubs together was one of the worthiest that could be thought of.

But he wanted to draw their attention to the fact that their society and all kindred societies had their root and branch in the Christian religion. Each and every one of them were children of the Christian church. In this respect, he spoke of the churches as a whole. He regretted, and he believed they all regretted, the differences in doctrine that separated the various sections of the Christian church, but these difficulties were all capable of solution and were not nearly so formidable as they would like to make them. They were all followers of the same Christ, bound by the same commandments, and were made by the same Creator. No man could be a good Kiwanian, a good Rotarian, a good Knight of Columbus, or even a good loyal citizen of his country unless he was at the same time a true and loyal member of the church into which he was born. If men were true and good members of the church they would be better members of the society to which they belonged. If in Canada they were to build a citizenship of which they could be proud, men would have to give allegiance to the principles of Christ and the church. God's greatest commandment was Love. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, and with all thy mind," and to this was added "Love thy neigbor as thyself for love of God."

In Canada and in a greater degree in the country to the south, there was a tendency towards too much organization, and as a consequence the Government was overlooked. Every Government was entitled to have from its citizens, intelligent cooperation and to see intelligent interest taken in its affairs. This Canada was their country. It would be a great country if its men would all get behind it in the march forward of civilization. It was rich and would be infinitely richer in the future. But there were other things in this world besides material goods. He urged them to remember the question. "What shall it profit a man if he should gain the whole world and lose his own soul" He concluded by calling upon his hearers to take hold of religion and to impress it on their lives—the best of helping Canada on the march of progress.

The thanks of the club were tendered Judge McGlade by E. H. D Hall, honorary member of the club. Kiwanian J. Hart of Orillia, a former member of the Ontario Legislative Assembly, was called upon and expressed his appreciation of Judge McGlade's address.

Kiwanian J. J. Turner, on behalf of the club, congratulated Kiwanian F. C. Neal on his election by the Medical Alumni of Toronto University as president of the association.

The booster for the day was Carl Webber. The prize-winners were I. McNabb and J. R. Marshall.

FINE SHOWING MADE BY CADETS AT INSPECTION

Local Collegiate Cadets Are Reviewed By Colonel Hill.

APPEARANCE GOOD.

Officers and Sergeants Are Commended By Inspecting Ofifcer.

The annual inspection of the Collegiate cadet corps took place this morning in Central Park before Colonel Hill of Ottawa, who is head of the cadet movement in Canada, and Captain Trudeau of Kingston. These two officers were accompanied on their tour of inspection by Colonel Miller and Lieut.-Col. W. G. Hall.

A splendid showing was made by the 205 boys on parade, everyone of whom was in uniform and presented a smart and military like appearance. The marching was good, especially that of the smaller cadets, who seemed to be not so conscious of themselves as the older cadets. After the general salute and march past a little company drill was gone through under the Company commander, Cadet Major Bookout. Then followed extended order drill put on by platoons one and three under the command of Cadet Lieutenants Amys and Ecobichon. Number two platoon, which was commanded by Platoon Sergeant Doughty, owing to the illness of Cadet Lieutenant Sutton, went through several marching exercises. Sergt. Doughty deserves great praise for the way he handed the cadets as he had had very little experience and was not expecting to take command. Number four platoon under the command of Cadet Lieutenant Jackson, who also won the medal for being the best platoon commander, and Cadet Sergeant Jack Hall then gave a fine showing of marching and different military formations.

At the end of the inspection Colonel Hill addressed the corps and congratulated it on its splendid showing. Colonel Hill said that there were 120,000 cadets in Canada going through the same kind of training and that this cadet movement was receiving the whole hearted support of the different departments of education. Last year there were 23,000 in the imperial challenge shield competition all over the empire and the first six places were taken by cadets from Canada and in the first twenty-five teams there were nineteen Canadian cadet teams. There were also more medals won by the Canadian cadets last year than won by cadets from all over the rest of the empire. Colonel Hill closed his remarks by asking the support of the Peterboro cadet corps in these rifle shooting contests. He then gave the medals; the most efficient platoon commander, who was Cadet Lieutenant Jackson. The most efficient sergeant in number one platoon was Sergeant Richardson; in number two platoon, Sergeant Robinson; number three Sergeant Morrison and in number four Sergeant Hall.

E. Bruce Fowler, for the chairman of the Board of Education, then spoke a few words to the cadets congratulating the staff and all those who took part in the inspection on the splendid showing made. He said that the idea of cadet training was not desire to train boys for military purposes but to teach them the principles of co-operation and obedience to authority. He concluded by saying that the school board appreciated the showing made by the cadets and would grant them a half-holiday. The cadets were trained by Captain C. E. Jamison, O.M.S.T. Thomas and the following officers of the cadet corps:

Company Commander, Cadet Major Bookhout.

2nd in Command, Cadet Capt. Rye
Adjutant, Cadet Capt. Killaly.
Company Sergt. Major, Rishor.
Quartermaster, Cadet Capt. Hagerman.
Bandmaster, Cadet Lieut. A. Spencer.
Signalling Officer, Cadet Lieut. Murell.

The woodland scene which greeted the eyes of the audience, as they sat in the movie dark, was so inviting that it made every one want to stroll into it.

At length, into the scene came a man with a young lad, just out to see what they could see. They stopped beneath a big tree, and the lad pointed out for the man, a golden-winged woodpecker, or what is called a Flicker.

This Flicker was making a nesting hole in a dead branch. He was hanging on the under side, working in a most awkward position, pecking up into the limb just as an auto mechanic lies on his beck and works on the bottom of the car.

"What a fool of a bird!" said the man to the boy. "He must be dreaming he is hammering road tar off the bottom of his gas wagon. No bird with any brains would build a nesting hole upside down! He must be nutty."

The man seemed to be trying to talk to the bird, then the boy spoke to the man, and the words on the screen were: "No use telling him how to build his house, Dad, for he cannot understand you and me."

They went away and left Mr. Flicker flicking chips into the air on either side, in order to keep them from falling into his eyes or down his neck, so to speak.

Some reading on the screen announced that a couple of weeks went by, then the man and boy were shown at the tree again, taking a sly peek at the hole and scratching their heads in astonishment.

The front door of the Flicker home was from the under side upwards all right, but the hole curved inside and camera then took some close-ups, just as the boy and man saw it. That nesting hole was shaped just like a gourd with a curved neck. It went up from below, but turned and went down again inside, where it was enlarged and plenty big enough for a bird family. It was artistic, correctly placed, hard to find, rainproof, catproof and upright inside. The words that followed some talking by the man were these: "I guess that bird knows more about building houses than most human folks."

SECOND MAN DIES FROM AXE WOUNDS

Man Who Ran Amuck at Fishing Camp Faces Two Charges.

EDMONTON, June 4—(Canadian Press).—Magloire Carakonti, one of the men attacked with an axe on May 23 at a fishing camp, died Wednesday night and as a result Julien Gaucher, a half breed from Fish Lake, the alleged assailant, will face two charges of murder. The first to die of the five men wounded when Gaucher ran amuck, was Abraham Gaucher.

SOCIETY

Mr. T. A. Coughlin of Hastings returned home last night after attending the Druggists' convention in Toronto.

A delightful "June Fete," which took the form of a "White Elephant" bridge party and tea, was held in the studio at the Conservatory of Muisic yesterday afternoon, by the Women's Art Association. There was an attendance of nearly one hundred ladies, with twenty tables of bridge played and a number who dropping in later at the tea hour. Arrangements were in the capable hands of the president, Mrs. W. Blackwell and her assistants, and the ladies in charge were congratulated heartily on the success of the party which was one of the most pleasant of the functions arranged during the season by this society. A quantity of lovely flowers in the card and tea rooms added immensely to the attractive effect. Bowls of pink and red tulips, honeysuckle, narcissus, apple blossoms and bleeding hearts were used, with a profusion of pretty flowers in the tea room and on the table, where tea was poured by Mrs. R. Gliddon and Miss Cameron Edwards. Mrs. H. E. Connolly was convenor of tea room arrangements, assisted by Mrs. W. Sangster and the Misses M. McNulty, G. Glover, M. Masson, M. McCulloch and L. Tomkins. The "White Elephant" tables for the bridge tables were very appropriate and were the work of Mrs. B. L. Barns and Miss G. Glover. Assisting with the cards were the Misses M. Rush and G. Reinhardt. The prizes for bridge, two pretty pieces of black satin glass, in a comporte and specimen flower vase, were won by Mrs. J. H. Vernor and Mrs. Chas. D. Cook. The "White Elephants," which were wrapped in pastel-tinted tissue paper, and distributed from a frilly basket of green paper and artificial pink roses, excited much amusement among the winners. They ranged in choice from satin bags and glass vases to books and perfumes, and tiny little "Gods of Luck," with one fortunate young lady drawing a half dozen unbaked rusks, all ready for the oven. Among those who played bridge yesterday afternoon or dropped in later for tea, were noticed: Mrs R W Cormack, Mrs Jas McDonald, Mrs W C Neal, Mrs E Morrison, Mrs E F Howson, Mrs B L Barns, Mrs V Foster, Mrs E Latimer, Mrs Sills of Niagara Falls, Mrs J A Robinson, Mrs J Comstock, Mrs T McWilliams, Mrs N H Sutton Mrs Cecil Waite, Mrs J J Craig, Mrs R M Waddell, Mrs B B Gillespie, Mrs G Langley, Mrs J A Morgan, Mrs H M Yelland, Mrs T G Louden, Mrs Dormer of Lindsay, Mrs B Burns, Mrs J McNabb, Mrs E Shirley, Mrs A Wood, Mrs F C Webber, Mrs Chas Cook, Mrs J H Vernor, Mrs H W Dicken, Mrs A Mowat, Mrs J J Munns, of Pittsburgh, Pa., Mrs W H Meredith, Madame J A G Goulet, Mrs J E R Munro, Mrs Robt Harstone, Mrs T H Glover, Mrs A Harris, Mrs W R Widdess, Mrs F D Kerr, Mrs D N Carmichael, Mrs M H Park, Mrs J Marsh, Mrs N D Seaton, Mrs W T Holloway, Mrs P L Allison, Mrs G S Parlour, Mrs B Rose, Mrs Denmark, Mrs Caddy, Mrs A E Dixon, Mrs A Bentley, Mrs J W Meyers, Mrs F P McNulty, Mrs W Mackenzie, Mrs J P Finn, Mrs Douglas Fletcher, Mrs C E Jamieson, the Misses M Rush, G Reinhardt, E Murphy, O Johnston, E Scott, M Harstone, M Sullivan, G Sullivan, M Richardson, M Collins, B Latimer, Linden Hall, A Robinson, Ruby Cunningham, E Bolton, J Buck, P Faint, Mamie McCarthy, H Buller, M Drope, A Howson, D Davidson, G Glover, S A Tomkins, Laura Wilson, R Clegg, M Montgomery, H Henry, E Stubbs and C McCarthy.

GOLDEN WEDDING DAY CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. McMahon, of Cavan, Fifty Years Wed.

FRIENDS GATHER.

MILLBROOK, June 4.—A pleasant gathering was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McMahon, West Cavan, on Wednesday, June 2, at 4 p.m. when over one hundred guests, including children, grandchildren, other relatives, and friends, were present to celebrate with them the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding today.

Expectant of June sunshine and balmy air, arrangements had been made to hold the event on the lawn, a tent having been erected, tables placed in a location convenient to the house, a platform built, and flags used in a decorative scheme. Frequent showers, combined with an uncomfortably chilly atmosphere, made a change of plans imperative, and guests were welcomed at the house instead.

Over two hundred invitations had been issued and undoubtedly the number in attendance would have been largly augmented had not weather conditions proved so unfavorable.

As Mr. and Mrs. McMahon have eleven children, all married, with no break in the family circle, about forty grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren, a golden wedding celebration meant a real re-union and opportunity for social intercourse was taken advantage of to the fullest degree.

Suitable occasion having presented itself, Rev. Mr. Howard was asked to take the chair, and the "bride and groom" of fifty years were given seats of honor in the midst of the company. Preliminary remarks by the chairman, tinged with humor as is usual with Mr. Howard when time and place are in keeping, were followed by the presentation to Mr. and Mrs. McMahon of a purse of gold, two little grandchildren, Dorothy Cunningham and Wilma Armstrong, handing the silken bags to their grandparents, during the reading of the following address:

To Mr. and Mrs. Arthur MacMahon, Cavan.

Dear Friends,—Our gathering here tonight, to do you honor on reaching the fiftieth milestone in your life journey together, has been prompted by the sincere love and respect which your wide circle of relatives and friends are unanimous in according you.

Looking forward from the marriage altar to the years ahead, half a century would seem a long way to go, and the path of life a winding one with many an unexpected turn and happening. But looking back over the years you have journeyed in company, doubtless the span seems, after all, but a comparatively brief one, with much more of sunshine than of shadow marking the passing days.

Anniversaries of Time's Milestones, indicating progress, bringing to mind the happiness and satisfaction which has been yours in establishing a home together, winning for yourselves an honored name and place in the community, training your family, and increasing the circle of friends and acquaintances in whose hearts you have won a large measure of genuine regard and respect.

Your home has been noted for its spirits of generous hospitality and you, Mrs. McMahon, in times of sickness have repeatedly proved yourself an unselfish and capable helper. The way to have neighbors is to be neighborly, and the entire community can give ready testimony to the cheerful manner in which you have both lived up to this ideal.

The honor and genuine affection which your children delight in according you is tangible evidence of the careful and loving training which you gave in earlier years; and doubtless you find in them, and in your grandchildren, a treasure which far outweighs the time and toil expended upon them.

We could not let this happy occasion pass without in some way showing our affection and esteem, and we ask you to accept this purse of gold, as a token of the loving regard which we unite in according you.

Though you have travelled quite a distance on life's highway, it gives us a very real pleasure to join in wishing you many happy returns of the day."

Signed in behalf of your children, grandchildren, with other relatives and friends,

Mrs. J. W. Hamilton,
Mrs. Will Armstrong,
Mrs. David Armstrong,
Mrs. J. R. Reynolds.

Cavan, June 2, 1926.

A beautiful bouquet of roses, and a large box of bon-bons were additional gifts, Archie Reynolds, a grandson, presenting these as the reading of the formal address was concluded.

Both Mr. and Mrs. McMahon replied briefly expressing heartfelt gratitude and appreciation, and all joined in singing, "For they are jolly, good fellows," followed by three hearty cheers.

A recitation, "The Doctor's Story," by Ruby Cunningham, and an address by A. J. Fallis, M.P.P., concluded this part of the program and adjournment was made for refreshments, the daughters of the home, with some of the grandchildren, serving the guests.

A handsome three-story wedding-cake centred the dining-table the guests of honor having seats at the head. Married in early young manhood and womanhood, Mr. and Mrs. McMahon are still a comparatively young couple. Their wedding took place at Bethany, Rev. Mr. Burgess, then rector of the Anglican church, performing the ceremony.

Earlier in the evening a number of letters were read from friends, who while expressing regret at unavoidable absence, added their congratulations and hearty good wishes, with the assurance that in thought at least they were present at the gathering. All of their children were with them for the anniversary with the exception of the eldest and youngest sons, Messrs. Wesley and Cecil McMahon, whose home is at Beech Hill, Sask., and one daughter, Mrs. Delore Johnston, of St. Catharines.

Among those from outside points were: Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gray and daughter, Mrs. Carty, of Michigan; Mr. and Mrs. G. Cuningham, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Reynolds, and families, Mr. and Mrs. J. Killenbeck, Mr. and Mrs. Noah Gillies, Mrs. Reader, Mr. and Mrs. McLeod Gray of Peterborough; Mrs. McBrian, of Haliburton; Mr. and Mrs. H. McMahon, South Monaghan; Mr. and Mrs. R. Gray and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Melville Gray, of Pontypool: Mis Ruby Cunningham, Frazerville.

Reiterated congratulations and good wishes marked the departure of the guests as the happy gathering finally broke up.

United Ladies' Aid.

The June meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the United church was held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. W. Smith, the second vice-president, Mrs. J. McKnight, being in the chair.

Considering the unfavorable weather the attendance was good, and a number of important business items received attention.

The Aid feels it imperative to make a special effort each month to add to its funds until the expense incurred in the recent extensive alterations to the church auditorium is entirely met. For June, a sale of homemade baking was planned, the affair to be held on Saturday, the 12th inst., the space between Mr. Smith's house and place of business to be utilized for the occasion. A tent will be erected if the weather is fine, and if not Mrs. Smith kindly offered the use of her home for the sale.

Next month a garden party will be the special feature and committees were appointed to attend to all details in connection with this event. Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Fallis have generously invited the Aid to hold the lawn social at their home, Fallis Line.

The tea, and social evening held at the church in May netted over $30.00 clear, according to the report of the treasurer, Miss May Duncan. A number of those unable to attend the tea gave donations of cash in place of baking, or otherwise assisting. The hyacinths and daffodils which added much to the appearance of the tea tables, were the gift of Mrs. H. W. Johnston.

Mrs. R. H. Edmunds and Miss Duncan were mover and seconder of the vote of thanks to Mrs. Smith for her hospitality.

Streets Are Oiled.

The oiling of the streets of the village was completed the latter part of the week, F. King, of Lindsay, having the contract. The expense involved was $1,000, and over 6,000 gallons of oil were required. This meant that side streets had one application, the main thoroughfare, and particularly the business section, being more generously treated.

There is a possibility that another year Millbrook may have its main street paved. Hastings has a paving proposition on for this season, and Reeve Wood recently took the members of the council to meet with other municipal bodies in that town, the county and provincial superintendents being present for consultation. Fifty per cent of the cost of paving will be assumed by the county and province, the municipality to bear the remainder of the expense.

Our country! In her intercourse with other nations, may she always be in the right; but our country right or wrong. —Decatur.

HASTINGS COUNTY DISPLAY AT C.N.E.

Plans Drafted For Preparing Competitive Exhibit.

(By A Staff Reporter)

STIRLING, June 4.—Hastings county will be a competitor at the Toronto Exhibition this fall for the C.N.E. trophy won last year by Norfolk for the best county exhibit at the Exhibition. The other contestants were the counties of Welland, Lincoln, Grey, Wentworth and Peel.

Hastings is the first of the eastern counties to make a bid for the honor now held by Lincoln, and on Wednesday of this week plans were well advanced. The Hastings county advisory agricultural council, with Major R. Vanderwater chairman, has been sponsoring this effort with Mr. Ray Atkin, district representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, and with the financial support of the Hastings County Council. The plans already outlined call for an exhibit featuring cheese, butter, grain, alfalfa, fruit sheep, vegetables and minerals, with special emphasis on dairy products. Arrangements for the selection of the products that will represent the county's resources and work have been completed, and Major Vanderwater expects the Hastings display to be a strong contender for the championship trophy.

SHOWER FOR BRIDE.

Friends of Miss Hattie Barnard Bring Many Useful Gifts.

BAILIEBORO, June 4.— On Monday evening, May 31, about 100 guests gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Barnard, and presented a miscellaneous shower to their daughter Hattie, whose marriage takes place on June 8th.

The following address was read by Miss May Earle:

Dear Hattie:

It is with the utmost pleasure that we, the members of Bailieboro United church and community, have gathered here tonight to express the gratitude and best wishes that we owe to you, as church member and friend.

As organist and worker in our church you have proved yourself a devoted member, with the result that your work was most commendable. However, you may rest assured that we appreciated and felt grateful for your earnest efforts.

In your social and business life you have been to us all, a friend, and, as best of friends must part, we are parting with the sincere wish that our friendships will not be forgotten.

As a slight token of our love of you, we present to you, and hope you will accept this miscellaneous shower. We earnestly desire that every time these gifts are used they will remind you of your friends and well-wishers of Bailieboro.

And now, on the eve of your marriage, we extend our sincerest wishes for a life of health, happiness and prosperity.

Miss Barnard was taken completely by surprise, but in a few well chosen words, thanked her many friends for the beautiful and useful gifts, which will always remind her of her many Bailieboro friends.

After these few remarks, every one joined in singing, "For she's a jolly good fellow."

A dainty lunch was then served and the remainder of the evening was spent in music and dancing.

Among those from a distance who attended the shower were: Mr. and Mrs. Fred Staples, Misses Norma Ruth and Gwenyth, and Mr. Roy Staples, Cavan; Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Ball and Miss Thelma Ball, Millbrook; Misses Amy Brock, May Byam and Lila White, Millbrook.

Majority Endorsement of the NEW TIRE WARRANTY

WITH the advent of spring and heavier tire buying, the majority of motorists are appreciating the benefits of the revised tire warranty announced January 1, 1926. This warranty gives full guarantee against defects of workmanship or materials for 90 days from date of first road wear (180 days in the case of solid tires).

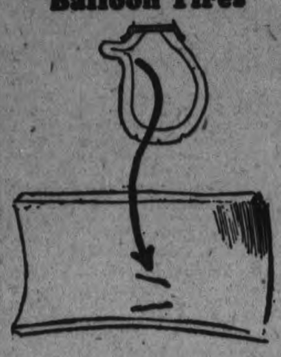
You can now buy the tires you need with the assurance that you are paying only a fair price—a price not increased by losses imposed upon the manufacturer by the habitual adjustment seeker.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars will now be saved on the purchase price by the big majority of motorists who do not seriously abuse their tires. So that you may not innocently abuse your tires, the Rubber Association of Canada publishes information to assist you.

Too Low Air Pressure

IN recent years the comfort of Balloon tires has created a tendency on the part of those still using high-pressure tires to very materially reduce their air pressure. In turn, many users of Balloon tires have been tempted to seek further increase of riding comfort by carrying too little air, even in Balloon tires. Both Balloon and high-pressure tires are sharply susceptible to injury if the proper pressure for the load carried is not maintained.

In Balloon Tires



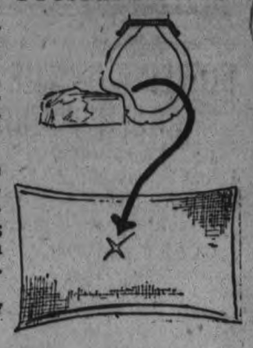
To the left is illustrated the shape of a Balloon tire with too low air pressure when coming in contact with a curb, stone or other obstacle at a fair rate of speed. You will notice that on one side of the tire the air is completely displaced, permitting two points of the tire to be solidly hammered between the rim and the projection encountered.

The next illustration to the left shows the damage done. This becomes apparent on the inside of the tire, because the rubber on the outside of the tire is less susceptible to scar.

The illustration to the right gives a sectional view of the position of a high-pressure tire under the stress of a bump providing the tire contains too little air. The wall of a high-pressure tire is thicker and the action is that of turning the tire inside out—of placing tremendous strain on the inner plies and compressing the outer part of the tire.

The next illustration to the right shows the resulting injury, which is also first apparent on the inside of the tire; but later, frequently, results in a blow-out through the tire.

In High-Pressure Tires



The injuries illustrated above can be satisfactorily repaired by competent tire repairmen.

How to Avoid These Tire Injuries

In addition to driving with reasonable care, the way to avoid these mishaps is to buy tires of a size adequate for the load to be carried and then to keep them inflated in accordance with the maker's recommendation. This information regarding tire size and inflation can be obtained from good tire dealers.

To guide you in maintaining the desirable inflation it is necessary that you have a pressure gauge. If you are using Balloon tires use a Balloon tire gauge, do not rely on a high-pressure gauge for low-pressure tires. The high-pressure gauge is not designed to register the small fluctuations of air pressure which are sufficient to cause injury to low-pressure tires.

WEDDING BELLS.

McINROY—PHILLIPS.

MARMORA, June 4.—A quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. Paul's Church on Tuesday afternoon when Edith Myrtle, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Phillips, became the bride of Donald Wesley, third son of Mrs. Thos. McInroy, senior. The bride was prettily attired in sand crepe de chine, with hat to match. She was attended by her sister, Miss Hilda Phillips, who wore a becoming costume of cocoa satin-faced Canton, trimmed with georgette. Mr. Will. Rylott performed the duties of best man. The rector, the Rev. P. Caiger-Watson, tied the nuptial knot. The hymn, "O Perfect Love," was sung by the large congregation present. The organist, Mrs. W. Litt, also played the "Bridal Chorus," from Lohengrin, whilst the register was being signed. The chancel was prettily decorated for the occasion with tulips, apple blossoms and white carnations. The happy couple left on the afternoon train for Toronto and Niagara Falls, where the honeymoon is being spent. On their return they will continue to reside in Marmora.

SOUTHAM—BURCHELL.

The marriage of Miss Edith Mary Burchell, daughter of Mr. Charles Burchell, K.C., and Mrs. Burchell of Halifax, to Mr. Richard Southam, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southam of Toronto, took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Fort Massey Church. Rev. Dr. R. W. Ross officiated. Mr. H. Dean played the wedding music. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked pretty in her frock of silk net over chiffon, her long tulle veil being held with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and gypsophelia, and wore the bridegroom's gift, a diamond and sapphire ring. The maid of honor was Miss Anna Cameron, and the bridesmaids, Miss Ida Burchell, sister of the bride; Miss Betty Southam, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Dorothy Raney and Miss Dorothy Page. They wore rainbow pastel hued frocks in pink, yellow, blue, mauve and green, and picture hats that matched their frocks. They carried large bouquets of mauve iris and Russian status, and wore the bridegroom's gifts, strings of pearls with jewelled clasps. The best man was Mr. H. O. Macdonald. Mr. J. Burchell, Mr. Mackenzie King, Mr. Harold Briggs and Mr. Harold Gallagher of Toronto acted as ushers. The bridegroom's presents to them were silver flasks. During the signing of the register Mr. Fred Guilford, cousin of the bride, sang. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Tower Road, where Mr. and Mrs. Burchell received. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southam received with the bride's parents. Mrs. Southam looked smart in a French frock of flowered georgette with black lace, large black and silver hat. She also wore a pearl necklace and bouquet of yellow roses. Mrs. Eakins, grandmother of the bridegroom, wore a becoming gown of larkspur blue georgette embroidered, and grey hat. Her corsage was of mauve orchids. The bride's going-away frock was a sports suit of beige with coat of the same shade collared and cuffed with squirrel. With this she wore a small beige felt hat. Mr. and Mrs. Southam left on a motor trip through the States and to Yama Farms, and on their return will live in Montreal.—Mail and Empire.

Help Put Ontario on Tourist Map

THIS week the Provincial Government starts to advertise Ontario's summer attractions in the papers of Ohio and other near-by States.

Most opportunely, Cleveland is staging a monster demonstration in Canada's honor on Friday, June 11th.

Here is a wonderful opportunity to put Ontario in the spotlight all through Ohio,—to get the people of that State talking—thinking—Ontario!

Cleveland-Canada Day

The undernamed Committee is seeing to it that Ontario's part in the program will be spectacular and interest-creating, culminating in an address on Ontario by Premier Ferguson, to be broadcast by WTAM.

Ontario will occupy the centre of the stage most of the day. But we need a throng of Ontario fans, displaying Ontario badges, to pack the Baseball Park where the colors will be trooped, and the Auditorium where the Premier will speak —to cheer those who will be putting Ontario on the tourist map.

Complete information regarding reduced fares will be published in the newspapers

Would a boom in Ontario's tourist trade help you? If so, duty calls. On arrival in Cleveland apply at Auditorium for your delegate badge.

PETERBORO' C.C. WINS IN TORONTO

Beats Upper Canada College Team 175-119.

THORPE BATS 51.

The Peterborough C. C. journeyed to Toronto yesterday and played an Upper Canada College XII. and won a splendid game by 56 runs. F Dyer, the Peterborough captain, won the toss and elected to put the college team in to bat first on a fast wicket. Alexander and McMurrick opening the batting to the bowling of F. Dyer and Dunkerley. Alexander was smartly run out with only 1 run on the board and with the score at 5. McuMrrick was caught by R. Dyer. Northgrave and Dewar then became associated and runs came steadily until the score reached 48, when Northgrave was also run out. Dewar, however, continued to hit away and his total finally reached 60, before he was well caught by Manning in the outfield off Thorpe's bowling. The remaining batsmen all failed to reach double figures with the exception of Musgrave, the College boys total finally reaching 119 runs. The visitors fielding showed improvement over previous games, and no catches were missed.

The Peterborough XII. opened their innings with Dunkerley and Stuart against the bowling of Hooper and Alexander. The batsment played careful cricket and runs came slowly for the first six overs. Matthews accepted a chance from Stuart, who retired with the total at 20. Coutts followed, but was unfortunately run out with the score at 41, when apparently getting set. With Thorpe and Dunkerley associated, runs came freely until the latter was caught at 04 for a well-played 27. Thorpe continued to play bright cricket, his strokes being well-timed and placed; in his total of 51 were ten boundary hits and the runs were quickly compiled. Captain Frank Dyer speedily hit up a score of 18 runs including 4 boundaries, but brother Reg. was unfortunate in being caught before he had scored. Monkman with a well played 17 brought the total up to 151. Manning and Walsh were playing confidently together when time was called, with the total score 175 runs and one wicket in hand. Mr. "Extras" assisted the total of each side considerably, the fast wicket accounting for a number of byes.

Before the match the Peterborough Club was entertained at luncheon in the College and the supper which followed the game was thoroughly enjoyed by the players after four hours' cricket in a bright but cold afternoon.

MEMORIAL TO SOLDIER DEAD IS UNVEILED AT PORT HOPE

Lieut.-Governor Cockshutt, of Ontario, Performs Unveiling Ceremony.

SPLENDID MONUMENT.

High Granite Column Bears Figure of Peace—82 Names Inscribed.

The unveiling of the War Memorial erected by the Colonel Arthur Williams Chapter, Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, took place at Port Hope, on Thursday, June 3, His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, performing the ceremony in the presence of between five and six hundred people.

Practically all the public organizations in the town had part in the event, the Girl Guides arriving first on the scene. The Battalion band from Orono, headed the parade to the Memorial at 2.30 p.m., the order being; the Guard of Honor, from the Durham Regiment, 136th Batt., under the command of Lieut.-Colonel E. E. Snyder, V. D., the Port Hope Veterans of the Great War, wearing civilian clothes, the High School Cadets, the Public School Cadets, the Cadets from Trinity College School, the latter looking quite smart in their white uniforms and blue caps, and headed by their own band.

A flag-draped platform had been erected for the speakers and other prominent officials and on either side seating accommodation was provided for the relatives and friends of those who fell in the Great War.

The Memorial itself is a handsome column of solid Scotch granite, 26 feet in height, and erected at a cost of $7,000. On the side which faces the roadway is a life-size figure of "Peace,' bearing a sword, reversed, in her right hand, a wreath of laurel encircling the hilt; immediately underneath are the names of those who fell on the field of honor, 82 in all, the inscription which is flanked with the dates 1914-1919, reading "Their Name Liveth Forever Moer." On the base beneath is the inscription: "In Honored Memory of the Men of Port Hope and Hope Township who fell in the Great War.'

On the other three sides, in groups of three, are the names of battls made famous in the world struggle: Ypres, Cambrai, Mount Sorrel; Arras, Somme, Courcelette; Vimy, Paschendaele, Amiens. "Erected by the Colonel Arthur Williams Chapter, I. O.D.E., A.D. 1926." is inscribed on the reverse side of the base.

His Honor, Lieutenant-Governor Colonel Cockshutt, was received with due military honors upon his arrival at the park attended by his aide-de-camp, wearing the Highlanders uniform, and accompanied by Senator Mulholland, with other prominent officials, civil and military, and after briefly inspecting the troops was escorted to the platform. Among those who had seats on the platform were: Dr. T. G. Orchard, headmaster Trinity College School; Colonel Goodday, Capt. Annesley, R. N.; Rev. Father O'Sullivan, Rev. E. D. Cameron, Rev. Dr. Rigby, Rev. Dr. J. T. Daley, Mr. J. B. Davison, President of the Port Hope Board of Trade; ex-Mayor T. L. Curtiss, ex-Mayor G. A. Smith; S. C. Bennett, Councillor W. Pethick, A. D. Andrews; Captain Rev. C. H. Boulden, Junior school T.C.S., Captain Rev. A. G. Emmett, Captain Rev. F. W. Anderson, H. A. Ward, K. C., Mrs. F. E. Sawyer, Mrs. S. C. Bennett, Mrs. Haultain, Mrs. Forrest, Messrs H. Fuliord, Thomas Wickett, G. Garnett, G. Strong, L. H. Giddy, H. Merrifield and G. W. Sanders, town clerk.

The chair was to have been taken by Mrs. R. A. Mulholland, Regent of the Colonel Arthur Williams Chapter I.O.D.E., but owing to her serious illness Senator Mulholland took his wife's place, repeating her message of deep disappointment at being prevented from attending.

The formal service opened with all singing, "O God, Our Help in Ages Past," led by the band, after which P. Captain H. C. Boulden read the Scripture lesson.

Extending a warm welcome to the Lieutenant-Governor, Senator Mulholland went on to say that the local chapter of the Daughters of the Empire had reason to be proud as its splendid efforts reached their culmination that day.

The site upon which the memorial is erected, he said, is historic ground, the colors having been presented there to the 136th Battalion, by Colonel Hughes, before its departure for overseas, and "one gallant lad who received them had his name inscribed high on the roll of honor on the monument."

"It was near this spot where we bade farewell, and I am glad we are now able to redeem our promise to keep them in enduring remembrance, having carved the names of the unforgotten dead deep in everlasting granite."

The site, the chairman explained, is an embryo park, and when sufficient money has been subscribed its development will be proceeded with, and it will eventually be called, "Memorial Park."

Catpain Rev. F. W. Anderson was then called upon for the address of dedication. After expressing his appreciation of the honor of taking part in the service, "a fitting celebration on the birthday of our King, who always took a keen interest in the Canadians overseas," and adding a reference to the appreciation which the citizens of Port Hope generally feel toward the local chapter of the I.O.D.E., for its unremitting efforts in war-time and since, the leadership it had given in the plan for a memorial finding fruition that day, Captain Anderson went on to speak of Canada's part in the great war both in service and sacrifice.

"There are three branches of the Imperial service, to all of which Canada made generous contribution; on the sea, known as the senior arm; in the air, the junior arm; and the fighting forces on land, surely the essential arm. There were two agencies in the war — those who fought, and the auxiliary forces at home and at the front; and the latter though non-combatant were of equal importance with those in the trenches. There was a splendid spirit of cheerful comradeship and co-operation permeating all — a spirit needful to-day in our national life.

"The man whom we delight to honor this day, whose memory is dear in so many hearts and homes of our land, literally followed in the footsteps of the Man of Galilee, of whom it was said: He saved others; Himself He cannot save; and we would do well to emulate more and more their spirit of service and sacrifice."

The prayer of dedication was offered by Captain Rev. A. G. Emmett, the Lieutenant-Governor, and Senator Mulholland accompanying him to a place immediately before the monument.

The unveiling of the memorial followed; His Honor, Colonel Henry Cockshutt, pulling the flag while the troops presented arms, and the band played the National Anthem.

In his address, the Lieutenant-Governor spoke of the hearts torn with sadness as in memory they referred to the Great War; and yet the spirit of gladness was not lacking because of the liberty preserved by the men who fought and died "That you and I may be free."

"Other people behind the battle front also help the Empire, though their hearts were bitter within them, and yet they were glad to work for the cause of victory."

"Things are different today from the early times, when the pioneer settlers came into what was a wilderness and carved out homes for themselves and their families; and not homes alone did they build, but churches and school houses, so their boys and girls might be given knowledge and fitted to carry on in life; taught, too, the same truths by which to live, as their fathers and mothers had known. We to-day have duties to perform, not to ourselves only, but to our country and to our children, that the faith of our fathers may be established in the nation, and in the lives of the growing citizens."

"It is yours to make this country what it should be—the responsibility belongs to all of us. If we sow with the same determination as the pioneers we will not have sown in vain, but will build up a greater heritage for those who come after us. Be true to it, and true to the flag we all love so well, and which stands for truth, righteousness and justice. We are the sponsors, and must see to it that our children are brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. I thank you."

The General Salute by the guard of honor was followed by two minutes' silence, while all present bowed in reverent and grateful remembrance of the heroic dead. Immediately prior to this period of silence the Last Post was blown by Sergeant-Major A. S. Taylor, M.M., and at its conclusion, he blew the Reveille 'signifying the blessed hope of the resurrection."

Next in the order of service was the placing of wreaths and flowers on the memorial. The wreath from the I.O.D.E. was placed by Mrs. S. C. Bennet; the next of kin were then asked to deposit their floral gifts; after them, the fraternal societies, Captain W. J. Robertson placing the wreath from the Masonic Order; Major Hoare presented the wreath from the 136th Battalion; Reeve Holdaway, the one from the Port Hope Town Council; George Corbett the war veterans' wreath; S. C. Bennett that from the Port Hope Club; F. J. Curtiss the one from the Rotary Club; the Girl Guides sent two members with its wreath; the Dominion Day Committee wreath was placed by B. Davidson; and that from the Public Schools was put in place by a representative from the School Board; J. McMillan put the wreath in position sent from the Orange Order.

Rev. Canon Rigby pronounced the Benediction after the band had played the National Anthem, thus bringing an impressive service to a close.

MEANS MUCH TO BOTH.

Petes Have To Win To Stay in the Running.

The battle with Kingston in the Central Ontario League series to-morrow, is all important inasmuch as the Petes must win to keep in the running while a Pony victory would put the Kingston crew far out in front. Manager Daley is taking no chances. He has Bruce Cairns, his star left hander, fit and ready, and will send his strongest team in action against the Petes. Purvis, Halbert, Batstone, Cherry and all the other Stalwarts, will be here along with Bubs Button, the new Pony short stop, and Thompson, the former Cobourg player, who will be in left field. The game is called for 3 o'clock sharp, with Umpires Kay and LeBarr in charge. The Peterboro pitching selection has not been announced.

AT THE CAPITOL.

SYD CHAPLIN IN "OH! WHAT A NURSE!"

Something new in the funny line in the way of moving pictures is the feature at the Capitol Theatre for this week end, with Syd Chaplin, in "Oh! What a Nurse!" The happy-go-lucky comedian has a style all his own, and he does some uproarious stunts in three female impersonations, which include that of a reporter assigned to the "Advice to the Lovelorn" Column on a San Francisco daily, where Fate and the city editor send him into all sorts of strange situations. Then, as a bootleg queen, he dons another freakish feminine make-up and escapes with his life from the clutches of an irate group of detectives and their followers.

But it is the role of a nurse that Chaplin does his best work, and there are some screamingly funny episodes in the final half of the picture, in which he does some remarkable stunts on board ship, where, as a nurse, a part taken exceedingly well by this good-looking young man, he ensares the affections of the villainous captain and a couple of other philandering gentlemen. It is in the final scenes, in which the nurse makes some strange charges against one of the gentlemen in the company, and undertakes to treat him for "Siberian Flu" that the laughs come thick and fast. Syd Chaplin has a comedy manner absolutely different to that of his famous relative, but he puts it across in fine style and is well worth seeing.

—Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT

CRITICS ARE UNANIMOUS!

(From the New York Daily Newspapers).

Telegram (Frank Vreeland) — The picture is greater than "Down to the Sea in Ships" and it is one of the finest seascapes on record. You can't afford to miss seeing John Barrymore.

The Evening Sun (John S. Cohen Jr.)—Mr. Barrymore makes his one and only appearance of the season in the film at Warners which is a pity, for he gives us an entertaining, showing display of effective screen acting and the season being what it is, another exhibition of his pictorial fireworks would come as a welcome addition.

American (Eileen Creelman)—If you like red-blooded adventure you'll enjoy "The Sea Beast." John Barrymore has never seemed so human before.

Herald-Tribune (Harriette Underhill)—"The Sea Beast" is a magnificent production. It is so big.

The Mirror (Dorothy Herzog) — You will be thrilled by this photoplay.

Morning Telegraph (Norbert Lusk)—It should be seen by every serious follower of the screen, and will undoubtedly crowd the theatre for weeks to come.

ROTARY JUVENILES WIN OPENER DEFEATING KIWANIS TEAM 9-1; ONE BAD INNING TURNS SCALES

Losers Able To Collect Only One Hit Off Howden's Pitching.

WINNERS HIT HARD.

Starr With Four Hits, Leads Rotary Batsmen—Errors Figure in Score.

One bad innings, in which he allowed five hits and a walk, and in which his support kicked in with three errors at critical moments, cost "Lefty" Guiry and the Kiwanis Juveniles the opening game of the Peterborough City League series. The victors were the Rotary Juveniles, and the final score was 9-1. The bad innings, the fourth, contributed six of the nine runs and turned what had been a close game into a rout.

In any event, the Kiwanians could hardly have won, for all they were able to collect off Bill Howden's offering was one hit and one run. The tall right-hander had the losers eating out of his hand, striking out ten in seven innings. Koster and Hall, with three strikeouts each were especially easy picking for him, but no member of the team was able to connect with much frequency, and when they did hit the ball his fielders were always in position.

Outside the one inning Guiry also hurled a fair brand of ball, pulling out of several bad holes. His support cracked at more critical points, Murray's two boots in succession in the fourth sending in two counters after two were out.

With the willow Starr lived up to his name and was the star of the game. He collected four singles in four trips to the plate. No other player in the game made more than one hit. Rishea and Kennealey had the extra base blows, a double a piece. Guiry secured the only Kiwanis hit.

In the field both teams pulled off some rather clever plays. On the bases, missed bases cost both teams runs. Rishea ruined a double with two men on and two out when he failed to touch first, and the runs didn't count. Doughty neglected to step on the rubber as he scored in the fourth and cost the Kiwanis team a run.

The losers started off with a score without a hit in the first. After Lebarr had grounded out Murray walked and Graham was hit. They moved up on Hutchinson's infield out, and Murray scored when Grady fumbled Doughty's roller. Hall struck out.

The winners started to count in the third. Walton grounded out and then Archambault and Kennealey drew walks. Howden struck out, but Clancy drove a hot one through the box to send in the two runners, who had moved up on a passed ball.

In the fourth Starr led off with a single. He stole second and Johnston sacrificed him to third. Graham played to the plate on Rishea's roller, but failed to get the runner. Walton singled and Archambault struck out. Kennealey sent two across with a double, stole third, and scored on Hall's bad peg.

With the bases cleared and two out it looked as if the scoring for the inning was over, but Howden singled and Murray messed up two grounders in a row, crowding the cushions. Starr drove a liner over Murray's head and sent in two. Johnston walked, filling the sacks again but Rishea lifted to Hutchinson.

In the sixth the winners added another to their already sufficient total. Howden grounded to Guiry, but Clancy was hit and Grady and Starr hit singles, Clancy scoring on the second, with the batter taking second. Austin, batting for Johnston, flied out. Rishea doubled to right but forgot to touch first, so lost his own hit and the two runs that scored.

The treat of the season is in store for the baseball fans who visit Exhibition Park this evening to see the heavy-hitting Curve Lake Indians and Cognawagas clash in the latter's first home game of the season.

Although the Cogs were champs last year, the Indians are determined to turn the tables and will present a strong line-up. Manager Coppaway's braves have always been favorites with the fans who patronize the park and a large crowd should turn out and boost the teams along.

GREAT BRITAIN PUTS UP FIGHT BUT FAILS TO WIN WALKER CUP

Defeated United States on the Day's Play, But Lacked Points.

HALVE FINAL HOLE.

Cup Handed Back To U. S. Team Who Brought It Over.

ST. ANDREW'S, Scotland, June 4 (Canadian Press).—Great Britain put up a gallant fight for the Walker Cup, emblematic of internation golf supremacy on the King's birthday, and defeated the defending United States linksmen on the day's play, but failed to win the trophy. In the two days' tourney in which four two-bal foursomes and eight individual matches were played, the United States scored 6 1-2 points while the hard fighting British challengers made 5 1-2.

The deciding match of the tournament, as George Von Elm, of the United States, and Maor Hezlet, of Great Britain, holed out on the spacious green close beside the Royal and Ancient clubhouse, furnished plenty of excitement. Von Elm and Hezlet halved the final hole and the match and half a point went to the United States, assuring the defenders of a win. Three of the foursomes were won yesterday by the United States and three of singles out of the eight played today, with one halved, afforded the necessary number of points for victory.

Wethered and Holderness defeated Ouimet and Guilford, 4 and 3.

The biggest feature of the day was the individual triumph of Bobby Jones over Cyril Tolley, former British champion. There could hardly have been a more striking demonstration of Jones' outstanding merit as a golfer than the 12—11 drubbing he gave the stocky and powerful Britisher. Jones, with his 70 in the morning and two under fours for 25 holes and with his row of fours in the afternoon, gave as handsome an exhibition of what it is to play golf as the most captious could wish.

The scene in and around the final green in front of the old gray clubhouse as the last putt was holed, which clinched the title to the cup, was most impressive. The great galleries which had followed the eight singles matches in the afternoon were for the most part concentrated here, for it was one of the few matches finishing on the home green, and, as it turned out, the crucial one of the tournament.

As the ball from Von Elm's putter fell into the hole, a round of applause rippled forth, a generous tribute to the staying powers of the young United States golfer, as well as his British opponent.

When the matches were concluded, came the ceremony of handing back the cup to the United States team, which had brought it over here for competition.

Soccer Charity Games To-morrow Afternoon

A very interesting soccer game is scheduled for Saturday afternoon, at King Edward Park, at three o'clock, when the conquerors of the cup-holders—Masseys—will meet the DeLaval eleven who eliminated Campbellford in the semi-final of the Phelan Charity Soccer Cup.

Another important match is being played at Omemee between Quaker Oats and the Tannery boys in the other semi-final of the same trophy. In a previous game the porridge boys defeated the E. and E. team, but a cup-tie makes all the difference so far as Omemee is concerned, and expect to go into the finals. The proceeds go to charity.

BOXER DISQUALIFIED.

Jack Snell, Canadian Middleweight, Drove Opponent on Ropes.

LONDON, June 4 (Canadian Press Cable).—Jack Snell, prominent Canadian middleweight, was disqualified in his fifteen-round bout here last night against Piet Brand, the Dutch middleweight titleholder.

In the opening exchanges Snell had easily the better of the fighting, but the determination and brilliant boxing of the Dutch champion at close range evened matters up by the end of the fifth round. In the next frame the Canadian drove his opponent to the ropes with a series of wicked body punches. The referee disqualified him, however, on a ruling that he had caught Brand low with a hard right.

George Mogridge, the left-handed twirler who has been traded by the St. Louis Brown to the New York Americans, is no stranger to Gotham fans, as he was a member of the Yankees for five years, from 1915 to 1920. It was while with the Yankees in 1917, that Mogridge distinigushed himself by pitching a no-hit game against the Boston Red Sox.

ENGLISHMEN STEADY UP AND ATTACK AUSTRALIAN BATTING

Taylor Throws From Boundary Line and Crashes Larwood's Stumps.

RAIN INTERFERES.

Yorkshires Strong Hitter Forced To Retire Through Injury.

BIRMINGHAM, England, June 4. Canadian Press. — The second day's play between the touring Australian cricketers and the north of England, was continued yesterday, and when stumps were drawn the Englishmen had all been dismissed for 239 runs, and the Australians were at the wicket. The visitors stood at 34 runs with two men out, and at this figure the game will be resumed to-day.

Wednesday's play was suspended when rain interfered with the game. The north of England were at bat, with Sutcliffe and Holmes wielding the willow. This pair continued yesterday, the score board registering 40 runs with no wickets down.

The batting opened slowly and the pitch developed difficulty as the day wore on. The visiting owlers, Macartney, Richardson and Mailey established the upper-hand, but there were occasional bursts of brilliant aggressiveness on the part of the home batsmen. This served to bring into the spotlight the clever fielding of the Australians. At no time was this better demonstrated than when, in the last wicket of the game, Taylor, from the boundary line threw in a ball that crashed Larwood's middle-stump, dismissing the Notts batsman at zero.

Misfortune befell the north of England early in the game when Sutcliffe, Yorkshire's strong hitter, was forced to withdraw injured. He had batted an hour and twenty-five minutes when obliged to retire with a torn fibre in the muscle of his right leg. Suteliffe was one of the players selected for the trial match on Saturday, and it is feared that his injury may prevent his playing. When retired he had made 35, adding 12 runs to his overnight total. Holmes and Hallows batted steadily but slowly but Holmes was run out at 43. A. W. Carr, the skipper of Nottingham, who will also lead England in the first test match a week on Saturday, joined Hallows and the score mounted slowly. It progress was interrupted when Carr fell a victim to the watchfulness of Oldfield behind the wicket at 14.

Whysall of Notts had an inglorious innings, succumbing, to Macartney with a duck egg, and Hallows was joined by Watson.

At this stage of the game the north of England began to steady up and attacked the Australian batting vigorously. At no time did the runs come in big numbers, but gradually the score was forged higher. V. M. C. Jupp of Northampton and Smith were both responsible for 23 each and an excellent innings was staged by Geary of Leicester who contributed 39; Geary lasted out the innings, for Root succumbed to Richardson with an orphan run while Larwood returned to the pavilion at zero.

Bardsley and Woodfull took the bat for Australia, and in their opening over they found the northerners bowling decidedly dangerous. The Englishmen fielded well, and when the Australian vice-captain had registered eleven he was snapped up by Carr off Root. Woodfull's wicket also fell in a catch by Larwood to the same bowler. Taylor and Malley were at the bat when time was called and these player will resume today.

BASEBALL LEAGUE NOW RE-ORGANIZED

Eight Teams Enter League in Cavan and Manvers Townships.

MILLBROOK, June 3.—A well-attended and enthusiastic district baseball meeting was held at Bethany on Monday evening, Past President W. W. Hanna being in the chair.

Notices had been sent out to Pontypool, Nestleton, Janetville, Yelverton, Blackstock, Millbrook, Bethany, Honeydale and Mount Pleasant asking that representatives of the ball teams at these places be present for the gathering, and with the exception of Janetville, Mount Pleasant and Pontypool, one or more of the officials of other interested parties was in attendance.

After considerable discussion regarding the advisibility of forming a league at this late date, it was moved by J. A. Vance, Millbrook, seconded by H. Porteous, Nestleton, that a league be formed for 1926, to be in two groups—section A to include Pontypool, Millbrook, Bethany and Mount Pleasant and section B Nestleton, Yelverton, Blackstock and Honeydale.

The election of officers then took place, resulting as follows:

Honorary Presidents—F. W. Bowen, M.P., A. J. Fallis, M.P.P., and W. W. Hanna.

President — Harold Porteous, Nestleton.

1st Vice-President—Dr. McNeil, Pontypool.

2nd Vice-President—J. A. Vance, Millbrook.

Secretary-Treasurer—P. Stinson, Millbrook.

Executive representatives from each team in the league—H. Nattrass, Millbrook; A. Stewart, Pontypool; G. Shields, Mount Pleasant; Dr. J. J. Hamilton, Bethany; P. Phelp, Nestleton; C. Evans, Yelverton; R. C. Hill, Blackstock; R. Wells, Honeydale.

The new president took the chair, and a resolution was introduced by J. A. Vance, and seconded by P. Phelp, that the secretary be instructed to write a letter of sympathy to the wife and family of the late H. H. Ryley of Bethany, who ably fulfilled the duties of district president last year.

Mr. Vance referred to Mr. Ryley as practically a life long, personal friend, and eulogized his many sterling qualities in the field of sport, and also of politics. The advice and willing assistance of the late president will be missed this season, Mr. Vance stated, his dependability and foresight being valuable assets to the district clubs.

On motion it was decided that J. J. Cathcart and V. Cummiskey be the umpires for section A, and that the appointment of the umpires for Section B be left with the members of the executive from that part of the district.

The arrangements regarding the play-off were carried over from last year, namely, that a single schedule be played; first and second teams in each section to play home and home games to determine the winning team of the League.

The arrangement of the schedule of games was left with the executive for each section. All names of players must be in the hands of the secretary not later than June 15, and a marked cheque for $10 to cover any game defaulted.

Councillor P. Stinson was the first president of the District League in 1922, and since 1923 has been the secretary-treasurer. Before the meeting was dismissed on Monday evening, Vice-President J. A. Vance expressed the genuine appreciation which the various ball teams have felt for the efficient, willing and unselfish service which Mr. Stinson has rendered in connection with baseball affairs in the district; much of the success and interest which has attended the sport has been due to his unfailing efforts, and a hearty vote of thanks was moved by the speaker, seconded by Past President W. W. Hanna, all present signifying their approval in no uncertain manner.

Among those from Millbrook who attended the meeting were: Harold Nattrass, Ross Edmunds, W. Budd, J. A. Vance and P. Stinson.

In England the average professional football player takes part in fifty or more contests each season.

The inaugural meeting of the Fairmount Jockey Club last year proved so successful that the management is spending $150,000 in the erection of a new club house at the track near Collinsville, Ill., and expects to have it completed in time for the opening of the spring meeting the latter part of May.

DAY OF SPORTS AT BAILIEBORO

King's Birthday Celebrated By Large Number From Surrounding District.

CONCERT IN EVENING.

(By a Staff Reporter).

BAILIEBORO, June 4. — The King's birthday was celebrated in Bailieboro in the form of a big sports day put on by the Y. P. S. The day was not very warm for outside sports, and especially for spectators, but before evening quite a large crowd had gathered to take in the events. The Cosmos Club of Millbrook sent quite a large number of entries into the different athletic events. The afternoon programme commenced with a softball game between the Bailieboro and Millbrook juniors, the former winning the game, 21 to 16. The young boys played good softball, especially the two young pitchers. The players were, for Bailieboro: R. Barnard, Bean, Bateman, G. Barnard, Gainer, Woods, Harper, Johnston and Newton; for Millbrook: Natrass, Gray, Ingram, Donnelly, Raper, Russel, Brown, Rudd and Vance.

The next event was a girls' softball game between the Mount Pleasant girls and the Bailieboro girls. In this game Ronald Deyell acted as umpire, and he had a very busy time making everybody accept his ruling. The game was very close, and when the seven innings were played it was found that the score was a tie, 13-13, but in the play-off innings it was certainly the unlucky 13 that put the jink on the Mount Pleasant girls. They got too anxious to win, and as a result, made all kinds of errors in the field, and the other team went on a batting rampage and drove in 11 runs, and when the Mount Pleasant girls came to the bat they were unable to score.

The players were, for Bailieboro: Evelyn Peel, Hazel Armstrong, Lottie Perrin, Effie Perrin, Marion Dawson, Mildred White, May Earle, Lottie Earle and May Panter; for Mount Pleasant: Evelyn Bland, Myrtle Hooton, Cathaline Sisson, Alma Downer, Greta Boyd, Helen McLean, Viola McColl, Stella Bryans and Gwen Wallace.

In the running high jump, Jack Wright of Garden Hill came first, clearing the pole at five feet very easily with a baseball suit and sweater on. Bob Larmer came second, clearing the pole at four feet eleven. Jim Larmer of Millbrook got the running broad jump, doing 18 feet 7 inches, and Ernest Burnham of Millbrook was second, jumping 18 feet 5 inches. In the hop, skip and jump event, Jim Larmer came first, doing 37 feet 4 inches, and H. Bannister second with 34 feet 6 inches. Bob Larmer came first in the 1,000-yard race, and Ernest Burnham second. The juniors' 25-yard race was won by B. Raper in a bery large field, D. Brown coming second.

Garden Hill and Bailieboro played two baseball games, Garden Hill winning the junior game, 9-0, and Bailieboro winning the senior game, 5-3. Garden Hill have a good team of juniors, and romped away with the first game. The errors were numerous on the other side, and as a result many men were advanced on bases. Both pitchers had very good control, walking very few men. The score and the players were:

Garden Hill Dunbar, c; S. Mercer, p; Centrell, Bryans, Bannister, Munroe, Ballantyne, Crab and A. Mercer.

Bailieboro—Dawson, Dean, Mac, Gilmore c, Deyell, Johnston p, Lang, Swain and Ingram.

Garden Hill	1000251	9	11 3
Bailieboro	0000000	0	5 7

Umpire—George Berry.

The ladies of the church served tea in the basement of the church, and after that followed a play, entitled "The Colonel's Maid," put on by the Young People of Stuart Hall. This was a very interesting little play and excellently presented. Those taking part were Livingstone Stewart as Colonel Rudd; W. Dawson, as Colonel Richard Byrd; Grace Stewart as Marjory Byrd; Edith Thorn, as Mrs. John Carol, a widow, and Col. Rudd's sister-in-law; Wm. Hutchison, as Ned Graydon; Fred Chambers, as Col. Rudd's lawyer, and Richard Stewart as the Chinese Cook.

DELORO WINS IN BELLEVILLE

Smelter Team Defeats Homesters 6-0—One Hit Off Shea.

POINT ANNE WINS.

MARMORA, June 4.—(Special.)—In a Bay of Quinte baseball league game played at Belleville yesterday in connection with the King's birthday celebration, Deloro defeated Belleville, 6-0. Wonderful pitching by Shea, who allowed only one hit in the nine innings, and good support from his team mates, kept the Belleville team away from the rubber. Shea struck out eight.

Ten hits were collected from the offerings of Gerow, who struck out only four. The young Belleville hurler lacked experience to cope with the Deloro team. The score by innings:

Deloro	100 112 001	6	10 0
Belleville	000 000 000	0	1 2

Batteries—Shea and Quinn; Gerow and Seeney.

Playing yesterday afternoon at Frankford, Point Anne defeated the home team 11-4 in a league game.

Picton has withdrawn from the league to give better support to the junior team, and a new schedule was drawn up at a special meeting of the league held last night in Belleville.

VOL. LVII., No. 131 PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, JUNE 5, 1926 PRICE THREE CENTS

RAILWAY ESTIMATES BEFORE THE HOUSE; NO COMPLETION OF TRENT CANAL AT PRESENT

Sharp Discussion Over Vote of $3,000,000 For Hudson Bay Railway.

MEMBERS ABSENT.

Dunning Referred To As "the New Napoleon From the West."

OTTAWA, Ont., June 5 (Canadian Press).—There were indications in the House yesterday of sharp discussion over the vote of $3,000,000 for the Hudson Bay railway. The Item was up shortly before dinner adjournment, but Sir Henry Drayton asked that it stand. "The country is entitled to a fair discussion of the item," he said, "and is going to get it." The country was entitled to know whether or not terminal facilities would be built by the Government. Hon. C. A. Dunning agreed that the Hudson Bay item should stand. Mr. Dunning also intimated that the Government had no intention, for the present at least, of completing the Trent Canal.

The civil government vote for the Department of Railways and Canals, amounting to $222,155 salaries, and $38,000 contingencies, was discussed by the House of Commons, in Committee of Supply, this afternoon.

Sir Henry Drayton complained that the Department was as heavily staffed as before the Canadian National Railway Board and its organization for handling the whole system came into existence. The railways department was not involved in the operation of the system and it seemed as if there might be some reduction in the cost of this department.

Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Railways, stated that, insofar as the former government lines of railways were concerned, the Department was in exactly the same position toward the board of directors as it had formerly been to the general manager. Capital expenditures on these lines were under the direction of the Department. He agreed that when measures were taken for re-financing the system it would be a good thing to place all the lines comprised in it on exactly the same basis. But this had not been done, and the railway department must be in a position to do the work which fell upon it as a result of the system prevailing.

Trent Canal.

The Welland Canal vote was allowed to stand but several items for canal and lock improvements were quickly passed. The items included $395,000 for the Trent Canal improvement, and total $738,150.

Mr. Murphy asked if the Government had any intention of completing the Trent Canal and in reply Mr. Dunning said, "The Government has no intention, for the present time at least, or completing the canal."

J. S. Woodsworth (Labor-Winnipeg North Centre) asked what were the intentions of the Government with respect to settlers in the Greater Winnipeg Water District, along the line of railway built from Winnipeg to Shoal Lake in connection with the construction of the aqueduct.

Mr. Dunning said the matter was being looked into by his department. He held out little hope, however, of the Canadian National taking over this railway line.

W. F. MacLean (Conservative-South York) called attention to the "Unnecessary duplication" of the two railway systems in Canada. "The Minister of railways came down here as a new Napoleon from the West," he said. "Here is an opportunity for this new Napoleon from the West to deal with this question." Mr. MacLean expressed the hope that Mr. Dunning, as the "new Napoleon", would not let it be "his Waterloo."

The item then carried.

When a vote for $3,000,000 for the Hudson Bay railway came up, Sir Henry Drayton (Conservative-West York) voiced a strong opposition to consideration of this item.

Many members, he stated, who were interested in the matter and desired to discuss it were absent from the city.

Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals, replied that he had previously intimated that the item would be under discussion on Friday.

"The country is entitled to a full discussion of this item and it is going to get it," retorted Sir Henry.

The country was entitled to know how much the project as a whole would require, whether or not it was necessary to do more than simply complete the line, and whether or not terminal and harbor facilities would be built by the Government.

Dr. Dunning pointed out that notice had been given a week ago that the Hudson Bay railway matter would come up on the next occasion Railway Department estimates were before the House. He agreed to let the item stand.

The citizens of Peterboro will be interested in learning that the Rotary Club's summer carnival will be a week's carnival this year, beginning on July 5th. Arrangements have been made with Mr. Harry W. Lottridge by which he will bring his splendid array of attractions here under Rotary auspices, and a week's fun and entertainment can be looked for by citizens generally. PROPERTY COMMITTEE.

Coal Contract Was Awarded To H. B. Taylor and Son.

The Property committee of the City Council met for a short session last night. The chairman, Aldrman Hancock, was instructed to have sewer connections put into the house of J. W. Kearns on Elm street. He was also given the authority to take whatever steps necessary to having the boiler in the city buildings put in shape.

The sealed tenders were opened for the next year's coal supply, and the contract was let to H. B. Taylor and Sons for fifty tons of coal for the city building. The chairman and caretaker were instructed to see the coal before it was delivered and if it did not suit to make other arrangements.

'Oh! That's Terrible!' Says Joyce When Told

NEW YORK, June 5.— Joyce Hawley was stunned when told of sentence imposed on Earl Carroll by Judge Goddard.

"Oh, that's terrible!" said Miss Hawley, who was at her home. "Are you sure he doesn't get his choice of the jail sentence or fine?" she asked.

Informed that both penalties were meted out, she again expressed incredulity, but added: "Oh, well, there's nothing to do about it."

Sorrow's crown of sorrow is remembering happier things.

An 'Old Fashioned' Girl Catches Hair In Machine

NEW YORK, June 5.—(Associated Press.)—Jean Weiner was seriously injured when her long hair became entangled in a bookbinding machine yesterday.

Fellow workers said they often had urged her to bob her hair, but she had insisted on adhering to the "old fashioned way." Her hair, done in two rolls at the sides of her head, became loosened and was drawn into the machine at which she was working. She suffered severe lacerations of the head and face.

FIGHTING SPEECH.

Makes Reply To His Opponents Who Read Him Out.

MANCHESTER, England, June 5.—(Canadian Press.) —"I have no intention of accepting my dismissal from the Liberal party," declared Mr. Lloyd George, Parliamentary Liberal chief in a fighting speech before the Manchester Reform Club to-day.

The speech was in answer to the recent attack by Lord Oxford and Asquith, head of the Liberal party, and his followers, who virtually read Mr. Lloyd George out of the party, or at least out of his leadership in the House of Commns.

GIRL'S HEROISM SAVES HORSES

Fifteen Year Old Lass Leads Eight From Burning Stable.

INCENDIARY FIRE.

TORONTO, June 5 (Canadian Press).—Eight horses belonging to George Coles, Limited, caterers, Yonge Street, owe their lives to the coolness and courage of 15-year-old Jennie Wilson, 17 Cumberland Street, who led them to safety through thick smoke from their burning stable in the rear of the Wilson home last night.

It is suspected that the fire was of incendiary origin, as it was the second outbreak during the evening, firemen having left after extinguishing a fire.

The fire was discovered by the girl. She ran out of the house calling to her father, who is employed as a stableman. The flames were spreading rapidly as she reached the stable, and the yard was black with smoke. Inside she could hear the stamping and whinneying of the horses. Throwing open the stable door she released the animals after some difficulty and several narrow escapes of being kicked, and led them to the open air. There were four horses on the ground floor and another four on the second floor. Pushing through the burning building, she managed to free the rest of the animals and bring them to safety down the inclined stairway.

No Detour On Highway If Drivers Co-operate

If motor car owners will co-operate with the workmen on the highway there will be no need for a detour while construction is going on. This is the word given the officials of the Peterboro Branch of the Ontario Motor League, who have been in communication with officials of the Dufferin Construction Company. The company officials say that it will be necessary for the people to drive most carefully past all workmen, as they will be unable to hear aproaching cars, due to the noise of the machinery.

Work on the link of the highway between Fraserville and Bailieboro is being done with the most up-to-date equipment, and is proceeding rapidly.

Wise men talk because they have something to say; fools, because they wish to say something.

TWENTY ONTARIO DEPARTMENT STORES JOIN IN NEW MERGER

More Stores To Join Later—Present Turnover of Ten Million Dollars Expected To Grow — Control Stays in Canada—Official Announcements Soon.

Called "Canadian Department Stores Limited."

FEATURES OF BIG STORE MERGER

NAME OF COMPANY—Canadian Department Stores, Limited.
NUMBER OF STORES—20 now. Several to be added.
LOCATION OF STORES—Ottawa, Napanee, Galt, Woodstock, Stratford, Chatham, London, Sarnia, Brockville, Belleville, Picton, Lindsay, Peterboro, Sudbury, North Bay, Midland, Port Arthur, Sault Ste. Marie, St. Catharines, Hamilton.
OBJECTS—To effect economies in buying, to put in new capital to modernize stores and to enforce modern merchandising methods.
MANAGEMENT—Personnel to be announced later. Toronto investment house behind merger. Canadian capital to control.

The Financial Post states this week:

A score of Ontario's leading department stores have joined forces in a new chain store merger that starts out as one of the largest merchandising forces in Canada. Under the name of Canadian Department Stores, twenty large stores in the leading Ontario cities outside of Toronto, have merged in one company which will own the stores outright and operate them as a single organization. Other existing stores are to be added to the chain and new ones will be built. The work of bringing the merger to fruition has been going on quietly for some months and it is now learned by The Financial Post that negotiations have reached the point where only the final details of the merger have to be carried through and the financing, which is well in hand, completed. Interests, associated with a leading Toronto investment house, have been instrumental in effecting the merger.

Ten Million Turnover.

The twenty stores which have already entered the merger and the four additional stores, which are expected to join practically at once, have an annual turnover of over $10,000,000, which Canadian Department Stores hopes to increase by at least 25 per cent. practically at once.

The merger is not in the nature of the formation of a buying group such as was announced last fall and in which most of the stores now in the merger were interested. The purchase of the stores has been outright by Canadian Department Stores, Ltd., and all activities, including selling and buying, will be managed in each individual store under the direction of a central head office in Toronto.

About Nine Million Involved.

Estimates of the amount of money involved in the transaction run to about $9,000,000, this representing not only purchase price of real estate, plant and inventories but also new capital to be put into the enterprise.

The stores which have been taken into the merger, according to the information reaching The Financial Post, are as follows:

Robinson Co., Napanee.
Wilkinson's, Galt.
Cole & Son, Woodstock.
Duncan Ferguson Co., Stratford.
Austin's, Chatham.
Chapman's, London.
Geddes Bros., Sarnia.
A. A. Fournier, Ottawa.
Robt. Wright & Co., Brockville.
Ritchie Co., Belleville.
Bristol's, Picton.
Dundas and Flavelle, Lindsay.
Cressman Co., Peterborough.
Stafford's, Ltd., Sudbury.
Beamish & Smith, North Bay.
Beamish & Smith, Midland.
Matthews & Co., Port Arthur.
Bryan's, Sault Ste. Marie.
Maclaren & Co., St. Catharines.
Pratt & Co., Hamilton.

Build Another Store Now.

In addition to these stores negotiations are under way that are almost certain to bring into the chain at least four additional established stores. It is planned also to build, at once, at least one new store in a large Ontario city.

Real estate as well as inventories, have been taken over in practically every case. This is regarded by the organizers of the new company as a factor of strength as most of the stores purchased are old established institutions that have been a generation or more in finding and acquiring the logical department store location in each of their respective cities.

Expert Buying Economies.

One of the chief reasons for the merger is stated to be the economies that can be effected in buying. It is estimated that from fifteen to thirty per cent will be saved by Canadian Department Stores in its buying. Considerable savings have been effected by the stores in group buying, but these have been influenced by some antagonism that has developed among manufacturers towards group buying for stores individually owned.

Further economies will be made, it is hoped, in merchandising. Several thousand dollars will be spent in each store in installing more modern equipment and in other plant improvements that will help to speed up sales and reduce costs. More varied stocks will be carried but the total of the stock on hand in each store will be reduced, the organization of a central buying and warehousing, enabling quicker distribution of merchandise.

Head Office Management.

The head office organization will be operated, according to estimates that have been made, at but a small fraction of the larger economies looked for. Its functions will be to do the buying; to control advertising and merchandising policies; to conduct a research department; and to handle the financial arrangements. Arrangements have been made with several outstanding men in the retail field to take over the management of the business, thus giving to each individual store the benefit of the experience, research and control of men of broader experience than is available to any small store operator. On the other hand, the basis of the financing of the enterprise is such as to retain the interest and services of those of the former owners, who may still want to continue active business.

Incidentally control of the enterprise will remain in Canada, although some American capital may participate in the first mortgage financing.

Not First Similar Chain.

Canadian Department Stores will not be Canada's first department store chain. The T. Eaton Co., operates stores in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg, and mail order houses in Toronto, Moncton, Regina and Saskatoon, as well as groceterias in several Western cities. The Hudson's Bay Co. has stores in Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver, Victoria, Yorkton, Nelson and other points. David Spencer & Co., of Vancouver, is also in Victoria, Nanaimo and New Westminster. The Hill store at Orangeville is one of several stores in that area. The wholesale house of Gordon, Mackay & Co., Toronto, of which Sir James Woods is president, owns, it is understood, many stores throughout Ontario.

Department store chains have grown in importance in the United States of recent years and a number of them are operating in the principal cities across the line.

Public announcement of the merger and of the terms of the financial arrangements is expected within the next few weeks.

Noblemen Fight About Attentions Given Wife Of One Men Seriously Hurt and Woman Commits Suicide

VIENNA, Austria, June 5 (Canadian Press). — A shooting affray between two noblemen, one of them her husband, has culminated in the suicide of the beautiful Baroness Klinger in the baronial castle at Raab, Lower Austria. The Russian Prince Cyril Vladimir Orloff and Baron Klinger were participants in the shooting, and from reports received, the affair was the culmination of objections by the Baron to allegedly undue attentions paid to his wife by the Prince, who was a visitor at the castle.

Both Baron Klinger and the Russian Prince are reported in a serious condition today. The Baron's condition is described as "not" hopeless. The Prince's right arm was shattered and will be amputated.

One version is that Baron Klinger, who had invited Orloff and the other guests to a fishing expedition, engaged in a violent quarrel with the prince on the grounds of the castle. Then followed a fight with revolvers in which the Baron received a bullet in the lung and Prince Orloff was shot in the arm.

Mr. Meighen Tells Why He Did Not Visit Quebec in Election Fight.

MONTREAL, June 5 (Canadian Press). — About 10,000 people thronged the Forum here last night in a demonstration arranged by the various Conservative organizations throughout the province for the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen. Elaborate preparations had been made and some of the outstanding parliamentarians of the Conservative party had accompanied their leader to the eastern metropolis. The leader of the Opposition in the course of his address, dwelt on the circumstances of his not having spoken in Quebec during the last Federal campaign, and declared that those who were in charge of the campaign in this province had been prompted by lofty motives in refraining from inviting him, feeling that Mr. Meighen's presence might be made the means of arousing past prejudices. That purpose had not succeeded, however, for his absence, he said, had served only to intensify those prejudices.

Salvation Army Band Leads Procession of Catholic Men —People's Chimes in St. J ohn's Tower Join in Greeting—Child ren Sang.

Take One—Afternoon design—Send down proof for head .....

One of the heartiest welcomes ever accorded a distinguished visitor to the city was extended last evening to the Apostolic Delegate of Canada and Newfoundland, when he arrived here for the celebration by the Roman Catholic population of the hundredth anniversary of the saying of the first Mass in this city. The chiming of church bells, the songs of little children, the waving of flags, the music of bands, the glow and color of myriads of bright lights, and the sight of thousands of welcoming faces, all combined with a very fine evening to give the visitor a first impression of the city that he will doubtless never forget. Behind it all was the spirit of friendly co-operation and of kindly welcome that animated, not alone the Catholics of the city, but their Protestant friends and neighbors as well, many of whom took part in the welcome The distinguished prelate, with his dark, keen, kindly face lighted by a bright smile, stepped from the train into the midst of a concourse of friends, and his very evident appreciation of his welcome, as he made his way along the station platform with hand upraised in benediction, was an evidence of the manner in which he responded to the spontaneous reception accorded him.

His Excellency the Most Reverend Pietro Di Maria, Titular Archbishop of Iconium, and Apostolic Delegate from the Holy See to Canada and Newfoundland, arrived in the city last evening at 8.10 at the C.N.R. Station, in a private coach kindly placed at his disposal by Sir Henry Thornton. He was accompanied by his secretary, Rev. Father Lemons, and by several of the clergy of the district who had joined him along the route. He was welcomed at the station by Bishop O'Brien, a number of the priests of the city, and by a group of representative Catholic men of the district.

Long before his arrival, the Catholic men of the city and district had been gathering for the huge parade which followed him on his way to St. Peter's Cathedral, a parade containing nearly seven hundred men from the city and district, marshaled by Mr. W. Bennett, and led by Messrs. J. J. Duffus and M. Clancy. Proceeding from the station, following the cars which contained the Delegate, Bishop O'Brien and several of the clergy, the procession made its way along Charlotte Street, to George Street, turning up Hunter Street to the Cathedral. Accompanying them were the bands of the Peterborough Rangers and the Salvation Army, who played splendidly at the station and along the route of the parade. Pausing at the head of Hunter Street, the band of the Rangers played accompaniments for the chorus of eight hundred children which awaited His Excellency.

A bright memory for the distinguished visitor should be the thought of this very effective pause in his route from the station to the Cathedral. Massed on the green lawn, beside the grey walls of the staunch old stone church, where their forbears for generations have worshipped, with the veiled statue of the Kingly Saviour rising behind them, were nearly eight hundred of the small children of the city schools, waving tiny Union Jacks and Papal emblems, as they sang in the soft twilight, a "Welcome" song, to the unique and effective accompaniment of the band music and the chiming of the Cathedral bells, the same bells that were cast in Spain a hundred years ago, their silver note ringing out a glad greeting last night to the visitor from over the sea.

While these bells had a part in the welcome, other bells, the People's Chimes at St. John's Church, also joined in the greeting. Their ringing on this occasion was done through the kindness of the vicar of St. John's Church, and the co-operation of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Johnston of Downie Street, another instance of mutual thoughful interest in the visit of a distinguished prelate.

Accepting with a pleased smile the large bouquet of beautiful cream roses tendered the Delegate at this point by school children of the city, represented by small James Moloney of the Sacred Heart Parish, and little Edward O'Brien, from the parish of the Immaculate Conception, His Excellency proceeded to St. Mary's Convent, where he donned vestments for the ceremonies in the Cathedral. Entering the church a short time later, attended by a large retinue of acolytes and priests of the diocese, he knelt for a few minutes at the prie dieu placed near the door, then made his way up the aisle to the sanctuary, where the white altars were blazing with many candelabra and arranged with a profusion of pink roses. The Cathedral was packed to the doors.

An address of welcome to His Excellency was then read by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, in which the Bishop referred to his extreme pleasure at the Delegate's visit, and outlined the reasons for the present celebration.

"Your Excellency has been welcomed to-night by a most loyal and faithful body of Catholic clergy and people; we welcome you personally, and we welcome you as the immediate representatie of our Holy Father in this Dominion.

"Distance—a great distance measured in miles—lies between us and the See of Peter; but devotion to holy faith and unswerving loyalty to Peter's successor—to his counsels as well as his commands—makes us part and parcel of the great one Holy, Catholic Church of Christ."

Going on to speak of the excellent spirit of faith alive and active which manifests itself in the lives of the Catholic popularion of the city, His Lordship said:

"Our lives, too, are cast in peaceful and happy surroundings, we have a splendid district to live in, and our

HORSE SUFFERING FROM STARVATION

Ennismore Man Drives It To Town—Inspector Orders Its Destruction.

An Ennismore man who drove into Peterborough in a buggy drawn by a horse in a decidedly emaciated condition received a rude surprise when he found himself the recipient of a visit from the Humane Society Inspector, R. C. Smith, whose attention had been drawn to the condition of the animal.

After examining the horse, Mr. Smith pronounced it to be suffering from overwork, starvation, neglect, and old age, and he ordered it to be destroyed. The horse was taken to the incinerator, where its sufferings were speedily ended.

"BOOTS AND HER BUDDIES"

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

WILLIAM LYON PHELPS writes a very entertaining and informing section of "Scribner's Magazine" every month, under the caption, "As I Like It." In it there is a little bit of everything, all of which is artistically arranged and tastefully served, so that the most critical could scarcely have anything else but praise for so palatable a dish as he sets before the reading public, month by month. He makes me think of a bee in a very large garden, which is well stocked with all sorts of growth. There are flowers, and fruits, and vegetables; and there are weeds also. He flits from flower to fruit, and from fruit to vegetable; and at times he even makes contact with the weeds. In one place he gets honey, and in another he gets disappointment, but all the while he is giving us pleasure. Whether it is the honey he brings from his many excursions, or the delightful manner in which he moves from one thing to another that gives most satisfaction I am not quite sure, but in either case it is highly profitable to be in his company once a month.

VIEWS AND REVIEWS.

There are brief reviews and helpful criticisms of books and plays. The books we can read anywhere in the wide world if we have the desire to possess and the money to purchase them. It matters not whether we live in some lonely part of the earth or in some congested center of population, books will come to us anywhere. But it is different with plays. They don't usually come to us. If we want to see them we must go to them. And therein lies the advantage of living in a great city. When a man tells you that he has heard nine Wagner operas during the season now drawing to a close he comes dangerously near tempting you to commit the sin of covetousness. And the temptation does not lose any of its power as you listen to the confession, "This is, however, not the era of great singers." Even with the talent available who would not want to be living near enough to the heart of things so that they could take in as many as nine Wagner operas in one season? And think of the playhouses and the plays to which you could go for recreation, inspiration or amusement. To have lived within reach of all these things, though far removed from them now, makes you sometimes long for the privileges of a great city.

LEADING THE WORLD IN INDECENCY.

It does not lessen the pangs of regret that a certain set of circumstances, over which we have seemed to have little control, has been responsible for removing us from "The White Lights" to read in the New York WORLD a quotation from Samuel Taylor Moor in THE INDEPENDENT "It is difficult to believe that one-half of the population of the nation's greatest metropolis is one hundred per cent. moron, but that is indicated by the circulation statistics of such an impartial organization as the Audit Bureau of Circulations."

Mr. Phelps says "I find it quite easy to believe this. Look at the list of plays running in New York theatres. A large number of them are so abominably indecent that they seem to be written of criminals, for criminals, and by criminals: others are so incredibly inane that they seem to be written of imbeciles, for imbeciles, and by imbeciles The late William Archer, after praising many things in the New York theatres, said that we were leading the world in indecency: and Mr. Cyril Maude told me that a certain play, now drawing packed houses in New York, was worse than anything he had ever seen or heard in Paris or London. Neither Mr. Maude nor Mr. Archer could be called squeamish or prudish. Indecency has curious by-products. A play called "Puppy Love" is praised simply because it is a "clean" farce. True enough, but it appears to be written for idiotic infants."

THE MOST USEFUL MEN.

Among the many gripping things in "As I Like It," here is one, so situated, that you would almost think that it had tumbled in accidentally. "Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, one of the most useful men in the world, has written for the American Library Association a small pamphlet called "Religion in Everyday Life." It is characterized by that combination of spirituality and practical wisdom that we rightly associate with the man himself."

Simple though that paragraph is it contains one of the finest tributes ever paid to any man of modern times. To have lived well enough, to get a writer, as sane and as able as William Lyon Phelps, to tabulate you as 'one of the most useful men in the world,' is the finest compliment any man could desire.

Say what you will, there is an expressiveness in many slang phrases hard to excel, if, indeed, equal, in what is generally considered good English. In other words, 'it gets there' when the more highly finished style often seems to get nowhere. And so, we know what is intended when one person says of another person, 'He is a useless stick.' Surely the Bible must have been thinking of such people when it speaks of some who 'cumber the ground.'

You may have to live your life in comparative obscurity, far removed from crowds and all that goes with crowds, and your name may never appear in public print because you are unknown outside the narrow circle of your immediate friends, but if you live up to the light you have, ever seeking more light, you will one day have it discovered to you that you have been among the most useful men in the world.

THE WEAKNESS OF STRONG MEN.

Our good friend, Mr. Phelps says: "Well, Herbert Spencer wrote some books on philosophy that exerted a wide influence; but his remarks on Raphael's paintings are worse than nothing."

* * *

And the Ohio State Journal says: "Every man who has become famous for something ought to pray for strength not to be interviewed on other things."

Soft and Smart

IN A CERTAIN old Book, a man of very wide experience has written something about the value of 'a soft answer,' which I was reminded of in reading of John Galsworthy in Scribner's Magazine. It seems that a New York newspaper had stated that he was in the United States, writing a novel of American life. In reply to this news item Mr. Galsworthy wrote a brief and charming letter in which he delicately suggested that with the trifling exception that it was not a novel but a play, and not on American but on English life, the news item was absolutely accurate. And yet they say that the English have no sense of humor.

Yet there are some people who seem to think that because a man is an authority in one department of life or thought he is, by virtue of that fact constituted an authority on everything else. But such reasoning has little, if any, logic in it. A physician may be well qualified to prescribe for the needs of my body, and I may be fortunate in having him near enough to do so, but that does not necessarily qualify him to prescribe for the needs of my soul. And because a man has made a success of building cheap motor cars that is no reason why he should be looked upon as an authority on every other subject under the sun. If the public will be so foolish as to put these men in such an impossible position, these men ought to prove their greatness by refusing the very doubtful honor thus thrust upon them.

Take Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, whose voice can be heard over the radio every Sunday afternoon during a certain period of the year. There can be no doubt as to his greatness in the pulpit or upon the lecture platform. He is one of the most interesting public speakers of our time. It would not matter to me what he was speaking on I should enjoy hearing him just because of the thrill that comes from listening to eloquence. And his answers to the questions presented to him are really remarkable as an exhibition of ready speech: but while they are mostly all very clever, strictly speaking, many of them are not answers at all. It has always seemed to me that the only excuse for doing what he does during the question period of his meetings is that everything he does is interesting, even if you feel that it sometimes comes very near being foolish.

WHEN GREEK MEETS THE REST OF US.

In a certain great daily paper, the name of which I shall refrain from mentioning so that 'The Gentle Reader' might test his intelligence by attempting to determine its name for himself, this very interesting news item appeared the other day.

"Milk drinkers are only cows in human form, Dr. Stavros Damoglu, Greek vegetarian physician and resident of London, told the International Vegetarian Union at Central Hall, Westminster, on Saturday. He placed both milk and eggs on his list of banned articles of food. 'I would say without fear of contradiction that anyone who indulges in large quantities of cows' milk develops the brains and mentality of a cow, and is only a cow in human form,' said the vegetarian apostle.

"Is there any greater centre of infection and disease than eggs?"

I wonder if the reason for having so many goats in human form is that they have been indulging in large quantities of goats' milk! Perhaps that is a foolish question, but if it is, it does not seem any more foolish than the sight of some vegetarians falling out among themselves. I have always had the idea that the cow was also a vegetarian, and it scarcely seems to be the milk of human kindness that one vegetarian should say such harsh things about the milk of another vegetarian. The same might not be said for the hen since she can scarcely be called a strict vegetarian, but it does seem to me a big task even for an eminent vegetarian to attempt when he tries to get some of us lay off eating eggs.

One of these days we shall waken up to discover that some learned authority in Timbuktu has been telling the International Association of Arabs that 'anyone who indulges in large quantities of water for any other purpose than for taking a bath is likely to develop the mentality of a camel.' I must confess that I don't know much about camels, not even the kind that go up in smoke, but since I happen to be fond of both milk and water I am going to continue using both until such times as the Government passes a law prohibiting the use of such liquids. Most governments, not now in power, have been guilty at times of passing some very silly laws, and so no one need be surprised if some government passes a law prohibiting the use of milk because of the harm it does to the mentality of some people. If some men were compelled to speak only as the result of their own experience is it not just possible that lots of things would be left unsaid?

Churches and Churchmen

(By I. Seewell.)

IN NEW YORK CITY there is a very famous church, standing on one of the most famous avenues in the world, and it has just called to its pulpit another famous British preacher. It is known as Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. The preacher who has accepted a call to become its minister is Rev. Henry Howard, D.D., formerly of London and Australia. On announcing his acceptance of the call he said:

"Before I preach, I want to say a few words to this congregation. I do not know whether they are in order; but love does not observe order. It goes straight ahead and speaks its mind.

"I feel that it would be an affectation of the worst sort if I were to pretend indifference to the action of this church this week. A man would need to have a head of wood or a heart of stone not to be moved by the graciousness of your call. I don't suppose that I ever shall understand it. Four months ago I came within your gates a stranger. As the Scotch say, I lost my heart to you. Where the heart goes the love goes, and where the love goes the life goes. So it has come to pass that I, a sojourner, a passer-by, on the way to my own Australian land, have been called to stay. I am taking the line of least resistance and remaining.

"It is all very wonderful and beautiful, your American hospitality. You have lifted it to the highest degree. So, as long as God pleases, I will be among you as one who serves. From your gray-haired saints to your rollicking boys and girls, I hope that you will draw on me as on one who shall help solve problems, lighten burdens and brighten paths. I reciprocate your love. You know the difficulties of my situation, and so I ask your prayers.

Pray for my soul. More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of. Wherefore, let thy voice
Rise like a fountain for me night and day.
For what are men better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friends?

"I rejoice in you and I want to be of help, particularly to the young. The old saints among you have been listening to preaching for years and can look after themselves. But, if I correctly diagnose conditions in this country from reading your newspapers, your young people are a subject for grave concern. So, from the chapter in Acts that we have read together this day, describing the descent of the Holy Spirit, I will take this thought: "For the promise is unto you, and to your children," I would urge the importance to the Nation of its young life.

How to Save the Life of the Nation.

"Your great American statesman, Thomas Jefferson, who drew up the Declaration of Independence, was once asked by Daniel Webster: 'What is to be the salvation of the American Nation?'

"Jefferson, who was a Unitarian, turned to Webster and answered: 'The Nation is going to be saved, if she is to be saved at all, by teaching her children to love the Lord Jesus Christ.'

"The assertion was true and is true for all lands and all times. I do not suppose that there is a church in Christendom that would not endorse Jefferson's view. Yet our conduct belies our belief. We have neglected our little people and have allowed them to drift out of the Church. We have proceeded on the assumption that they must have an experience of wrong-doing and then come back through tears and misery to their Father's house. But from this they need never have strayed.

"Horace Bushnell in his 'Christian Nurture' speaks of two methods of growth that should go on simultaneously in every Christian Church. The first is population from within; the second, conquest from without. No amount of conquest from without can make up for lack of population from within. It is vain to go on missionary enterprises abroad while leaving untaken these fortresses in the rear.

The Dangers of the Plastic Stage.

"I urge parents to see that children have the best handling now in their plastic stage. I once had a lesson in the value of the plastic stage. It was on a Monday, a day on which I am always an extinct volcano and never do anything to speak of, except go out into the air and recharge my batteries. I was doing this in Melbourne, when a lay preacher passed me. I asked where he was going.

"'To buy a plaster of Paris statue,' he said.

"'I had supposed that they were all imported, and I said so.

"'No, we make them,' he replied. 'He took me to a studio with an Italian name over the door. We knocked, but there was no answer. Then we knocked again and yet again. After we had lingered about ten minutes, a young Italian opened the door and, with native politeness, apologized for making us wait. He showed us a block on a board, which he said, contained a model of an angel in plaster of Paris. He had been working on it for a week and had not dared to leave it at our first knock.

"'If I had opened the door then,' he said, 'my angel would have hardened into hopeless deformity.'

"The young Italian pointed to a heap of wingless angels and headless cherubs, 'cast as rubbish to the void.' 'These are past redemption,' he told us.

"I looked at the beautiful finished work in the studio, then back at the mutilated pieces. I had a lesson for the parents in my congregation, and the next week I preached it. If Sunday was wet or hot, or if friends came in, nothing must be allowed to draw away the children from religious instruction for they were in the plastic stage. I thought that it was a fine lesson.

Redemption from a Ruined Youth.

"But I had five college professors in my church, and one of them was a professor of chemistry. He used to rake me fore and aft for my illustrations which I had not learned to verify by science. The next day I met my chemistry professor.

"'Hullo, I want you,' he called. 'I want to deal with your illustration yesterday.'

"I protested, but he said that truth was mighty and must prevail. He carried me off as a lamb for the slaughter.

"'That was a wonderfully pathetic story, but it was all wrong,' he began.

"'What was wrong?'

"'Your Italian artist may know art, but he doesn't know science. That pile of cherubs and angels was not past redemption. Plaster of Paris can be used again.'

"'How can it be done?' I asked.

"'If you put plaster of Paris through the furnace, you can reduce it to its original condition.'

"'Many thanks,' said I. 'You have not spoiled my illustration; you have perfected it. If the children miss their golden opportunity, they must go through the furnace of trial or difficulty or loss before it can again be theirs.'

"'Well, I've made you a present,' he said as we parted. I pass this on to you.

"If children slip through your hands, they may not be lost—who shall say so? But to get back to where they stand to-day, they must endure disciplines.

The Power of the Bible in Young Life.

"I wish that here in America you could get the Bible into the school curriculum—not all of it, perhaps, but those salient passages that catch the mind and sink into the heart. Children who learn the Bible at that age never forget it. All unconscious of remembering, they yet will hold it fast. If you have visited people in prisons and hospitals, as I have done, you know the great advantage you have in giving the message of the Gospel where there is already some knowledge of the Bible. Plant your seed, however discouraging the conditions. By and by the harvest will appear.

"In Australia, we have a kind of acacia tree called the wattle. Its seeds are as hard as buckshot. They must be boiled before they are planted, to give them any chance. For years, their hard capsule protects them. But strong men have cut down these trees and burned them. Then the winter rains have fallen, and later the spring sun has shone, and up have come thousands of wattles. What has happened? A generation of wattles of a hundred years before has germinated. First the rain, then the glory of harvest.

"Put into the child the great truths of this Book. They may lie in him twenty years, fifty years, without a sign. Then fires of discipline, showers of tears may come. The dews of the Spirit fall. The seed germinates, and the harvest blooms in radiance.

"May God help you to help me gather young life into the Church and make it as never before in its wonderful history a center of sweet and wholesome vitality!"

We English are a more individual people than the Americans. . . We cannot be stunned into accepting things because they are incessantly repeated to us,

A LESSON IN RECONCILIATION

Text: Genesis 33:1-11.

And Jacob lifted up his eyes, and looked, and, behold, Esau came, and with him four hundred men. And he divided the children unto Leah, and unto Rachel, and unto the two handmaids.

And he put the handmaids and their children foremost, and Leah and her children after, and Rachel and Joseph hindermost.

And he passed over before them, and bowed himself to the ground seven times until he came near to his brother.

And Esau ran to meet him, and embraced him, and fell on his neck, and kissed him and they wept.

And he lifted up his eyes, and saw the women and the children and said, Who are those with thee? And he said, The children which God hath graciously given thy servant.

Then the handmaidens came near, they and their children, and they bowed themselves.

And Leah also with her children came near, and bowed themselves and after came Joseph near and Rachael, and they bowed themselves.

And he said, What meanest thou by all this drove which I met? And he said, These are to find grace in the sight of my lord.

And Esau said, I have enough, my brother: keep that thou hast unto thyself.

And Jacob said, Nay, I pray thee, if now I have found grace in thy sight, then receive my present at my hand: for therefore I have seen thy face, as though I had seen the face of God, and thou wast pleased with me.

Take, I pray thee, my blessing that is brought to thee because God hath dealt graciously with me, and because I have enough. And he urged him, and he took it.

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for June 6. A Lesson in Reconciliation. Genesis 33: 1-11.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D.D.
Editor of The Congregationalist.

Reconciliation implies misunderstanding, discord, and strife. Sometimes strife and discord arise purely from misunderstanding, but more often they have their origin in distinct acts of unfairness, selfishness, and aggression.

Jacob, many years before the incident of this present lesson, had deeply and grievously wronged his brother Esau. Through treachery and deceit he had robbed his brother of the birthright. All that this implies is not perhaps entirely clear to modern readers, but it is clear that Jacob had wronged his brother about as deeply as one man could wrong another.

Jacob Changes.

During the years that had elapsed since then Jacob had changed considerably for the better. He who had been a trickster and a traitor himself had been treated treacherously. His character was a strange mixture of good and evil, but on the whole the good predominated, and he was returning now to the former scenes of his life a much better man.

The evil that men do, however, not only lives after them but it lives on through the years even when their characters and purposes have changed for the better. Jacob, therefore, had reason to fear the results of his former misdeeds.

Esau was approaching him, and he saw that Esau had a large company of retainers with him. What would be the nature of this meeting? Would Esau come with a spirit of a long-nourished, long-unsatisfied revenge, waiting the opportunity to strike?

Jacob did not know, but nothing indicates the change for the better that had taken place in him more than the fact that in this crisis his thoughts are at last unselfish.

His chief consideration is for the women and children, though he shows still a measure of self-interest in putting the handmaids and their children foremost. Leah and her children next, and the especially beloved Rachel and Joseph last of all, as he approaches the zone of danger. Then, daring to meet the danger himself, he passed over before them all to meet Esau.

Large-Spirited.

How different was the reception from that which he feared! And how Esau showed himself on this occasion! Kindliness of spirit and a sense of kinship dominated whatever vengeful feelings Esau may have had during the years.

He showed himself a man of magnanimity, and running to meet his brother Jacob embraced him, fell on his neck, and kissed him. The record "and they wept" expresses much. Both men had a great deal to weep over.

Then came the introductions and the presentation of Jacob's gift. Esau declined at first to receive any present, but, being urged, he accepted it.

One may note particularly the words in which Jacob referred to this. In urging Esau to accept his present he said, "Forasmuch as I have seen thy face, as one seeth the face of God, and said, "Forasmuch as I have seen thy thou wast pleased with me." Jacob evidently recognized the divine quality of human forgiveness and magnanimity.

The completeness of Esau's forgiveness is noteworthy. Forgiveness is never real unless it is complete. Probably even explanations and the recalling of the past would have completely marred the occasion. It was one in which forgiveness meant forgetting and in which fellowship meant ignoring much that had happened of which both men had reason to be ashamed.

Di-inity in Forgi-ing.

There is a divine art of forgiving and forgetting which every man who would perfect his character ought to seek in the fullest way to cultivate.

Can we fail to see in this magnanimity, "as one seeth the face of God," a symbol of that larger magnanimity and love in which God through Christ accepts us and forgives our waywardness and our rebellion

We fear to approach him; we feel the justness of the wrath that might fall upon us, but when we come in humility, seeking his forgiveness, it is only the richness and power of his love that we feel.

My God is reconciled;
His pardoning voice I hear;
He owns me for his child;
I can no longer fear;
With confidence I now draw nigh,
And Father, Abba, Father, cry.

This, of course, is a statement of what seemingly happens. What actually occurs is not the reconciliation of God to us but our reconciliation to him. He is full of love and graciousness toward sinners and awaits only our acceptance of his grace.

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER

HERE ARE TWO STORIES, both of which go to show that however disappointing some things are in themselves, they eventually turn out for the best. Bernard Gilpin, accused of heresy, set out for London to be tried before Bishop Bonner. His favourite maxim was, "All things are for the best." Upon his journey an accident happened, and he broke his leg. "Is all for the best now?" asked a scornful companion. "I still believe so," Gilpin replied. And so it proved: for, before he was able to resume his journey, Queen Mary died, and, instead of going to London to be burned, he returned home in triumph.

* * *

The other story is of a young artist who produced a picture of much merit, which was greatly admired by all. His heart was swelled with vanity. He laid aside his palette and pencil, and sat daily before his easel, admiring the offspring of his own genius. One morning, he found his beautiful creations expunged from the canvas. He wept bitterly. His master appeared, and said, "I have done this for your benefit: the picture was ruining you." "How so?" demanded the pupil, "Because, in the admiration of your own talents, you were losing your love of the art itself. Take your pencil and try again the youth dried his tears, seized his pencil, and produced a masterpiece, which, but for this severe trial, would, in all probability, never have been executed. There are times when God deals with us after the manner of this ancient painter.

CADET INSPECTION.

The interest shown in the annual inspection of the cadets of the Collegiate Institute and the Public Schools in Central Park yesterday seemed to indicate that the opposition to such training evidenced in certain quarters is not shared by the parents of Peterboro school boys.

The clean, smart appearance of the youngsters, the steadiness shown by even the smallest boys, the alertness and precision with which the various movements were performed, were in their turn convincing evidence of the benefit of the training received in cadet drill.

It was refreshing to hear Colonel Hill, the inspecting officer, state that the cadet movement is on the increase, that 120,000 Canadian school boys are now participating in the benefit of such drill, and that it was hoped that it would be possible to secure a larger grant from the Government and revive the cadet summer camp.

Congratulations are due to all who had charge of the training of the boys inspected here yesterday.

The officers and non-commissioned officers of the Public School Battalion deserve especial credit for the manner in which they handled their duties.

The Queen Alexandra company, of course, are to be felicitated upon winning the coveted Denne trophy for the second year in succession, and the boys of the other schools, not only for their earnest efforts to win first prize, but for their sportsmanlike reception of the victorious Queen Alexandra boys.

THE CHEMONG SPEEDWAY.

Even more seasonable that the garb of Peterboro's citizens—that has necessarily had more of a winter appearance than usual—are the complaints of reckless driving on the Chemong Road.

It is stated to the Examiner that the road is infested on occasions with so many "steppers-on-the-gas" that prudent motorists prefer to take another road to reach Chemong Park, and more cautious people don't go at all.

There is only one way to stop such conduct, and that is to make an example of the offenders.

If the record of accidents on this short stretch of roadway is not sufficient to cause reckless drivers to respect their own safety and that of other motorists, the police magistrate should be given a chance to show what he can do.

Chemong Park is a natural playground for the people of this city.

It is popular, and would be more so if citizens were satisfied that they could reach it and return without being forced into the ditch by some scatter-brained individual who chooses to drive his car as if he were the only human being on the highway.

If he were, there are many people who would suggest that nature be allowed to take its course, but, unfortunately, he isn't, and for the benefit of the others something should be done to make conditions safer.

There is no reason whatever why Chemong Park should be cut off because a few unthinking motorists choose to mistake the road leading to it for the Indianapolis Speedway.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF SERVICE.

Peterboro citizens, regardless of their religious affiliations, should be deeply interested in the ceremonies which are being held by the Roman Catholic community marking the one hundredth anniversary of the celebration of the first mass in Peterboro.

The visit of the Apostolic Delegate is a recognition of the importance of the occasion, which is not only the centennial of the first mass here but which marks the conclusion of one hundred years of faithful service in the interest of the temporal and spiritual welfare of a large portion of the population.

What that service has meant to this community can best be estimated by trying to imagine the effect of the complete wiping out not only of the Roman Catholic Churches of the district but also of the many fine institutions that have been established during the century.

A little over 100 years ago the first priest was appointed to serve here, and mass was first celebrated in January, 1826.

From that little congregation of poor settlers, dependent upon the Government for their supplies until they could begin to produce on their farms enough food to keep body and soul together, there has in the course of a century developed the church organization as we know it today.

The little backwoods hamlet has become the cathedral city of a large diocese, presided over by one who is himself a native of Peterboro.

In addition to the cathedral itself, two other fine churches afford opportunities for worship.

A splendidly equipped and managed House of Providence affords a home for the aged and unfortunate.

A comfortable orphanage provides shelter for the waifs and orphans.

St. Joseph's Hospital, complete in equipment and accommodation, offers its healing assistance to those in need.

Full of interest to every citizen of Peterboro should be the fascinating story of how these things have been brought about, and the whole community can find occasion to celebrate the completion of one hundred years of such fine service.

The reception of His Excellency, the Apostolic Delegate, last evening, which began the ceremonies in connection with the centennial celebration, indicates that the spirit of the occasion has indeed impressed itself upon citizens of all creeds, and that the balance of the programme will be marked by an intense interest on the part of all Peterboro.

A DEARTH OF APPRECIATION.

In the latest issue to hand of the Christian Science Monitor the editor calls attention to a new primer, that is under preparation that aims to give the number and the character of the words contained in the vocabularies of children of tender years. Except to doting parents this might not seem likely to be a specially interesting publication, and yet it may turn out to be of quite unusual interest.

One thing the compilers of this primer have discovered is that there is a surprising lack of such words as "please" and "thank you" among those commonly used by the little folks, notwithstanding how often these same little folk are urged to use them, more especially when visitors are around. Now the interesting thing is that the vocabularies of little children, in the very nature of the case, are picked up mostly from those with whom they associate intimately, chiefly in the home day after day; and the inference is inevitable, that for the most part children do not hear such words used regularly enough to contract the habit of the imitative use of them.

And so we are led to the conclusion that when the children in our homes are a little lacking in politeness when there is "company" around, and do not say "please" and "thank you" quite as they should, it is not because of some innate perversity in them or by reason of the fact that their paganism must find expression, but it is due to the much simpler cause that they do not see and hear so very much of that sort of thing from day to day. Therefore, this primer isn't judging and criticizing the spirit and the habit of the little children so much as it is criticizing the spirit and the habit of their elders.

But then it isn't such a serious matter, you may say. We wonder how many people there are who really feel that way about it. Isn't it a fact that if we were as appreciative as we ought to be of the things that are done for us by those who touch our lives most intimately from day to day, such expressions of appreciation would become an irresistible instinct? And the fact that we are not thus appreciative cannot surely ever become a matter of indifference. This thing cannot remain a question of formal manners, but must ultimately, to some extent at least, become a matter of character. And as such it must be very important.—The New Outlook.

NEWSPAPER WOLVES.

The Kingston Standard, in a column editorial, has been roundly castigating representatives of Toronto newspapers—termed by the Standard "newspaper wolves"—for their treatment of Peter Smith, ex-Provincial Treasurer, when he was released from Portsmouth Penitentiary on Monday.

It will be remembered that, although the liberated celebrity posed for his picture upon his release and conversed with the reporters, the pack was not satisfied with this, and that the driver of the car carrying Peter Smith was finally forced to drive 65 miles an hour to escape from the pressmen.

The Examiner thoroughly agrees with the Standard in its views on this question.

If there was anything more sickening than the manner in which Toronto newspaper men followed Smith to the door of the penitentiary when he was sent down to begin his term, depriving the prisoner and his wife of any privacy in their last hours together and describing every movement, it was in the pitiless pursuit of the former Provincial Treasurer upon his liberation.

It may be claimed that the public wants news of this kind.

Some people may, but the Examiner is of the opinion that the majority of Canadians are too good sports to want to see a fellow-being hounded as Peter Smith has been by some of the newspapers of this Province—and ironically enough, too, one of the worst offenders has been a newspaper which supported Smith and his associates while in office through thick and thin.

It is sometimes said that there is one law for the rich and the prominent and another for the poor.

As it was originally meant, the sentence is without point.

Certain newspapers have given it a new meaning.

By their nauseating treatment of some prisoners these papers have established the fact that there is one law for the rich and prominent and another for the poor, and that is, that while the offender in a lowly sphere of life who falls into the hands of the law is allowed to enter upon his sentence shielded by a kindly silence, the prominent citizen who gets into trouble can hope for nothing but pitiless publicity until he is safe behind the walls of the penitentiary, and can look forward to a resumption of the same treatment just as soon as his debt to the law has been discharged.

Here is a portion of the Standard's splendid editorial on the subject:

"Now, we may be wholly mistaken, but we do not think that any self-respecting newspaper should force any of its men to do this sort of wolfish work. Not only that, but we do not think that the public will approve of it or is so keen for news that it must have it at any cost. Mr. Smith when he walked out of the penitentiary yesterday was a free man. His past was wholly behind him and he undoubtedly was prepared, as many others, to let the dead past bury its dead. The future—home, family, friends, new plans, new projects, new ambitions—these were his chief concern. And they were his concern and his only. With them the public had nothing to do.

"Yet certain newspapers would not have it so. They must parade the man in his every movement—haul him, willy nilly, before the spotlight and keep him there. It is all so shameful, all so nauseating, all so unfair—and all so revealing as to the depths to which in these modern times some newspapers will stoop in their desire to obtain "news," which they think their readers demand, when, truth tell, if they were to question their readers, they would find, as we have found, that 95 per cent. of them feel, as we feel, that a man liberated from the penitentiary should be protected from the public as much as possible and the mantle of charity and kindliness draped round about him. It is for that reason that the Standard every week of its life 'passes up' good news stories from the penitentiary. Our readers prefer to give the 'other man' a chance—prefer to think of him starting afresh in some new field of endeavor, not embarrassed by unnecessary publicity or the nudging, gaping, hypercritical few who, like the poor, we have always with us.

"In short—and happily—Kingston has no use for Newspaper Wolves. And, whether other newspapers realize it or not, we believe that a majority of the people of these outside cities whose newspaper wolves were so much in evidence yesterday, feel exactly as Kingston people do. The trouble is not with them, but with the newspapers who have misjudged and misinterpreted their desires—and have sent their wolves out where there was no necessity. Shame upon them!"

Judging by the attendance at the annual inspection yesterday, interest in the cadet movement is not confined to church conferences.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

KEEP THE CARS AWAY TOMORROW

The Editor of The Examiner,

Dear Sir, — During the ceremonies at St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday, is it possible for the automobiles to be barred from the vicinity for a distance of two blocks?

At last night's welcome thoughtless and careless people drove past on all sides, drowning the sound of the children's singing. This is a nuisance, and even if the City Council is powerless to stop the procession of joy-wreckers at the band concerts, it is to be hoped that strong-arm methods can for once be put into effect tomorrow to preserve one of the last few remaining rights of the people to hear. No car should be allowed nearer than Bethune, Simcoe, Park and Brock.

Yours truly,
Protestant.

A Cheque for $10,256.20

INSTEAD of asking him to pay any further premiums, the Mutual Life of Canada sent him a cheque for $10,256.20.

Here is a man who took a ten thousand dollar straight life policy in middle age when he was earning good money, but his family needed protection.

The premium of $285.20 he could readily pay. And he expected to pay it the rest of his life.

Instead of paying premiums until death, as his form of policy provided for, Mutual profits have enabled him to enjoy the possession and benefits of more than ten thousand dollars in his old age.

The Mutual Life agent will be glad to show you the Mutual Life Result Book.

PEOPLE LIVING ON BORDER SUBJECT TO TEMPTATION SAYS WITNESS AT CUSTOMS PROBE

Master of Boat That Was Seized By Liquor Commission Appears.

LIQUOR TRANSHIPPED.

Americans Escape While Authorities Dispute Who Should Claim Cargo.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 5 (Canadian Press).—Ulric Tremblay, master of the Barge Tremblay, did not know the nature of the cargo which he contracted to carry for a United States syndicate down the St. Lawrence River to Montreal in December, 1924, Capt. Tremblay told the customs probe yesterday. Tremblay, who has been under subpoena of the committee for many weeks, during which he has been away on his own vessel, turned up in the committee room yesterday and told the story of the now famous voyage down the river, which ended in his cargo being seized by the Quebec Liquor Commission. Several citizens of the United States, known as "Frank," "Campbell," "Neal," etc., chartered the Tremblay, met a bigger ship in the mouth of the St. Lawrence River off Matane, New Brunswick, and took on several thousand cases. These cases Tremblay did not suspect contained liquor until one commenced to leak and emitted an unmistakable smell.

The Americans in charge of the cargo assured Tremblay everything had been fixed up about landing the cargo at Montreal. He accepted this assurance. After several changes of plan, the supercargoes started to take off the liquor at St. Sulpice, Que., a little village some distance from Montreal. They were challenged by a detective from the Quebec Liquor Commission and ordered into Montreal under their own steam. There the cargo was seized by the commission and the Canadian customs. Tremblay received $5,000 for the use of his boat. The Americans escaped while the authorities were disputing over whether the Liquor Commission or the customs people should claim the cargo.

The examination of Tremblay was finished yesterday, with little evidence of a sensational nature being added to the record of the Tremblay case. The last of the Rock Island textile firms were reported on by the auditors, J. H. Turner, manager of this firm, the Snagproof Overall Company, promised to produce his cheque stubs and the record of his bank account in a United States bank across the border from Rock Island. Asked if he had smuggled, Mr. Turner said that he could not deny it. People who lived on the border were subjected to special temptations. Counsel Calder remarked that people were even known to go to the border in order that they might be tempted.

It is presumed that there more days of open sitting will bring the probe to a close. The committee adjourned until Monday.

A family Affair.

Capt. Ulric Tremblay, of Quebec, master of the now famous barge, took the stand just before lunch. The night they unloaded the whiskey in Montreal, he said, some whisky was spilled and took fire. The log and the ship's papers were all damaged by water and fire. He, therefore, threw them away. The ownership of the barge was "a family affair" he said.

He was not aware, when he agreed to carry the cargo on the now famous voyage down the St. Lawrence, that it was liquor he was to carry. His instructions were to proceed down the river, 225 miles below Quebec, and meet another ship six miles off shore.

Box Began to Leak.

Capt. Ulric Tremblay repeated that he did not know the nature of the cargo he carried down the St. Lawrence for two Americans, until a box began to leak. Then he smelled whiskey.

"Have no fear," the Americans told him. "We would not risk loading and

AYRSHIRE BREEDERS DO THRIVING TRADE

F. C. Biggs, Former Minister of Public Highways, Purchases Car.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 5.—The Ayrshire Breeders of this district have been doing a thriving business the past week; sending a car of fourteen head to F. C. Biggs of Dundas, and another car of fifteen head to McDonna and Hyde, also of Dundas.

The farmers of Dundas are striving for an area of accredited herds and will only purchase stock from accredited herds., and also demand cows testing 3.25 or better. The Ayrshire is described as a thrifty breed, giving a good flow of milk, with a high average test, and farmers all over Canada are considerng the merits of the breed orginating in the Valley of the Ayr.

F. C. Biggs is the owner of a fine 400 acre farm, and was for the past 20 years a successful breeder of Holsteins. The former Minister of Public Highways in the Drury Government recently disposed of his Holsteins and is hopeful of building a herd of Ayrshires second to none in the province. Mr. Biggs was accompanied by Daniel Hunter of Grimsby, the Ayrshire field man, who did the selecting.

His purchases included five high class cows from the herd of Alex. Hume and Co., Menie, two of them being show winners; five head from F. M. Rutherford. Mr. Rutherford's herd have an average test of 4.04, the highest in a factory of 45 patrons.

Two Peter Pan cows from E. A. McCook and two promising heifers, that won the special prize over all other breeds at the local show last fall, from the veteran Ayrshire breeder of this district, Wm. Stewart, Senior.

McDonna and Hyde's car of fifteen head included four head from Charles Macoun, four from Thomas Kerr, four from Robert H. Little, two from F. C. Hawes, and one from F. M. Rutherford.

Mr. Little's quota included two prize winning Carrisbrook heifers with an average test of 4.3, bred by F. M. Rutherford, and a granddraughter of Woodland Ditto, record of 12,600 pounds milk, average test of 4.26.

F. M. Rutherford is the secretary of the Ayrshire Breeders' Club of this district. He expects more buyers from the Dundas area, and anybody wanting to dispose of their pure bred or good grade Ayrshires should communicate with Mr. Rutherford for further particulars.

W.C.T.U. CONDEMN THE LEGISLATURE

Threaten To Put Their Own Candidates in the Field.

MIDLAND, Ont., June 5 (Canadian Press)—Lady delegates from nearly every town of any importance in the districts of Muskoka, and Parry Sound and the county of Simcoe have been here attending a three day session of the W.C.T.U. Before closing resolutions were passed condemning the legislature for not carrying out the wll of the people on the temperance question as expressed at the polls and recommending the women of the Dominion to insist upon a pledge from all political candidates before they would support them. In the absence of such pledges the union is prepared to put candidates of their own in every constituency and as they claim to have 54 per cent of the voting power, they pledged themselves to support their own candidates irrespective of either political party.

MINERS FAMILIES FEELING STRIKE

Sixth Week Finds Women and Children Suffering Severely.

LONDON, June 5.— (Canadian Press.)—While a meeting of the International Miners' Federation was in progress in Brussels, for the purpose of arranging further support for the striking British coal miners from workers in continental mines, negotiations with a view to a settlement of the strike were at a standstill yesterday.

Word has not reached London of the receipt of Herbert Smith, president of the Miners' Federation, of the communication of Evan Williams, chairman of the Mine Owners' Association, which proposes that the miners and mine owners shall get together by means of small committees representing both sides, in an attempt to bring an end to the strike deadlock. Their renewed effort at a settlement developed on Thursday, when it was announced that Mr. Williams' communication was being sent to Mr. Smith, who is in Brussels attending the International Miners' meeting.

The miners are just entering the sixth week of their strike, and most of them, together with their families, are suffering severely. A great deal of practical sympathy is being shown, for subscriptions are coming in from all classes to help the women and children, the special fund having reached £17,000. Lord Astor sent £50 in response to an appeal broadcast by Lady Astor on Thursday. Bernard Baron, head of a big tobacco concern, yesterday sent a check for £5,000.

NO COMMITMENT FOR DEEPENING OF ST. LAWRENCE

Says Hon. C. A. Dunning To the Committee of the Whole.

JOINT CONSTRUCTION.

Vote For Salaries in Connection Ship Canal Surveys Carries.

OTTAWA, June 5 (Canadian Press).—When an item of $130,000 for payment of salaries and expenses in connection with the St. Lawrence ship canal surveys and investigations came up for consideration in committee of the whole yesterday, Honorable C. A. Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals, stated that there had been no commitment of any kind by the Government of Canada for the joint construction of the deepening of the St. Lawrence.

The appropriation carried. Miscellaneous items totalling $122,000 were also passed; but a vote of $750,000 covering maintenance and operation of the Board of Railway Commissioners was allowed to stand.

TWO PROSPECTORS ARE STILL MISSING

Disappeared Two Weeks Ago —No News From Search Party.

HALIBURTON, June 5.— It is just two weeks ago since the two Toronto prospectors, Weatherhead and Solomon, bid their companion, Winges, good-bye at their camp on Redstone Lake, Haliburton County, before penetrating the wilds of Ayre township on their journey to the Madawaska river on the northern boundary. Since then nothing has been heard of the men, and northerners who know something of the dangers of the northern wilds, fear that they have perished.

J. H. Weatherhead, son of one of the missing men, arrived in Haliburton village on Thursday evening to assist in the search. It was expected that a member of the searching party would arrive back in the village that day with some tidings of the missing men. Groups of men remained on the village streets until late in the night, but no word came out from the forest and another day passed without new developments.

Only those who are familiar with conditions in Haliburton County are in a position to realize the dangers which confronted the two men on their trip. Ayre township is the property of the English Land Company, and is virgin forest, the wood choppers axe not having felled a single tree or blazed a trail through the dense growth. It is also dotted with many lakes and portages, and patches of the winter's snow can still be seen on the high land and in the hollows. Old settlers of the north tell tales of being lost in the forest during the hunting season while searching for wounded deer. They hold to the belief that the two men became exhausted on their journey, and if this should prove to be the case, it will be a very difficult matter to locate them.

Residents of Haliburton cannot understand why no word has been received from the searching party. They did not carry food sufficient for a long search, and the opinion is expressed that they replenished their supply at some settler's home. The two prospectors also carried light equipment and supplies, more especially in the line of food, and if they are living today it is because of the fact that they have been able to reach the northern boundary of the county. The people of Haliburton county, however, are not satisfied that they have accomplished this feat.

ONE BIG UNION RESENT SPEECH DEMAND ACTION

Charge Mayor of City With Incitement To Violence.

IN WINNIPEG.

Attorney General Could Give No Definite Decision To Delegation.

WINNIPEG, Man., June 5 (Canadian Press)—Demanding that some action be taken against Mayor R. H. Webb, of Winnipeg, on the charge of "incitement to volence," a delegation from the One Big Union, headed by John Queen, M.L.A., waited on Hon. R. W. Craig, K.C., provincial attorney-general, yesterday.

This move on the part of the One Big Union comes as a result of a speech made by Mayor Webb at the annual meeting of the Industrial Development Board in which he is said to have declared that certain men, whom he styled "agitators," should be thrown into the Red River, if it was not posible to take legal action against them. Mayor Webb also declared that some means "must be found to dislodge One Big Union," which, he charged, was "undermining progress and development in the city."

Attorney-General Craig, replying to the delegation, stated he could not give a definite decision regarding the demands, but believed, as the alleged act was committed in Winnipeg, it was a case for the police authorities, with whom a complaint could be lodged.

Upon leaving the attorney-general's office, the delegation refused to state what the next step would be.

CAPTURE IMMINENT OF REAL ESTATE MAN

Fled After Mysterious Death of Wife—Body in Lake.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 5 (Canadian Press)—Prospects for an early capture of Lewis J. Ring, Minneapolis real estate dealer, were characterized as promising yesterday by the authorities who announced that they had definite knowledge of Ring's projected hiding place in Canada, where he fled following the mysterious death of his wife. County attorney Loyd B. Olson, who issued the warrant for Ring's arrest following a conference with Frank Brunskill, chief of police, announced that two Minneapolis officers are now enroute to trap Ring who is believed to have crossed the border less than a week ago.

"We know postitively where Ring was last Monday and we know where he went from there," Mr. Olson said. This is the first official annoucement concerning the headway detectives have made in solving the mystery.

From Kenora, Ontario, where the Canadian search started came word yesterday that members of the Royal Canadian police were under secret instructions forbidding them to disclose any information regarding their hunt for the missing Minneapolis man.

Meanwhile in Minneapolis, the grand jury resumed its investigation into the death of Mrs. Ring, whose body, clad in a night-gown, was found in Lake Pepin, April 23.

POLISH PRESIDENT INDUCTED TO OFFICE

WARSAW, Poland, June 5 (Canadian Press).—Ignatz Moscicki, until a few days ago a comparatively obscure professor in Lemberg University, and now president of the Polish Republic, was formerly inducted into office yesterday. The ceremony took place in the historic castle of the Polish kings.

The only untoward incident of the inauguration was a demonstration by Communists, which came immediately after President Moscicki had taken the oath of his office before he was declared president on Tuesday after he was president on Tuesday after Marshal Pilsudski had declined the office the previous day.

Shouts of "We want the political prisoners released," and "Give us work for the unemployed" were heard. The acting president, M. Rataj, tried to silence the Communists, without avail, when the assembly, with vigorous cries of "Long live Poland," "Long live the President," drowned them out.

The interim cabinet, set up after the coup d'etat of Marshal Pilsudski brought about the resignation of President Wojciechowski and the Witos government, presented its resignation through Premier Bartel, but President Moscicki requested it to carry on until a new ministry is appointed.

While it is expected that the new cabinet will be virtually the same as the provisional one, there is a growing feeling that Poland will be ruled by an unofficial triumvirate made up of President Moscicki, Marshal Pilsudski and M. Bartel, who will propound general orders collectively, though they will be issued in the name of the president.

Marshal Pilsudski had a prominent place on the platform during the inaugural ceremonies. He sat in a special elaborate arm chair, surrounded by the other members of the Bartel cabinet. The fact that he will reside at the royal castle in which President Moscicki will also live, is pointed to by many as evidence that he will remain the driving power behind the president.

After the ceremonies were concluded, the president proceeded to the state audience chamber to receive the congratulations of the cabinet and the diplomatic corps.

FINE OUTING TO BE GIVEN BOYS IN SUMMER CAMP ON CLEAR LAKE

Entire Season Under One Management To Improve Situation.

NO CHANGES.

Boys' Secretary of Y.M.C.A. Will Be Camp Director.

On June 28th, the Y.M.C.A.-Rotary Camp, at Clear Lake, for boys will open for the summer. For a very modest outlay a boy may enjoy an outing second to none in point of fun and development of the mind and body through contact with Nature in the great out-of-doors. In previous years the policy relative to use of the splendidly-equipped camp of the Rotary Club on the east shore of Clear Lake, has been to divide the summer into two-week periods and have the programme carried on under different auspices during each of these intervals. Thus the Y.M.C.A. had a boys' camp for two weeks; the Rotary Club for another two weeks and so on throughout the entire season. A study of the then prevailing situation revealed the fact that at lease two days at the commencement of any group's time was spent in getting settled and the last two days were usually crowded with preparations for departure. In many cases a boy might have desired to remain over, but was almost under necessity to return home because of the fact that the end of the term meant a change of programme, policy and management. In the kitchen—that vital point in the success of any boys' camp—this situation was even more pronounced. A meal-time system in force for two weeks might be completely altered at the beginning of the third and even twice more during the season.

After reviewing the situation in the light of the above, the executive of the Rotary Club met with the board of directors of the Y.M.C.A. in an effort to outline a policy which would bring out the most effective use of the splendidly equipped site owned by the club. At a subsequent meeting representatives of the Rotary Club, the Y.M.C.A. and Dr. Murray Fraser, representing the Boy Scouts, the Y.M.C.A. was asked to promote, finance and direct the camp for all boys of the city over a nine-week period commencing June 28 and ending August 28. The Rotary Club offered the site fully equipped and staffed to the boys of the city under the Camp Director of the Y.M.C.A.

The committee set the fees for attendance at camp at $4.00 per week or 75 cents per day. Should any boy not have the ready cash which would enable him to attend at any time during the summer, he will be given an opportunity to earn the necessary amount by doing the job which will be hunted out for him by the committee. Thus in reality is the camp for all boys of the city.

The programme of the camp will be that of a standard Y.M.C.A. boys' camp. The Boys' Work Secretary of the "Y" will, as in former years, act as Camp Director. Each members of the staff will direct the actual camp programme for a period during the season. Associated with them will be a corps of leaders who will give direction and supervision to the day's activities. At all times will a boy be assured of a discipline that is not irksome and plenty of wholesome fun.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal Winnipeg

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Adverse conditions in the Old Country, strikes, lower cattle prices and an outbreak of cattle disease at Glasgow, rather suddenly put a crimp in the export cattle trade this week. Space had been contracted and most of the cattle brought for the usual weekly quota. On account of the uncertainty existing, the shipment for the week was cut down to about 700 cattle. For next week there is still some uncertainty, but shippers are in hopes of receiving more favorable news as to general export conditions.

With the exception of the setback in export, trade has continued good and active for domestic butcher cattle. Choice handy weight butcher steers and heifers scored another 25c advance, bringing prices up to $7.50 to $8. In the heavy class a few extra choice quality cattle were taken by local packers for the export dressed beef trade, prices for fancy stock going as high as $8.65 for selects. General run of good butcher in demand at firm prices. Choice butcher cows sold high, a few fancy reaching 6 3-4c. Choice butcher bulls light weight sold up to 6 1-4c; heavy bulls not so popular and not likely to sell so well from now on, due to warmer weather conditions. Baby beeves met with strong trading at $9 to $10 for the choice; good, $8 to $8.50; medium kinds, $7 to $7.50.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 5 (Canadian Press).—Price bulges in wheat yesterday carried the market to the highest point yet this week, but free selling erased much of the gain. Adverse crop reports, both foreign and domestic, together with increasing premiums on wheat available for immediate use gave strength to values. Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at 1-8 to 3-4c net advance. Corn finished 1-8 to 5-8c down; oats unchanged to 1-8c off, and provisions at a rise of 5 to 22 cents.

According to one report which contributed to the upward trend of the wheat market, Germany is facing a grain famine, the result of a prolonged drought. Crop advices from Nebraska indicated a spotted condition, and further rains southwest tended to stress possibilities of a wet harvest. Meanwhile, uncertainty regarding the outcome in spring wheat territory led to addition buying. Above $1.39 for the July delivery, however, selling broadened out, and not all of it was of a profit-taking character.

Demand for corn was less active today and eastern cash demand here was slow, whereas primary arrivals were nearly 50 per cent larger than a year ago. Crop damage reports from Nebraska had a steadying influence on oats.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, June 5 (Canadian Press).—Following the holiday, the wheat market opened strong yesterday, influenced by higher cables and strength at Chicago, and maintained a firm tone throughout the session. The close was strong, 1 1-2c to 1 3-4c higher, with July at $1.49, and October at $1.31 3-8. The December future was quoted on the board today, opening at $1.30, and closing at $1.28 3-8.

After opening 1 1-4c to 2c higher, the market was active during the early hours, with considerable short-covering going on, and export business working. Offerings were light, but no pressure was recorded. Indications point to increased export sales, and traders predicted today that the 50,000,000 bushels of Canadian surplus wheat would be cleaned up by the end of July.

Coarse grains were active yesterday, and prices showed gains, rye advancing 1 3-4c. The flax market was firm, with prices about 1-2c higher.

An improved demand existed for cash wheat, and a fair trade was reported. Reports of good export business over the holiday advanced spreads 1-4c to 1c. Activity marked the session in cash oats and barley, but rye and flax continued featureless.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, June 5 (Canadian Press). — The demand from the United Kingdom and the Continent for all lines of Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday continued good, but the volume of business accomplished was small owing to the fact that prices bid were out of line. The car lot trade was fair and prices ruled firm.

A stronger tone prevailed in the Spring and Winter wheat flour markets, but prices showed no actual change. The volume of business in both cases was fair.

The feature of the millfeed trade was the improved demand from the United States and a moderate amount of business was worked. The undertone was steady. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet but firm.

Under a steady demand for supplies, the potato market was firm. Quebec varieties were quoted at $2.30 per bag.

Considerable business was transacted in eggs and prices were well maintained. Sales of fresh extras were made at 36 to 37c per dozen and firsts at 34. The receipts were 2,941 cases.

The butter trade was stronger and prices were marked up 1-4c per pound. No. 1 pasteurized creamery was quoted at 34 3-4 to 35c per pound. The receipts were 2,974 packages.

The tone of the cheese market continued easier and prices were fractionally lower with Western No. 1 white and colored selling at 18 1-4 cents per pound. The receipts were 6,003 boxes.

Little business was transacted in beans but the feeling was steady. Choice white hand-picked were quoted at $2.20 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.30 to $2.40 per bushel.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, June 5 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

PUSH CARRIAGES.

BERLIN, MAY 5. — The fad of pushing their own baby carriages has taken fashionable German mothers by storm. It used to be bad taste for a mother to be seen with her child on Kurfuerstendamm, Berlin's Park avenue. Now the avenue is crowded with mothers, showing off their spring coats and giving baby a ride.

140 MEN KILLED IN LIQUOR RAIDS

Gun Battles, Etc., Bring Death To 49 Dry Officials in States.

SOUTH DANGEROUS.

WASHINGTON, June 5 (United Press).—Gun battles between Federal Dry agents and bootleggers, moonshiners, and rum runners have resulted in 140 casualties since prohibition became effective, the United Press learned yesterday from official figures.

Forty-nine prohibition officials have been killed in line of duty, while 92 persons evading or resisting arrest have been killed.

Two Dry officers have been killed this year.

Kentucky, West Virginia, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, and North and South Carolina, where the moonshiners operate in rural districts, is the most dangerous territory of the country for Government officers. More Dry agents have been killed in these states than in any other section. Many of the slain Dry officers lost their lives raiding stills and bootlegger caches. Several were murdered to prevent their giving evidence at trials.

Many of those killed by Government officers, prohibition officials said, were resisting arrest and it was necessary for the Dry agents to shoot to protect their own lives. Several persons were shot accidentally by careless handling of fire arms, it was admitted.

Jack Delaney, who in his early career as a pugilist showed few signs of rising to the top of the heap, has cleaned up $65,000 in four of his recent bouts.

Dr. Ben F. Roller, former well-known heavyweight wrestler, and who at one time tried his hand as a professional boxer, is now a prominent surgeon in Seattle.

ADAM ISN'T FIRST NAME HERE AND MAC HAS SMITH BEATEN

Curious Things To Be Learned By Study of City Directory.

MANY COLORS.

Ten Residents Have Names Beginning With Z—52 With V.

The Peterborough Directory for 1926 does not live up to the Bible story and name the first man Adam; but it has a distinguished Abbott (who is Henry) as the first man and following closely there is the ever familiar name of Abraham. Although there is no Adam living here there are 18 Adams and one of the Adams is Samuel. We have the trees of the forest represented in the Ash, Beach, Elms, Maple and Oke. The Allans are numerous and the Allens more so, there are 12 Bakers and not one does any baking. We have no Barber but there are 22 Butchers and 12 Butlers; only one Jack but 33 Jackson and nearly 70 Johnsons. With 14 Kings there are only two Queens and no Prince. We have only one Bridge for the Peterborough citizens to cross the 12 Brooks on. The clergy are well represented with 5 Abbotts and 10 Bishops. In the city's population there is not a book for the city's 6 Readers and we have no bachelors or spinsters; another strange thing there is only one Bird but 12 Woodcocks. With the 14 Black men there are 51 Browns and one that it Browning; 12 claim to be the Best but none to be the worst. The nine Fishers have no fish to catch. As the Brown people are the most numerous only one man claims to be Blue none to be red and 55 to be all White and 3 with a Whitehead one with Whiteside and 4 who belong to Whitehouse clan, 28 are Grey and 15 are Green. There is only one Record and one Ready, 6 favor the town of Lindsay best. We have 44 Millers for the 8 Mills and only one Farmer to grow 3 Pecks of Wheat.

Most Numerous.

The grey-headed joke that when Adam got tired of naming the animals he cried, "Let all the rest be called Smith" is not without contributory confirmation in Peterboro. The Smiths occupy about three columns in the new directory, making 86 names in all. Yet the Mc's and Mac's beat them in this city to a standstill filling about 15 columns and carrying about 600 names. Among the Mc's are some tongue twisters such as McKercher, McIlvena, McIlwain, McAuliffe.

Ten residents names begin with the letter Z, the best sounding of which are Zavitz, Zeihr and Zinston. Over 22 columns in the directory begin with W, a very popular name letter. Q is satisfied with 32 names with two-thirds either Quinlan or Quinn. U only leads 5 names and V 52 some of which are, Vitarelli, Vilne, Villeneuve and Veneranda.

A careful study of the directory will show that the fewest unpronounceable names by the Anglo-Saxon tongue are found under the letter H and in proportion to numbers V furnishes the most names of foreign origin.

Occupations.

The directory shows seven accountants, one apiarist, two artists, three auctioneers and 42 concerns in the automobile business; 13 bakeries, 7 banks, 27 barbers, 17 barristers, 9 blacksmiths, 6 book stores, 17 shoe retailers 26 butchers, 36 expressmen, 24 clothes cleaners, 16 coalmen, 24 confectioners, 70 building contractors, 18 dentists, 24 dressmakers, 14 drygoodsmen, 23 garages, 10 0grocers, 11 hardwaremen, 16 druggists, 30 insurance agents and 01 insurance companies represented here 7 jewellers, 11 laundries, 24 music teachers, 54 nurses, 7 optometrists, 22 painters and decorators, 30 physicians, 19 plumbers, 11 restaurants, 22 shoemakers, 6 tailors, 19 taximen, 4 undertakers and three veterinary surgeons.

There are 11 religious communions in the city and 37 public halls and buildings.

BALKS OTONABEE FOR 16TH TIME

John Murphy Saves Boy From Drowning—Has Notable Record.

APPLIES FIRST AID

A fine piece of life-saving work was performed this week by John Murphy who has a brilliant record of rescues to his credit.

On Tuesday a boy named Smith residing at Smith street fell into the Otonabee while fishing. His efforts to reach the bank only resulted in his entangling himself with his fishing lines. He had gone down for the second time when Mr. Murphy appeared on the scene and swimming to his aid brought him safely to dry land. Mr. Murphy then busied himself in emptying the lad's stomach of water after which he was taken to Dr. Hammond who treated the boy.

During the past 25 years Mr. Murphy, has rescued no fewer than 16 people from the Otonabee. Three years ago he was presented with a medal by the Hon. G. N. Gordon for a particularly meritorious rescue from drowning in the river.

He has also assisted at the recovery of five bodies of drowned persons from the waters of the Otonabee.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

Homes May be Divided Into Three Classes Musically.

It is in the home that good or bad taste is formed. Musically speaking, homes may be divided into three classes:

First is the musicless home, where there is no musical instrument, no sound of happy song. In such a home musical instincts die for lack of food. No one would dream of starving a child's color by forcing him to gaze all day at utterly blank white walls. The home without color and devoid of pictures is unknown, but the home without music still persists among us.

Then there is the musically uneducated home. Here there may be several instruments, but the music played is usually trashy and the singing is of the sort popular in vaudeville. A child reared in such a home will grow up with no knowledge or love of music. Popular music need not be totally foresworn, but see to it that your children hear in their home at least some really fine, noble music to refine and ennoble their spirits.

Last, and unfortunately least numerous, is the truly musical home, where good music is recognized to be not merely a luxury, but a necessity, where the child's spirit is fed with good music as his body is nourished with good food and his mind with good books.

THE ONLY MEDICINE BABY HAS HAD

Is What Thousands of Mothers Say of Baby's Own Tablets.

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she will use nothing else. Experience teaches her that they are without an equal for relieving baby of any of the many minor ailments which afflict him at one time or another. The Tablets never fail to be of benefit—they cannot possibly do harm as they are guaranteed to be free from all injurious drugs.

Concening Baby's Own Tablets Mrs. Russell Hill, Norwood. Ont., says:—"I shall always have a good word to say for Baby's Own Tablets. I have given them to our baby girl. In fact they are the only medicine she has ever had and I am proud to say she took second prize at our baby show. She is eleven months old and weighs 22 pounds. No mother whose child is peevish or ailing will make a mistake in giving it Baby's Own Tablets."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or direct by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Bockville, Ont.

TEACHING MUSIC

Method of Instruction Has Changed in Last Generation.

In former days, music study was generally conceived to be a deadly serious business. The ability to play "pieces" on the piano or violin was a sort of fetish to which countless thousands of unlucky youngsters were sacrificed. It makes one groan to think of the tons of sheet music worn to tatters, the miles of scales traversed and the years of "practicing" wasted in the effort to teach the previous generation of children without real musical appreciation or ambition, how to drum out a piece or two when company came to call. This sort of mechanical teaching either fills the child with such a loathing for the piano that he never willingly touches it later in life, or, if he really has talent, it hampers his original development and may permanently injure his ability.

Nowadays we have come to realize, however, the vital importance of stimulating the musical ambition in children by surrounding them from babyhood with good music, as a foundation for musical training. If you cannot make music yourself, by all means get a player-piano or a phonograph, and as many fine rolls or records as you can afford. Start with the lighter classics, and as the child's taste develops, progress to the immortal music of Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann, Chopin, Lisst, Mendelssohn, Wagner and other great masters. Any good music dealer can help you to make a wise selection. The child who learns to love such music has the strongest incentive to musical study so as to be able to produce it himself.

BORAH INQUIRES ABOUT CONCESSION

Says Grant To British Firm in Panama Against Munroe Doctrine.

WASHINGTON, June 5. Canadian Press. — Senator Borah, as chairman of Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, yesterday introduced a resolution calling on the State Department for all information it has about a grant to a British corporation of vast tracts on the Isthmus of Panama, by the Panaman Republic.

"If the facts are as presented to me," said Senator Borah, "they call for positive action by this government as the transaction appears to be against both the letter and the spirit of the Monroe doctrine."

A British corporation has obtained a concession to explore and exploit practically all the valuable public lands of the Isthmian Republic.

MADOC INSTITUTE HAS SAME OFFICERS

Only Change Made To Add Three To Executive.

MADOC, June 5.—The annual meeting of the Madoc Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. George Huffman on Friday last. The Treasurer's report for the year was read and adopted. The receipts were $365.74 and the expenditures $279.87, showing a balance of $85.87. During the year twenty-three meetings were held and the aggregate attendance was six hundred and forty-eight.

Activities during the year included work done on the Lakeview and Greenwood Cemeteries; a lunch booth was held at the annual Fair and the directors for the women's section were chosen from the Institute; a sewing class was held and was very successful; eighteen lectures and papers were given during the year, and the membership was reported as being seventy-eight.

The President, Mr. T. Tumelty, gave an address, reviewing the year's work and thanking the members for the hearty support given. She hoped that the same help would be rendered to the incoming officers.

The election of officers was then proceeded with, and it was moved by Mrs. Harrison and seconded by Mrs. W. Kilpatrick, that in view of the work now being undertaken, that is, the purchase and erection of a monument to Madoc's war veterans, it seemed inadvisable to make any change in the Executive, and that the same officers be re-elected. This motion carried, and last year's officers will again carry on their good work. They are:

President—Mrs. T. Tumelty.
1st Vice—Mrs. J. Caskey.
2nd Vice—Mrs. A. McKenzie.
Secretary-Treasurer — Mrs. T. Nickle.
District Director—Mrs. E. West.

The same Directors—Mrs. D. Moorcroft, Mrs. G. West, Mrs. W. Connor, Mrs. T. Blue, Mrs. C. Whytock, Mrs. A. H. Foster, Mrs. L. Watson—were chosen, and in addition three new ones, Mrs. J. Kincaid, Mrs. T. Harrison and Mrs. W. Ross.

A discussion as to the monument grounds followed, and it was moved by Mrs. Ross, seconded by Mrs. Whytock, that the President and Secretary be a committee to complete arrangements and pay over the purchase money for the grounds and go ahead with business regarding the monument. This was carried.

Mrs. Stanley, one of the charter members, was present, after a long absence, and expressed her pleasure in meeting again with old friends and her enjoyment of the work of the Institute.

Masons Attend Church.

Madoc Lodge, No. 48, A. F. & A. M., attended divine service in St. Peter's Presbyterian Church on Sunday last. Rev. Mr. Marshall preached an earnest and inspiring sermon, taking as his subject the building of the first and second temples. Special music was rendered by the choir. A large attendance of Masons was recorded.

DOG DESTROYED.

Found By Inspector With Cancerous Growth Near Shoulder.

R. C. Smith, Inspector of the Peterborough branch of the Humane Society returned yesterday after having, in company with J. D. Deyell, veterinary surgeon, visited the village of Franklin in Manvers township in response to a message complaining about the condition of a hound owned by one of the villagers. Upon examination, the dog was found to have a large cancerous growth hanging from the side near the shoulder and weighing about five pounds, and dripping blood and matter. The inspector immediately had the dog destroyed and Mr. Deyell directed that the body be buried at once. All the straw on which the dog had lain was burned and lime was sprinkled on the ground. Upon further examination the stable and hen-house were found to be in a filthy condition. The owner was ordered to clean up the place and to make proper provision for the animals.

Roman Catholics Of Peterborough Celebrate Centenary

Bishop O'Brien Was Born In City Where He Rules

Is Fourth of Line of Brilliant Leaders of Roman Catholic Life of Peterborough Since Formation of This Diocese in 1882.

PAST TWELVE YEARS HAVE RECORDED GREAT DEVELOPMENT AND EXPANSION

Four Bishops have ruled over the fortunes of the Roman Catholic population of the City of Peterborough, in the space of time, nearly half a century, since the formation of the diocese in 1882, when Rt. Rev. J. F. Jamot, D.D., who, previous to that time, had been Vicar Apostolic of Northern Ontario, resident at Bracebridge, became its first Bishop.

Under Bishop Jamot, the old stone building which had done duty as a church up to that time was enlarged to its present dimensions and became a Cathedral. The Diocese of Peterborough at that time was an immense one, extending from Port Hope and Cobourg on the south, to a point near the boundary line between the provinces of Ontario and Manitoba.

Bishop Jamot ruled here for four years, dying in 1886, and was buried in the crypt under St. Peter's Cathedral. After an interregnum of one year, the Rt. Rev. T. J. Dowling, D.D., who has been a priest in the Diocese of Hamilton, succeeded as the second Bishop of Peterborough, and was consecrated on May 1st, 1887.

Bishop Dowling bought the present residence of the Bishop and the priest's house, and also purchased the property known as St. Leonard's Grove, where St. Joseph's Hospital now stands. Later, he became Bishop of Hamilton diocese, and was succeeded here in 1889 by Rt. Rev. R. A. O'Connor, D.D., who was also consecrated on May 1st, in St. Peter's Cathedral. Bishop O'Connor, who had been parish priest of Barrie, in the diocese of Toronto, ruled here for nearly a quarter of a century.

During his rule as Bishop, the present diocese of Sault Ste. Marie was taken off the northwest portion of the Diocese of Peterborough, and Rev. D. J. Scollard, a priest of the Peterborough Diocese, was appointed as its first Bishop.

During Bishop O'Connor's long period here, many of the handsome Catholic institutions of the city were erected or enlarged, among them St. Joseph's Hospital, the Church of the Sacred Heart, the House of Providence and St. Vincent's Orphanage. The Hospital was enlarged later under him, and renovations made to St. Peter's Cathedral, the present St. Peter's School was built, following the sale of the Separate School site on Murray Street, St. Mary's School was doubled, and the Sacred Heart School trebled in size. Under Bishop O'Connor also, the present handsome Holy Name Society Rooms were purchased and the Knights of Columbus bought the fine building now occupied by them.

Bishop O'Brien

Bishop O'Connor died in January, 1913, and is buried in St. Peter's Cemetery. On June 21st of that year, Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., was named by the Holy See, and was consecrated on September 24th, in St. Peter's Cathedral, by the Apostolic Delegate of that time, the Most Reverend P. F. Stagni.

It is a notable fact that the present occupant of the Bishop's throne at the Cathedral is a native of the city in which he rules over the spiritual fortunes of the Roman Catholic population. He was born in Peterborough, and was baptized, confirmed, ordained priest and finally consecrated Bishop, in St. Peter's Cathedral.

One of the first works undertaken by Bishop O'Brien was the provision of church and school accomodation for the residents of East City. The two Public School buildings on Mark street, which had become too small for Public School use, were purchased in August of 1913, and one room was opened in the smaller building of the two in September of that year. Repairs were made, and in 1914, four more rooms were opened. Later, the smaller building was improved, and an addition of two rooms made.

In 1914, the basement of the Immaculate Conception Church was begun, and was formally opened on December 6th of that year, with the present Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl as first pastor. In January of the following year, Father McColl took possession of the parish priest's house.

In 1913, work beyond the Entrance Classes was commenced in St. Peter's School. The number of pupils doing High School work here has increased annually, until at the present time there are 230 such pupils enrolled.

In 1915, two more rooms were added to the Sacred Heart School. The rapid development which the city had experienced up to that time had a setback during the progress of the War, but again, in 1921, conditions took a change for the better. An addition to the southern portion of St. Joseph's Hospital was commenced in 1921, and the handsome new addition was opened on June 8th, 1922.

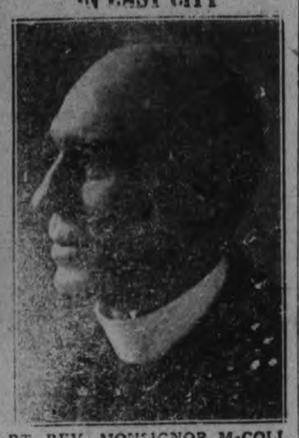
In 1923, extensive alterations and repairs were made to St. Peter's Cathedral, including the addition of an apse, and splendid decorations of the sanctuary have just been completed.

Before his consecration as Bishop, Rev. Father O'Brien was responsible in a large measure for the success attained in this parish by the Total Abstinence Society, which was commenced here by Rev. F. J. O'Sullivan, now parish priest of Port Hope, and continued by Father O'Brien, becoming during his directorship of its destinies, one of the largest temperance associations in Canada. This society continued to flourish and expand until Provincial Prohibition replaced it, and has as a continuation at the present time the Holy Name Society, with a large membership of the men of the three parishes.

Parish priests at the Cathedral who have directed the spiritual affairs of the parish, both before and after the formation of the Diocese of Peterborough, include the names of Rev. Fathers Ahearn, James Crowley, Bennett, John Butler, O'Hara, Daniel Farrelley, Oliver Kelly, John Farrell, M. Mackie, M. Lynch, P. Conway, P. Rudkins, D. J. Scollard, now Bishop of Sault Ste. Marie), the late Monsignor Casey, Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl (now rector of the Immaculate Conception Church), Rev. C. J. Phelan (parish priest at Campbellford), and the present rector, Rev. Paul Costello, M.A.

In summing up the influence on their generations of the presence in the community of the Bishops who have ruled here during the past half century, that of Bishop Jamot was essentially of the missionary type. Bishop Dowling was a cultured, scholarly man, whose residence here was but two years in length, while the late Bishop O'Connor was a man of large-hearted, kindly, sympathetic ideas. His mantle has fallen on the shoulders of the present Bishop, whose broad and deep interest in the city where he was born and where he has lived for half a century extends to people of all creeds and denominations. Not only the progress and welfare of his own parishioners claims Bishop O'Brien's attention and interest, but the well-being and advancement, both spiritual and temporal, of all the residents of his native city.

IN EAST CITY



RT. REV. MONSIGNOR McCOLL. Who was first pastor of Immaculate Conception Church in East City, and is still in charge of the work there.

Father Crowley Helped All Stricken By Plague

An example of the manner in which the spirit of real Christian fellowship animated the early settlers of what is now the City of Peterborough is given in two references from Mr. Dobbin's booklet. The first is as follows:

"During the days of early settlement a form of typhoid fever broke out—known as ship fever—which was very destructive. It prevailed among the Irish Catholics, but was by no means confined to them, as it spread in all directions. In the charitable spirit of the Church, Father Crowley hastened from one plague-stricken hut to another, ever ready to gowhere the deadly sickness was at its worst. Nor did he confine his kindly ministrations to those of his own creed. Whether the fever-stricken settler was Catholic or Protestant mattered not to him; he was ever ready to bestow a word of sympathy and comfort upon all, and for many long years the residents of the locality in which he spent six years of incessant labor retained touching memories of his fidelity and devotion and his cheery and smiling countenance was ever in mind."

The second refers to the building of the present Cathedral, and mentions the fact that liberal contributions from Protestants, as well as Catholics, were responsible for the erection of the present stone building.

Leaders Of Yesteryear And Of Today

RT. REV ALEXANDER MACDONELL, D.D.

who appointed the first priest, Rev. Father Ahern, in what is now the Diocese of Peterborough. Father MacDonell came to Canada in 1803 with a large contingent of Highland Scottish Catholics; was appointed Vicar-General of the district in 1817; consecrated Bishop in 1820; appointed first Bishop of Kingston on founding of Diocese, January, 27th, 1826; founded College of Iona in Glengarry and first Catholic newspaper in English, in Canada; at Kingston founded Regiopolis College and laid the foundations of the Church in Ontario as it is today; died January 14th, 1840.

HIS LORDSHIP, RT. REV. M. J. O'BRIEN, D.D., BISHOP OF PETERBOROUGH

on this, the occasion of the celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the offering up of the first Mass in the district, which is now known as the City of Peterborough, a sacrifice which has been offered to God every day since during the progress of a century of time, extends to all those, who, like himself, have been born and brought up in this city, and to all others, of whatsoever creed or denomination, a hearty invitation to be present at the ceremonies at St Peter's Cathedral tomorrow.

MOST REV. M. J. SPRATT, D.D. Present Archbishop of the Diocese of Kingston, whose first Bishop, Rt. Rev. Alexander MacDonell, D.D., appointed the first priest for the present Diocese of Peterborough. Father Spratt was appointed while parish priest of Belleville, and consecrated on November 30th, 1911; has cleared the Kingston Cathedral of an immense debt and placed the parish and many others in the diocese on a sound business basis; sponsored the transfer of The Canadian Freeman to the control of the Church; commenced building up Regiopolis College and has developed it to its present status; encouraged religous vocations among the young men of the diocese by establishing a Seminary Fund; as a result of this in the neighborhood of thirty prieses have been ordained from the Archdiocese during His Grace's regime; charities have been organized under one head and the church in all its branches is in a flourishing condition.

People Of 2026 To Read This "EXAMINER" Page

What is now being read by the citizens of Peterborough who are interested in these anniversary services, as an account of what took place a hundred years ago, when the first settlers came out to the forest lands of Canada, to hew their homes from the uncharted wilderness may constitute hallowed records for the eyes of a far-off generation to scan. This, or a companion paper, will go into the box which His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, is preparing as a receptacle for the storage of such information. In it will be placed pictures which have been prepared of all the Catholic institutions of the city, along with printed matter descriptive of the present celebration.

So, when those who are taking an active part in the present Centennial celebration have long drifted into dust, when their memories will have faded into obscurity, when their descendants may possibly be holding those long-heralded conversations with Mars, or people who are subsisting on soy beans, bananas, fish and corn, as a certain scientific gentleman has asserted will be main food of future generations, still the records of this celebration will remain intact, placed by thoughtful hands in safe keeping for men and women who may want, even in those advanced days, to commemorate in some way the Second Centennial Celebration of the saying of the first Mass in what is now known, in the year of Our Lord Nineteen Hundred and Twenty-six, as the City of Peterborough.

CHRIST OUR KING

"The White Christ of the Andes", the famous statue of the Saviour at whose feet two warring South American nations swore eternal peace, and whose presence sheds a benison over the pass in the mountains in which it stands, has become noted the world over.

At the head of Hunter street, in the Cathedral grounds, which are no longer fenced in, and where its presence should cast a benediction over the common thoroughfare, has been placed a bronze statue of "Christ our King", which will be unveiled and blessed tomorrow at half past three o'clock, by His Excellency the Apostolic Delegate. Bishop Fallon of London, one of America's leading pulpit orators, will then deliver a special sermon.

This statue should have a significance for members of all creeds, as its title carries a message for every Christian, whatever his denomination. The statue itself is six feet high, while the cross held in the left hand rises to a still greater height, the whole mounted on a base of Canadian granite six feet high. The right hand is stretched out in benediction and above the brow of the Saviour appears a halo of glory. On the orb upon which the figure stands is the inscription: "Regi saeculorum honor et gloria"—"To the King of the Ages be honor and glory", while on the granite base beneath are inscribed the Latin words: "Christus vincit, regnat, imperat"—"Christ conquers, reigns, commands." Below this are the dates "1826-1926," commemorative of the tenary celebration.

The statue will be placed on the spot where the fountain formerly stood and the figure of Christ will face down Hunter street—a magnificent statue of Him who is the King of Kings and the Lords of Lords.

Roman Catholic Institutions

The hand of Time, dealing more or less gently with the men and women who live from the cradle to the grave under its controlling influence, marks out in successive milestones the progress of any active factor in the community. It is interesting to note the changes which a century have wrought in the material growth of a spiritual organization as well as in its less earthly progress. The possessions of the Catholic community of the city, which began with a few hundred souls meeting in a log chapel in a small forest clearing, have grown and extended during the passage of one hundred years, until now they form a substantial element in the city of Peterborough.

The building of a church, a place of worship, was the main consideration of the early settlers, and the progress of this idea has been noted in another article.

But the one church was not long to be sufficient to meet the needs of an ever-increasing population, whose numbers through the years have continued to expand until now the Catholic population of Peterboro, according to the latest report, is in the neighborhood of five thousand people, or about one-quarter of the total population of the city.

The second Catholic Church in the city, the Church of the Sacred Heart, was begun in 1907, and opened on November 21st, 1909, constituting the first Catholic church in that section of the parish, with Father M. J. O'Brien, D.D., now Bishop of Peterborough, as the first pastor. Likewise, the first Catholic church to be erected in East City, the Church of the Immaculate Conception, was opened on December 6th, 1914, with the present Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl as first pastor.

Side by side with the expansion into city parishes went the erection of institutions for the education of the young, the healing of the sick, the housing of the homeless child and the solitary citizen of declining years, in the building of various school edifices, of the Hospital, the Orphanage and the House of Providence.

In the year 1889, property then known as St. Leonard's Grove was purchased in East City, and a hospital building begun. On July 28th, 1890, St. Joseph's Hospital was formally opened. In 1907, the hospital was enlarged, and again, in 1921, an addition to the south, much larger than the original building, was commenced and the present fine fireproof building, with modern equipment throughout and a capacity of one hundred beds, was opened on June 8th, 1922. This addition cost in the neighborhood of $200,000.

The original House of Providence was opened in October of 1899. Some years later, it was enlarged to double its former capacity, and formally opened in May of 1913.

The property now used as St. Vincent's Orphanage was purchased from the Bradburn Estate in 1910. In 1921, on account of the large number of children housed here, an establishment was purchased in Cobourg, and the little girls transferred from the Peterborough institution to their new home there. At the present time, there is an average of forty children in each of the homes.

The Mount St. Joseph property known as "Inglewood," was purchased in 1895, and here was established the Mother House for this diocese of the Sisters of St. Joseph.

For many years, what is now St. Mary's Convent, now in charge of the Sisters of St. Joseph, but formerly superintended by the Sisters of Notre Dame, who were in the city from 1867 to 1902, and the old Murray street school, served as centres of education for the growing Catholic population. Now there are four schools serving the needs of the Catholic children, who total about eleven hundred in the city proper. These are St. Mary's Convent, the two schools attached to the south and east city parishes, and St. Peter's High School, opened in 1905, and where the ordinary classes were implemented by High School classes in September of 1913.

Another institution which has played an important part in the lives of the Catholic people of Peterborough, in years past, is the Holy Name Society, which was formerly known as the Total Abstinence Society. Clubrooms for the members of this association were for many years housed on George street, in one of the upper sections of the city block between Hunter and Brock streets, but about fifteen years ago, a handsome and commodious building on Simcoe street was purchased, where there are many conveniences, including an assembly hall, gymnasium and well-stocked library for the members' use.

APPROPRIATE MUSIC.

The People's Chimes, which, through the co-operation of Rev. Dr. Blagrave, of St. John's Church, and the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Johnston, Downie Street, rang out to join in a welcoming chorus to the Apostolic Delegate last evening, will, through the same kindly agencies, play a very appropriate hymn, "Christ, the Church's One Foundation," at half-past three o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

Amplifiers To Be Used For First Time In City

An item of interest in connection with the programme at St. Peter's Cathedral tomorrow, the chief day of celebration of the Centennial anniversary of the first Mass in this district, is the use of loud speakers or amplifiers to allow of every person within a radius of one hundred and seventy-five feet of the speaker of the afternoon, Rt. Rev. Bishop Fallon of London, hearing every word distinctly. This is the first time that amplifiers have been used in Peterborough.

To-morrow too, the bronze statue of "Christ our King", cast in Italy, where it was ordered during Bishop O'Brien's visit to Rome in connection with the Holy Year celebrations, will be blessed and unveiled on the Cathedral lawn by His Excellency, the Papal Delegate.

The "Schola" of St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto, composed of ten young men singers, led by Rev. Father Ronan, will sing the Proper of the Mass at the Cathedral tomorow, assisting the choir of St. Peter's, which will be enlarged for the occasion by the presence of singers from the other two parishes in the city. All other singing done in connection with the Centennial Celebration will be by school children who have been trained by the Sisters of St. Joseph and led by Rev. J. Finn.

Masters of Ceremonies during the celebration will be Rev. J. J. O'Brien of the Sacred Heart Church, and Rev. P. Butler of St. Peter's Cathedral.

FORMER BISHOP.

RT. REV. T. J. DOWLING, D.D., Who was second Bishop of Peterborough. He was consecrated in 1887 and was succeeded in 1889 by Bishop O'Connor.

HISTORY OF CATHEDRAL TOLD INTERESTINGLY BY F. DOBBIN

Clergyman Came With the Pioneers To Hew Home From Forest.

EARLY SETTLEMENT.

Father Ahearn Lived in Log House at George and Charlotte.

Frank H. Dobbin, whose talent for compiling interesting facts about the city in which he lives was exercised on one occasion to much advantage, at least as far as the present celebration is concerned, in the putting together of several pages of facts regarding St. Peter's Cathedral and its congregation, commences his account thus:

"At date of writing (1920) it is within six years of the century since the first clergyman of the Roman Catholic faith began ministrations in and about what is now the important city of Peterborough, Ontario. Side by side with the pioneer, the clergyman came on the scene and as homes were hewn from the forest the essentials of accommodation for service were first improvised and afterwards perfected. It is an interesting story, that of the lives, progress and success of those who helped in establishing in this district the first primitive places of worship which are now enshrined in the handsome and substantial Cathedral, known as "Sancto Petro in Vinculis"—to St. Peter in chains. This important sacred edifice dominates the view looking west on Hunter street, while to the east is seen the magnificent hospital of St. Joseph, erected by the Catholic community of the Diocese."

"The history of the Church in this district is linked in with what is known as the Robinson Immigration of 1824-1826. In that year, following representations made to the British Government by Hon. Peter Robinson, that the Midland District of Upper Canada offered opportunities to settlers, a venture was organized. From the north and particularly from the south of Ireland, over two thousand souls set sail in the month of May, 1825. After a severe voyage and much privation resulting from the arduous task of reaching their destination inland, all arrived at the plot of land now known as Peterborough. Here the party was retained while the actual difficulties of location on the lands in the vicinity were being overcome. For eighteen months they were supported in large part by the government. Eventually all were placed on lands allotted in adjacent townships, particularly in the township of Douro. A list is in print giving the names and locations of all who were settled and placed on farm lands. A number remained in the village and endeavored to follow the several ministrations of the church to which they had been accustomed.

"To these Irish peasants after all that had been done for them by the state, one thing was wanting — the ministrations of the church to which they, like their forefathers, had clung so devotedly. Such were not long withheld. In 1826, less than one year after the arrival of the settlers, Rev. Father Ahearn became the first resident Catholic priest in what was afterwards to be known as Peterborough. From there he attended to as far as was possible the spiritual wants of a vast mission field, comprising the districts now known as the Counties of Peterborough, Victoria, Durham, Northumberland and half of Hastings. It is interesting to know that, during his stay, which was for but a few months, Father Ahearn lived in a log house that stood on a lot at the corner of George and Charlotte streets, on the south-east side.

After Father Ahearn there was a short interregnum, and then Father James Crowley took up the duties. Several log houses, one larger than the others, had been built by Mr. Robinson's order on the west side of Water street. This ground is at present covered by the city buildings. In the largest of these Father Crowley was wont to say Mass. In one of the others he lived. In a severe fire that ensued these buildings were destroyed, and Catholic service was held in the County House, as the log structure that was first erected on the site of the County Buildings was termed. Thus were these struggling Irish exiles consoled and encouraged in efforts of self-help, which have proved so successful.

"Father Crowley was succeeded in 1833 by Rev. Father O'Hara, who remained for about one year, to be replaced by Rev. Father Bennett, who also was relieved after a year in the service.

"In the year 1835, Rev. John Butler, of a well-known Tipperary family, was appointed to preside over the Peterborough district. In November of 1836, the Right Reverend Alexander McDonnell, then Bishop of Kingston, received from the Crown a deed of a lot on George and Hunter Streets. A small frame structure was put up on the lot as soon as it came into the hands of the clergy, and in this building Catholic services were held. But on March 16th, 1838, this building was burned to the ground, destroying all the books, records and papers in connection with the early church. Following this disaster, the Bishop sold the lot (which was one of considerable value for commercial purposes) to Robert Chambers for $800, and the proceeds were used, together with liberal contributions of Catholics and Protestants alike, in the erection of the present stone building, afterwards to be known as the Cathedral. A site for the purpose was granted by the Government.

"In this connection it may be stated that the public grants to the Catholic Church in Peterborough consisted of Lots 1 and 2, south of Brock Street and west of George Street, Lot 14 (of new survey) fronting on Hunter Street (site of the present church), and Park Lot 6, in the township of North Monaghan. These grants were dated February 13th, 1834.

"It was during the pastorate of Rev. Father Butler that the large stone church of St. Peter's was built. It stands on the summit of a hill, a commanding situation, in the very centre of the finest residential districts of the city, quite in the midst of the most desirable blocks. It was built at a cost of $12,000, and when erected first accommodated over one thousand people. In the main, it is a plain but substantial structure, having, as originally designed, the arches of the windows curving upward from the bases in the style known as Simple Gothic. The church contains a handsome and well-toned organ, purchased in 1858, and further improved by additions to the compass. The fine bell which hangs in the steeple of St. Peter's is one of three, cast in Spain over two hundred years ago, which were said to contain a large amount of silver. Bishop McDonell bought these bells and sent one to Peterborough. It was the first bell to be put up in the town.

"In 1882, Peterborough was made the centre of a new diocese, comprising the Counties of Peterborough, Victoria, Northumberland, Durham and the Districts of Algoma, Muskoka and Parry Sound. In September of the same year, Rev. John Francis Jamot took charge of the diocese, and was formally installed by His Grace, Archbishop Lynch, of Toronto. Shortly after the appointment of Bishop Jamot, he decided to enlarge the church and form it into a Cathedral.

"At the north end was erected a transverse building, forming transepts to the east and west, making the edifice cruciform in shape, one hundred feet long by seventy-five feet wide, with a sacristy to the church at the north end of seventy-feet long by twenty-six feet wide. Buttresses were added to the walls of the nisle, and a new entrance porch with groined ceiling. The tower was restored, and a spire added. The Cathedral building is of white limestone, with Gothic windows of stained glass.

"The work was completed in the autumn of 1884 by Bishop Jamot and his Rector, Rev. Father Conway, at a cost of nearly $40,000."

"THESE WOMEN"

By MALCOLM DUART

COPYRIGHT 1926

The Characters and Situations in this Story are entirely fictional.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

Nona, Toronto stage girl, and Audrey Morton each have told their love for Harry Morton, Audrey's guardian, a wealthy, unmarried, middle-aged man highly attractive to women.

Morton maintains a home in Peterborough and an apartment in Toronto.

Nona has been at his apartment, recovering from injuries received when robbed in her own rooms. As this chapter opens, Nona, Audrey and Morton are in Morton's car in Toronto, and he has just told the girls that he is worried about his secretary, John Parrish, who is getting into trouble.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XLIV.

Morton drew a pipe from his pocket filled it, and made a vain effort to light it.

He tapped on the window for the driver to stop. When the car had come to a halt, he drew a few long draughts from his pipe, and signaled for the car to proceed again.

"Pipes and motor cars weren't built to go together," he said. "But I can think better with a pipe than with a cigar, or a cigaret.

"I'm really worried about Parrish."

"What has he done?" Nona inquired.

"Oh, hopping around the cabarets until two and three o'clock in the morning."

Audrey was silent. Nona laughed.

"Boys will be—sheiks," she said. "Is he stepping out with that little blond girl?"

Morton puffed at his pipe, a moment or two before replying. "She's one of them," he said.

Audrey was looking out at the fleeting landscape, and did not appear to hear.

"Where does he get the money?" Nona asked.

"Don't know," replied Morton. "His accounts with me are all right, but I'm pretty sure he hasn't come into a fortune. I'm curious about that, myself."

A roadside inn came into view, and Morton proposed that they stop for a bit of food. The car drew up into the sweeping drive, that curved around the rear of the building, and they entered by a latticed door. The building was an old farm-house, remodeled, but the rural experience of the proprietor and his waiters had been gained in other lands. Dark, plump, black-eyed, they moved about the hall way, going in and out of private rooms.

Morton told the proprietor to lead them to the public room. Only one other table was occupied.

"Why, hello Abe!" cried Morton.

Mr. Sunshine arose from the table, and hastened forward.

"Welcome to our city!" he said, extending his hand, first to Morton, and then to Audrey and Nona. "Are you through being sick?"

She extended her arm, so he could see the reddish scar, from which the wrappings had been removed for the first time, that day.

Mr. Sunshine nodded sagely. "You shouldn't go on joy rides after midnight, Nona."

"Wrong again, Abe," she told him. "I got this in another kind of accident."

Abe's attention had wandered, however. Turning to his own table, he beckoned to the girl who sat there.

"Lois!" exclaimed Nona.

Morton smiling, advanced and offered his hand. "Didn't know that you and Abe were chums," he said, as the girl greeted him.

"Chums nothing!" cried Abe, rubbing his hands in pleasure. "Lois and I are getting married next week!"

Nona suddenly threw her arms around the other girl's neck. "I'm so glad, Lois! Abe's such a good boy!"

Lois coolly extricated herself from the embrace.

"Last time I saw you, you wanted to pull my hair out," she retorted, calmly. "Why all this rush of joy?"

Mr. Sunshine indulged in a hearty laugh. "It's because she won't be jealous of you and Mr. Morton any more," he surmised. "Lois, meet Miss Morton. This is Mr. Morton's adopted daughter. Miss Morton, my sweetie."

Audrey smiled, and the two girls shook hands. Lois looked at her in friendly curiosity. "You're going on the stage, aren't you?" she asked, as they settled around a large table.

"I was going to, but I changed my mind," smiled Audrey.

"I told you so," Abe said to Morton. "She gets funny ideas in the heads of a lot of my chorus girls, and then quits us cold! I told you!"

"Did she do some damage?" Morton wanted to know.

"Damage!" Mr. Sunshine was emphatic. "You remember you picked those girls because they weren't gold diggers? You didn't want her to have girls around her that had rough ideas? Well, you ought to see 'em now. They want to have diamonds and things like she's got, and they're collecting souvenirs from every poor boob that goes out after dark!"

Audrey opened her round blue eyes, seriously. "Oh, I'm so sorry," she said. Mr. Sunshine grinned. "That secretary of yours has been stepping out with 'em, too."

Morton nodded. "I know it."

Abe blithely returned to the subject of his romance. Helping his promised bride to a heap of crab salad, brought from the other table by an attentive waiter, Mr. Sunshine went on:

"Lois and me, now, we understand each other. She knows the world, and so do I. Neither of us is fooled about the other. We ought to get along pretty well?"

"Sure," agreed Lois. "Abe's a good boy."

Possessing himself of her left hand, he held it up for the admiration of his friends. "See that diamond? Picked it up from a fellow I know for half what he paid for it! Just look at it!"

He turned her hand, so that the gem flashed satisfactorily. "There's not a bigger one in the profession," he said, proudly.

Morton examined the jewel. Clearing his throat, he observed: "It certainly looks—er, important!"

"Huh!" Lois jerked out. "He's kidding you, Abe."

The producer placidly turned to Audrey and Nona. "I don't mind if he joshes that diamond. It's size that counts, ain't it?"

Audrey interposed. "I'm sure I think it is very pretty," she said.

Lois nodded toward her, in thanks. "It has a flaw in it, but I should worry! Nobody would know it unless I told them."

With a comfortable yawn, she went on: "I was getting too fat to dance any more, and when Abe asked me to get hitched, why I said 'yes'." She reached for a portly sandwich, part of the food that had come from Abe's table. "I can eat anything I want to, now, and I don't care."

Mr. Sunshine beamed upon her with affection, and urged her to eat heartily. "Fat wives are the best natured," he philosophized.

When Morton, with his companions, drove away, they left Abe and Lois, still contentedly conversing over the liqueur glasses that stood before them.

"Different lives, different customs," Morton said, as they drove away. "They're both good, according to their lights. They'll be happy together, I think."

Nona agreed. "He's nervous, and full of business. She's placid, and don't worry about anything much, if she's comfortable. But gee, how I used to hate her!"

She laughed reminiscently. "I thought you were in love with her, Harry."

His eyes twinkled, but he made no reply.

"There are always other girls," observed Audrey.

Morton and Nona looked at her. "Who?" Nona asked.

"I don't know," Audrey said. Her tone was reflective. "The world is full of girls, and new ones coming all the time."

"You mean I'm a sort of Don Juan?" Morton suggested.

"No, I mean the world's full of girls to be jealous of. That's all."

Nona bobbed her head in understanding. "That's so. You never get through being jealous of the man you love, until he's dead—or you are."

After a moment, she amplified the thought. "I suppose if I were dead, I'd be jealous, if Harry was living. The women would still be after him."

"Tut, tut!" Morton said. "Let's change the subject. I'm going out tonight, and skirmish around, and try to locate Parrish. I think I know where to find him."

"He needs a nurse," interjected Audrey, sharply. Leaning her elbow on the arm of her seat, she put her chin in her hand, and gazed into the distance.

Nona nudged Morton with her elbow. He looked at her, understandingly, and they both smiled.

It was the busy hour that, in Toronto, follows the closing of the theaters at night.

Morton was sitting alone in a corner of the Bon cabaret, with a glass of wine before him, smoking a cigar, and watching the noisy crowd that filled the restaurant.

The orchestra was groaning a dismal "blues," and on the dance floor a group of young men, exhilarated by drink, with their giggling partners were bumping the heavy-footed citizens who tried to dance there too.

A girl came from the opposite side of the room, to ask Morton to join her party. He shook his head in refusal. After a moment's pleading, she went away.

One of his friends, coming past, slapped him on the shoulder, and loudly urged him to come to his own table and have a drink. Morton again declined.

For a while he chatted idly with the proprietor, who hovered near him now and then, to make sure that he was well served.

He finished his wine, and the waiter brought another glass.

Two young women joined him, and seated themselves, uninvited, beside him. He chatted with them, but when they finally perceived that he did not intend to offer them refreshments, they went away.

Each time a new party of visitors entered the door, Morton's eyes glanced toward the entrance.

At last his face lighted. A little blond girl, in extreme evening dress, tripped into the room, and stood waiting for her companion to appear. In a moment, Parrish entered, and taking her by the bare arm, guided her behind the waiter to a table by the dance floor.

Morton arose, and tossing a yellow-backed bill onto the cloth, beside his plate, he walked across the room to Parrish's chair.

He tapped the young man on the shoulder. Parrish looked up, startled.

Nodding to the girl, Morton leaned over his secretary, and said quietly:

"We'll take the young lady home, now."

REV. J. E. TODD, M. A.

The Rev. J. E. Todd, the minister in charge of the George Street United Church, formerly the George St. Methodist Church, is the successor of the Rev. Harold Young, M. A., B. D.

That Mr.Todd has produce a most favourable impression upon the community as well as upon his own congregation is due, not only to the character of his sermons, but to the personal frankness, geniality and straightforwardness of the man himself.

A minister, unlike other men, lives, moves and has his being in his vocation. He has a message to deliver to the people and a care for their temporal and spiritual welfare which make his life one of ideas and opinions rather than a mere record of events or of offices held. Hence, if we would give effect to him and to his full value to the community, it must be by enabling the public to get in direct and intimate touch with what he is thinking about in their behalf and how he proposes to develop it in the immediate future.

Specific questions are more likely to receive specific answers, and are less likely to be misunderstood and that has been the plan adopted in this case. The questions and answers to them are given here just as they were made; the answers being in the words of Mr. Todd himself.

Question.—As it is customary at the present time, as you know Mr. Todd, for prominent men to be asked their opinions on various matters now before the public, such as prohibition, sport, education, home-training, morals, etc., and, since these expressions of opinion have become a source of public instruction in all countires, would you mind giving us your opinion upon some of these topics? What, for example, do you consider the status of the "individual" at the present time? Has the individual, as a private person, altogether apart from his connection with the public and public affairs and in his home relation only, any status at all if a majority of the public choose to override it? That is, of course, what prohibition is based upon. It is not denied by anybody that the public can do what it likes with "public" affairs, but what about the individual at home in his private capacity?

Answer (Mr. Todd).—"In my opinion in the present complex state of society one cannot think of the individual as an individual, but only as an integral part of society."

Question.—As you see by the remarks of the Ontario Prohibition Union that home-brewing has become "a great evil," and a solution has not yet been found for it, would you suggest as do prohibitionists generally, that the making at home of all wines, ales, cordials, etc., should be strictly prohibited, and, of course, anywhere else as well? Innocent wines are light wines, but it is not what they are, it is what they lead to.

Answer (Mr. Todd).—"Yes, I would. I am a total prohibitionist until you propose something better."

Question.—Is there in your opinion, anything in nature or God's creation which is in itself evil, or is it the perverse nature of man that has turned things to evil uses, and do you think that the fault and correction of it lie within man himself, his laws and his own moral nature?

Answer (Mr. Todd).—"Yes, absolutely! When this old world was made the pronouncement was—'Behold all things are good'—and they were placed in man's own power. If we insist on abusing the good things of God we must suffer."

Question.—Is there any other way under Heaven by which a man can be saved from his sins and excesses except by belief in the Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ? Is that not the Christian's belief? That is to say, the Christian believes that there is no other way. No man can rely upon himself, his laws, or his own contrivances, according to Christ, is it not? The removal of temptation means the removal of the world?

Answer (Mr. Todd).—"The removal of temptation would be the worst thing in the world. It would be the worst thing that could happen to us. It would reduce us to a spineless jellyfish state."

Question.—Is it your opinion that a majority has a right to over-rule any rights or privileges at present enjoyed by minorities or individuals if the majority considers it for the general public interest so to do?

Answer (Mr. Todd).—"Yes."

Question.—You will have noticed, no doubt, that the present conference of the United Church of Canada has declared for the immediate inauguration of a system of "grade courses in religion for public schools." How is this system to be carried out? Are you in favour of the introduction of grade courses in religion into public schools? Since children are not compelled to remain for these exercises would it not be better to hold the exercises in the Sunday schools, daily, if necessary?

Answer (Mr. Todd).—"I am in favour of religion in the schools. We are conferring on this question now, in Peterborough."

NOTE.—The letter of The Ontario Prohibition Union referred to above is as follows—

THE ONTARIO PROHIBITION UNION.

Toronto, May 20th, 1926.

J. H. Burnham, esq.,
Peterborough.

Dear Sir

The Ontario Prohibition Union stands as it has always done, for the complete prohibition of the traffic in intoxicating liquors, and we do not make any distinction as between wines and other alcoholic beverages. We have regularly appealed to the Provincial Legislature to delete the clause making an exception of wines manufactured from home-grown grapes.

Neither have we ever given countenance to home-brew, which is undoubtedly a great evil, but we have not yet discovered the solution for it.

Yours sincerely,
JOHN BAILEY,
Secretary.

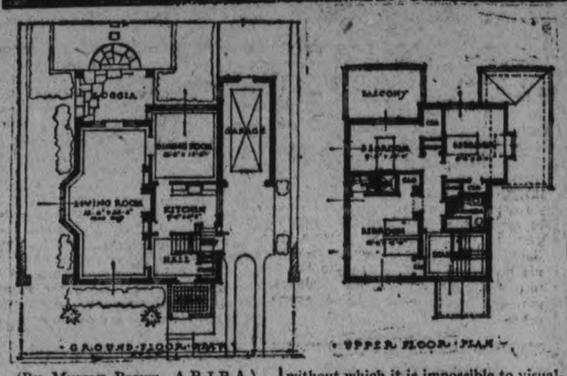
PLANING . BUILDING . FINANCING
DECORATING . FURNISHING . GARDENING



(By Murray Brown, A.R.I.B.A.)

Character is a predominating influence of this home. It pervades the ensemble and is prominent in every detail of the perspective and plans. The checkered chimney; pyramidal roof and the little "eyebrow" window which nestles so snugly and recedes gracefully into the shingles; attractive entrance porch, windows and shutters; large living-room and in fact wherever one's eyes rest, it is obvious and pleasingly persuasive.

A most important consideration, without which it is impossible to visualise the effect to best advantage, is a suitable selection of colors. The architect advises that the shingles of the roof be dipped in varying shades of golden and light brown stain. The frame work of the porch should also be stained brown, a darker tone than used on the roof, and the gable shingles done in white. Very striking and charming will be the result when the window frames and sash are painted orange and cream and the shutters and doors a blue-green.

The only chimney is all that is required as it is located in the centre of the house and provides flues for the boiler, living-room fireplace and kitchen. This arrangement also derives much benefit from the heat which radiates from the chimney and which is almost entirely lost when it is placed in an outside wall.

The base of the house is of brick, carried about a foot and a half above the ground and brick or hollow tile are suggested as the backing for the stucco surface of the remaining walls. Extra heavy shingles are recommended for the roof with courses varying from eight inches to the weather at eaves to five at the ridge.

It happens very rarely that such a large living-room is found in a house 27 ft. x 33 ft. This room, 13 ft. x 28 ft., occupies half of the ground floor and the position of the windows, doors, fireplace and built-in bookcases will be noticed with keen interest by those whom symmetry enthuses.

The estimated cost is ten thousand dollars and if comparisons are to be indulged in, it should be remembered that this includes hot water heating and two bathrooms.

Readers desiring further information regarding the plans and specifications of this house should communicate with the architect direct. Address Mr. Murray Brown, A. R. I. B. A., Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont. Copyright, 1926, MacLean Building Reports, Limited.

cadets, and he also congratulated the cadets of Queen Alexandra in winning the cup twice in succession. He thought if the members of the Bay of Quinte Conference were there to see the cadet manoeuvres they would change their minds as to cadet training in the schools.

Quartermaster-Sergeant Instructor Thomas was the man who had instructed these cadets, and he is to be lauded for the fine exhibition given. The Collegiate band supplied the music for the parade.

G.W.V.A. Notes

At the time of writing these notes official word has been received that the G.W.V.A. of Ontario has ceased to exist and that the various branches throughout the province have now become units of the Canadian Legion of the B.E.S.L.

Instructions have been issued to the Dominion executive of the "Legion" to issue the new charters, and the old branches of the G. W. V. A. will receive the new charter in a short while.

At the moment of writing it is questionable whether in places like Peterborough where there is a duly established unit, new charters will be granted. Some changes to the constitution regarding membership have been suggested, and will in all probability be adopted at the Dominion convention to be held in November.

The report of the convention will be submitted by Commander G. Winterbotham to the executive committee of the local branch of Canadian Legion at their meeting which will be held at 'Legion' headquarters on Wednesday evening next.

The executive members of this branch of the Legion are invited to attend the reception to be tendered "His Excellency the Apostolic Delegate to Canada and Newfoundland" which will be held on the Cathedral lawn on Sunday afternoon next at 4.30 p.m.

During the past week several pension cases have been adjusted, one case being that of a widowed mother whose only son was killed in June 1916. At the time of the son's death the father being still alive, pension was not applicable. The death of the father having taken place recently the matter was brought to the attention of the G.W.V.A. who took the matter up with the Board of Pension Commissioners, submitting that this case should be considered under clause 3, section 12, sub-section 2 of the Pension Act. Word has now been received that the Board of Pension Commissioners have awarded the widow $30.00 per month with effect from January, 1926.

Another case of a pension being reduced from 15 per cent. to 5 per cent. was taken up on March 15th. Word has now been received that the former state of pension has been reinstated, this means to the pensioner a sum of no less than $168.00 per annum.

A similar case of reduction of pension was adjusted during the past week, in which a pensioner receiving 100 per cent had been reduced to 50 per cent. After two months work on this the B.P.C. reinstated the former rate of pension, intimating that a reduction should not have been made. This case alone means a matter of $600.00 per annum to the pensioner in question.

Several other cases have been brought to the attention of the office. It has also been decided to open up the files and reopen old claims.

During the week one comrade was placed on the staff of the Trent canal.

A full history of what has been accomplished locally by the G.W.V.A. will be published as soon as the details are completed.

PRESENTATION FROM MEMBERS OF CLASS

Mizpah Class Gives Mrs. Langford Leather Handbag.

A very pleasant time was spent at the home of Miss Alice L. Carver, 592 Charlotte street on Thursday evening when fourteen members and Mrs. A. Parker of Trinity Mizpah Bible class were present. A business meeting was held and officers elected for the year. A presentation of a beautiful leather hand bag and silk gloves was made to Mrs. A. J. Langford, who has been teacher during Mrs. Parker's illness. The address was read by Miss Ola Gow and the presentation made by Miss Ethel Rehill. Mrs. Langford was surprised but made a suitable reply, thanking the girls for their gift. Mrs. Parker also replied thanking Mrs. Langford for the good work she had done. Two contests were held and prizes were won by Mrs. Langford, Mrs. Norman Moncrief, Mrs. Thompson and Miss Loretta Rosborough. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess and a social time spent. The address:

Dear Mrs. Langford,—It is with mingled feeling of pleasure and regret that we meet tonight as a Sunday school class. Our pleasure is in the remembrance of the wonderful lessons we have been taught by you, our regret is that you are leaving us. About a year ago when our class was without a teacher you very kindly offered to take up the work and we have indeed benefitted and been shown the way of truth Sunday after Sunday. Your teaching has not only made the Scriptures dear, but you have endeavored to teach us to "know God." After listening to your messages we have felt like the disciples of old "it was good to be here." We keenly regret that you are soon leaving our city but are pleased to know that another community will receive the benefit of your good work. As a slight token of our esteem we ask that you accept this gift. May it always contain many pennies.

May we assure you on behalf of the Mizpah class that you carry with you the esteem and best wishes of each and every member.

Sincerely yours,
Ethel L. Rehill, president.
Loretta Rosborough, secretary.

PUBLIC SCHOOL CADET BATTALION WINS PRAISE FROM INSPECTOR

Military Drill and Physical Training Are Well Done.

CUP AWARDED.

Queen Alexandra Company Wins Denne Trophy For Second Time.

Queen Alexandra School won the Denne Cup for the second time in succession yesterday as being the best trained cadet company in the public school battalions. This company was commanded by Herbert Pulleyblank, and the whole company went through the physical drill in a very snappy style, with no breaks by anyone. Their marching was wonderful, and they would show a lot of the present militia up in the way they went through their military manoeuvres.

Over five hundred cadets turned out on the parade, and there was the largest crowd of citizens present that has ever been seen at the annual cadet inspection, showing that the citizens are taking an interest in this training for boys. Cadet Woods of "B" Company and Cadet James Beavis of "F" Company were given medals, as they got the highest score in the local rifle shooting contest.

The cadets of King George School were the first to be called out, and these made a good showing, especially in their marching, as they kept perfect line and were all in step, and had plenty of action. They were commanded by Jim Ellis, and he gave his orders in a sharp and very distinct manner.

Queen Mary came second, commanded by Max Clark. Their physical training was good, but their marching was not up to the first company. Queen Alexandra cadets came next, and they made a splendid showing. Their physical drill was very snappily done, and they showed that they had received very careful training in their cadet work. King Edward cadets, under the command of Bob Carter, showed good marching. Their physical drill was slowly done, but was done with a great exactness. The Prince of Wales was the next to parade, under the command of Harold Kearns. This was the largest company, being 125 strong, and it gave a fine exhibition of military manoeuvres, especially in the smartness shown in the different formations. Central School came last, under the command of Archie Weir, and they lived up to the reputation gained in 1924 when they captured the much sought after cup.

The battalion was in charge of Stan Clark of the Queen Alexandra and for a boy he handled these 500 odd cadets in a manner that would do credit to an army officer.

Colonel Hill said that he was very pleased with the showing made and stated that the drill was much better than that put on by the Collegiate cadets in the morning. The points worthy of commendation were the absolute steadiness shown when they should be steady, and the wonderful way in which the officers and non-commissioned officers gave their commands. He also stated that he was sorry that the country's finances did not permit cadet camps, but "the newspapers are saying that Canada has rounded the corner towards prosperity, and it is hoped that in the near future the camps will be established again," he added. At present thirty-two instructors are supported out of the grants made by the Federal Department to train the teachers in the Normal schools throughout Canada, and this does not cost the Provincial Department a cent. Last year 6,000 school teachers qualified in this course.

Colonel J. W. Miller, in giving the cup to the commander of the Queen Alexandra School cadet company, said that he was proud of the showing which the boys had made, and thought that some of the work was as good as the work put on by the 57th when he was in command a number of years ago. He was also proud to see so many parents out to see the wonderful parade, and he stated that this training would make better looking men, straighter men and neater walking men.

Mayor Holloway said he was proud of the good showing made and congratulated the cadets and their officers. He criticized the Bay of Quinte Conference for its resolution about cadet training, but said that it was just the members' opinion, and they have a right to their opinion. By the crowd at the inspection it showed that the majority of people were in favor of cadet training. The Ottawa Anglican Synod, he said, had approved of it a few days ago.

E. F. Reid said that the Board of Education would be proud of the splendid showing made by the

New Frocks Employ Skirt Fulness

As the season advances, the vogue for prints is being more frequently evidenced, as the dainty frock above attests. The dress is cut in one-piece and displays a round neck-line opening in front, short kimono sleeves and a silhouette that would be straight, except for the employment of fulness in the apron tunic at the front. This little apron drapery is an important fashion item, and so is the shirring at the upper edge where it is sewn to the dress. A belt of contrasting color ribbon ties about the hips. The small back view pictures the frock with long sleeves, which are provided in the pattern, NO. 1155 is in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. Size 36 bust requires 3¾ yards 36-inch figured material; long sleeves ⅝ yard additional; ribbon for belt 1¼ yards. Price 20 cents.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

SHE DESCRIBES A STUNNING FLARED COAT.

Madame never has anything in her shop unless it exploits some unusual feature that marks it immediately as a distinctive garment, different from the everyday run of things.

Her coats this year have been particularly happy choices, I think, and I never grow weary of modeling them for the very enthusiastic clients who come to look and stay to buy.

Today a young girl came in and said she must have a smart coat for general wear, more or less of the sports variety.

"I live in the country and drive my own car in quite often," she explained. "It's often cool enough in the car for a light coat, and then I like something that looks well on the street."

"I have some semi-sports coats that I think you will like immensely," Madame told her, and I was sent to do the modeling, as the young girl was about my height and build.

Madame sent word for me to put on the new beige and satin coat that had just come down from the workroom, and the milliner was sent to get a hat made to go with it. For when we show coats Madame always has us wear hats and the proper accessories.

The coat was a pleasure to put on. It is beige kasha, the soft lovely kind, lined with glossy black satin. The black satin shows in the slender revers that turn down the entire length of the coat.

"But this is the touch that should appeal to her," I said, indicating to the wardrobe mistress the black satin appliques, placed one on each sleeve and one at the center of the back. These figures were made up of little shaped bits of black satin, placed so as to represent a sort of conventional flower design.

Then the hat came. It was a tiny beige Bangkok with a broad band of black satin about the crown.

I walked out upon the tiny raised platform surrounded by electric lights, where the manikins tarry a moment before stepping down into the showroom where the clients can view things at closer quarters.

This Unusual Coat Exploits Beige Kasha Cloth and Black Satin.

"That's surely what I had in the back of my mind, only I didn't know it till this moment," the young client exclaimed.

I walked over to her and opened the coat so she could see the lining, turned around slowly once, and the sale was made.

Her measurements were taken and she is coming tomorrow for her first fitting.

Never Did Like Her!

It seems to me that this Winifred Sackville Stoner tribe has gotten away with murder in this country quite long enough. Ever since I was a child of a year or so, eating flies because no one advised me that they were not gastronomic tidbits, I've been subjected to tales of the wonderful prodigy. Winifred Sackville Stoner, and her equally wonderful mother. Always appearing in print telling what was wrong with everybody else. Now it seems the stage's the thing which is all wrong. So Winifred and her momma are out to reform it with a little play by themselves, with pure and righteous lines like this—

"Wrap yourself in mystery and always wear pink lingerie."

Patty Horn, Pastor.

I am ever prejudiced against child preachers. So was ready with my little gun for one—a girl preacher, Patty Horn, 19. But she has done or said nothing as yet for which she really needs to be shot. She uses a powder puff and has a shingle bob and applies the lipstick when she wants to and she does not think young people of today are going to perdition, so I may be inclined to change my mind about these youthful exhorters to the true faith.

No-Woman's Land!

Women of the Kongo country are not allowed to eat with "the men folks," and are lucky if they get anything at all to eat, as the men leave remnants not as tokens of duty to "the women folks," but only because they themselves are replete. This news item comes from the explorer and huntress, Mrs. Carl Akeley, but recently returned from an African hunting trip.

Naive Mourning Garb.

When a native woman loses her husband, Mr. Akeley narrates, she smears her body with white clay. As the clay peels off, she is in half mourning and can begin going to the wild tribal dances again and casting amorous orbs at another prospective mate. Now, altogether, sing loudly and lustily "the Colonel's Lady and Judy O'Grady—!"

Sweet Revenge.

I am inclined to hustle this recipe off to the scorned women of the Kongo, tell them to set it cooking and let the tantalizing aroma drift into the camp of the gluttonous enemy, the males, denying them any bite or nibble of the feast. Known as oatmeal macaroons. Two eggs beaten lightly and mixed in 1-2 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon melted butter, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2 1-4 cups rolled oats, 1-2 cup chopped shelled peanuts. Dropped from teaspoon on oiled sheet and baked in moderate oven.

Table Service.

Many hostesses now place the napkin, folded to resemble a long thin roll, on the service plate, rather than to one side.

Mix Your Own!

Our beauties, we learn, now mix their own face powder. Containers may be purchased with a central compartment filled with plain white powder, and four smaller compartments filled with intense shades of ochre, rose, mauve, and flame, with which the beauty can mix her own peculiar powder needs.

A Bag and Frock Match Each Other in Chic

Paris sends over an adorable outfit of light-blue linen printed with lavender asters, with the collar, cuffs and belt of plain blue. The matching bag carries off honors, oranges, a bargain in lollypops, a great find in sea-shells and an immense amount of chic. The V line of the vestee and the shape of the collar are new. Chints and cotton prints are being used a great deal, with the size of the print proportioned to the size of the child. The new rayon-and-cotton crepes and rayon alpacas have a silky look that is very attractive and makes them a bit more dressy than the cottons. Chambray, checks or a novelty gingham and cotton broadcloth are used for the beach.

HER OWN WAY

by A GIRL of TODAY

REFUSING A BRIBE.

"My God! Miss Dean where did you get this bottle?"

In his horror and fright Mr. Robinson dropped the bottle to the floor and it rolled under the counter. He did not dare to stoop down to pick it up and I would not.

I felt him kicking around among the papers and saw a look of relief come upon his face and I understood that he had found the bottle with his foot and kicked it, as he hoped, out of sight until after the store was closed at night.

"I just told you where I got the bottle, Mr. Robinson, but it seems you did not listen. Maybe you thought I was not telling you the truth. I picked it up from the floor on which Miss Cleaver was lying. I think it contained carbolic acid, and the doctor thought so, too, whatever he may have told you about epileptic fits, for I know he gave his patient an antidote for the terrible burning poison."

"What are you going to do about this, Miss Dean. You'll not tell anyone about this bottle. Promise me you will not. Did you show it to Doctor Flint?"

"No, I didn't say much to him, for to tell the truth I did not like the way he treated Miss Cleaver. He seemed more anxious to get her out of the store than of saving her life."

"Oh, Miss Dean, you must let me talk to you about this. But until I get the chance I want you to understand that I will promote you to any position in the store and make your salary double that of the place you take if you will only attend to keeping silence about this deplorable episode.

"I can't understand why Miss Cleaver did this terrible thing. She has been in the store the last 20 years, and within the last 10 has been drawing one of the largest salaries among the women. My dear, I will make your salary equal to her's if you will say nothing to anyone."

"You don't have to pay me to keep silent, Mr. Robinson. I will not say anything to anyone. I am afraid, however, that you will have to increase your salary list to unheard of proportions if you shut the mouth of each person in the store who is talking about Miss Cleaver."

This recalled Mr. Robinson to himself and he looked around to see if anyone was listening, and then he said:

"I cannot talk to you here, Miss Dean: Won't you come and have dinner with me tonight and we will settle this matter. I think Miss Cleaver will take a vacation until she fully recovers. Indeed, she may not come back to the store at all, and perhaps you might work into her position in time. How would you like that?"

HOME-MAKING HELPS

INTERNATIONAL OFFERINGS.

We borrow so many comforts from other nations that it is a good idea to give credit to them once in a while. Take, for instance, the porch or hall shades of slats used in several of the hot countries: we have taken them to ourselves, and improved on them a bit, named them and painted them in a modern way.

With thoughts dwelling on Summer drinks, we turn to the English siphon bottle that makes its own soda water.

The all-glass tea service is American, though the swizzle sticks of glass we use in the long iced tea glasses are an East Indian idea. The glass dish with bell cover to keep our toast warm on the tray is an English model reproduced in American glass. The double bowl or cracked ice is a French invention. A hole in the bottom of the bowl carries the melted ice below into the outer receptacle.

We can thank the Chinese for the dainty straw or bamboo trays that are so attractive to use for porch meals. Also, for the straw table sets in natural color or painted to use on our outdoor tables. Our first paper napkins and plates were also of Chinese make. Tea sets in Chinese or Japanese wares are specially suitable for outdoor use.

The delicate tumblers with slender stems, frosted surface and delicate green rim at the top are Venetian and are cool, dainty and attractive for Summer use. On a table set with Italian cut work linens and green and black pottery the glasses form the high light and complete the attractive appearance.

Real American things are the charming Indian rugs and hammock blankets made by the Navajos.

Austrians lay claim to the roll basket, and the French to the straw heart mould for cream cheese making.

For our porch sandwiches we will find the German egg slicer one of the cleverest work savers, for it slices the entire egg with one motion.

WILDWOOD MOVIES

"Oh, say, Jimmy," said Tommy to his pal who was home in the house with a cold, "it was a swell movie to-day! all about a couple of swallows that had so many houses they didn't know what to do."

"Well, don't waste any time, Tommy," answered the lad who had missed the story picture, "tell us all about it."

"I am not a very good story teller," said Tommy, "but here goes:

First of all there was a man putting up a lot of bird boxes in his yard. Then it showed a close up of one very pretty box, and the beautiful Mr. Tree Swallow who had taken it for the summer.

Now, this bird was courting a lady Tree Swallow, and making all sorts of swoops in the air, just to show off for her. Anyway, it was not long before she flew beside him, then they came down to the edge of the roof to talk it over, and he proposed to her I am quite sure because they both went house hunting.

Mrs. Tree Swallow, the name she was called, went and took a fancy to a plain looking birdhouse in the next garden, refusing to pay an attention to the invitations of her lover to come and live in the nice one he had found.

The poor chap fixed his feathers almost every minute, and tried his best to look pretty. He would fly over to her house and flutter in the air before her and coax and then fly back to his house and expect her to follow him. I think it was a bit mean of her not to treat him nicer than that, but maybe she thought he was a gay bird and needed a lesson.

Finally he became cranky and gave her a peck instead of a kiss. She went and examined the box that had him bewitched, but came out and flew up onto the clothes line and refused to even discuss the matter. It was plain she was disgusted with his taste, and just to settle things, she selezed a passing feather and flew to the box of her own choice.

She went in, deposited the feather, then came out and made it very unpleasant for her sweetheart until he gave in and went and gathered nesting material and brought it to the box she wanted."

DO NOT ANTICIPATE GENERAL ELECTION

Says Premier King in Answer To Mr. Meighen.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 5 (Canadian Press).—In the House of Commons yesterday, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Opposition leader, said that there were some reports that the Government was preparing for an early prorogation. He had no word as to when the reports of the committee investigating the Customs Department would be submitted to the House, but he hoped that it would be soon. Ample time should be allowed to discuss that report.

Premier Mackenzie King replied that certainly ample time would be devoted to this discussion.

"Will there be any action this session in respect of Senate reform? When will the next move take place?" pursued Mr. Meighen.

"Next sitting of the House," interjected S. W Jacobs (Liberal, George Etienne Cartier), amid laughter.

Premier King said that any step in this direction at present would unduly prolong the sitting of the House.

"And will the Government call an interprovincial conference?" asked the Opposition leader.

"Yes," replied Mr. King. He would not say whether this conference would take place before the next session of Parliament.

Mr. Meighen then asked if, in pursuance of his Richmond Hill speech, the Prime Minister proposed to take any further steps to "impair or destroy the North Atlantic combine."

Mr. King did not answer.

"No answer," commented Mr. Meighen.

A few moments later E. J. Garland (Progressive, Bow River) asked the Prime Minister if the House in regard to the single transferable vote.

Replying, the Prime Minister said that the Government was anticipating neither a general election nor amendments to the Elections Act, and that the matter of the transferable vote would be allowed to stand over until next year.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, supplemented the Prime Minister's statement by saying that he was "doing missionary work" in the interests of the single transferable vote.

In view of the Government's commitments to the subject, among whom did the Minister have to do missionary work, asked Mr. Meighen.

"Among honorable gentlemen on the opposite side of the House," Mr. Lapointe replied.

unloadin unless everything had been arranged."

This had seemed a likely assertion and he continued on his way to Montreal expecting that, either by paying customs or otherwise, the man who had chartered his vessel would legally land its cargo. The cargo had been taken aboard on the high seas. He could not remember the name of the boat he loaded from.

Mr. Calder said that surely he could remember details of such an unusual method of loading cargo, but wintess said he could not remember. He would cheerfully give the information if he could. Witness described the journey (in December, 1924) down the St. Lawrence, sometimes in fog and snow.

It was planned to take off a thousand cases of liquor in a tributary lake from the Tremblay to a yacht belonging to Neal, one of the Americans who owned the Tremblay's cargo. This plan afterwards was abandoned.

Later the liquor was unloaded at St. Sulpice. Even then he did not think that smuggling must be going on. He presumed arrangements must have been made with the customs people.

Barge Seized.

Captain Tremblay described the seizure of the barge by the Quebec Liquor Commission officers. He said that Campbell, one of the Americans, proceeded to the hotel after the seizure and attempted to locate Neal, supposed to own the cargo. When the seizure was made, he said, there were two or three of the Americans at the St. Sulpice Hotel and that they escaped through the back door of the building. Campbell, however, had remained on the barge.

Captain Tremblay asserted that he had been assured by the Americans that everything was all right with the cargo. He admitted that his vessel had been searched on previous occasions by customs officials. Had he known that the cargo was liquor, he would not have carried it.

In answer to A. J. Doucet, of the committee, Captain Tremblay said that the transhipment of liquor from the ocean vessel to his barge had taken place off the north shore of the St. Lawrence River about opposite Matane. He described the vessel but could not remember the name. Mr. Doucet suggested a number of names to the witness, which Captain Tremblay said were incorrect. He thought the name of the ship might be the "Madeline Adams," but was not sure. He though the port of registry of the "Madeline Adams" was Lunenburg.

Captain Tremblay was discharged.

Order For Liquor.

E. F. Ladore, assistant secretary for Hiram Walker and Sons, Walkerville, was the next witness. He was asked to produce the order which resulted in shipment of a large quantity of Walker's liquor to Mexico. This he did. This shipment was for 6,000 cases. He agreed to produce a cheque covering the payment for the shipment if it was in the possession of Hiram Walker and Sons. The sale had been made to a man called Dusty who, apparently, was acting for another firm.

"What did you pay the Mexican Consul at Vancouver?" asked D. Donaghy, one of the members, of the committee.

"Nothing," replied Mr. Ladore.

The order for this shipment of liquor had been obtained by Mr. Isaacs, one of the directors of Hiram Walker & Sons, now residing in Walkerville, Mr. Ladore said. The order was first received by Hiram Walker & Sons in a telegram from Mr. Isaacs who was then at Vancouver. This telegram was later confirmed by letter. Mr. Isaacs had visited Vancouver on other occasions but had not secured orders for liquor.

Mr. Donaghy asked the witness a number of questions in regard to the business which Hiram Walker and Sons did with Vancouver. The witness explained that the shipment of six thousand cases did not pay excise because it was shipped out of Canada in bond.

Witness was asked to produce certain records of his firm's transactions and agreed to do so.

INK BLOTS TEST YOUR MIND

Ink blots will tell more about your personality in ten minutes than hours of analysis, according to Professor John J. B Morgan of Northwestern University.

You can test yourself with a sheet of paper and splashes of red, green or black ink. Ask yourself what you see in them. If they appear merely as blots, you are of the conventional type. If, however, you see in them fantastic and original pictures, then you belong to a creative type above the average.

For some time, says the April Popular Science Monthly, psychologists have been using ink blots in this way to study personality, with some excellent results.

WEEK-END PROGRAMME.

The programme at St. Peter's Cathedral tomorrow promises to include some of the most interesting of the many interesting ceremonies which have taken place during the past two days, in connection with the Centennial anniversary of the saying of the first Mass in what is now the City of Peterborough.

This first Mass, according to history, was said in a log building stiuated somewhere in the neighborhood of the present Empress Hotel site, with the first priest resident in a log house where the Customs House now stands. It took place in January of the year 1826, but weather conditions were more favorable for a celebration of the anniversary in the present month of June.

There will be three low Masses at hte Cathedral tomorrow, at half past six o'clock, half past seven o'clock and nine o'clock, followed by a Pontificial High Mass at half past ten o'clock, sung by His Excellency, the Most Reverend Pietro Di Maria, Titular Archbishop of Iconium, and Apostolic Delegate to Canada and Newfoundland. The semron will be preached by Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl, Vicar General of the diocese.

At half past three o'clock in the afternoon, the statue of "Christ Our King," which has been placed on the Cathedral lawn, will be blessed and unveiled by His Excellency, and a sermon preached by Rt. Rev. M. F. Fallon, Bishop of London.

At half past four o'clock, a Civic reception and address to His Excellency will be tendered by Mayor Holloway, followed by a general reception on the lawn.

There will be no church ceremony in the evening, but on Monday morning, at eight o'clock a Pontificial Requiem High Mas will be sung by Bishop O'Brien, for the repose of the souls of all who have died in this district during the past one hundred years.

HOW WEAK GIRLS CAN GAIN STRENGTH

It Comes Through the Tonic Blood-Making Qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

In the life of almost every girl there comes a time when weakness attacks her. The strain upon her blood supply becomes too great, and there follows headaches and backaches, loss of appetite, attacks of dizziness, heart palpitation and constant weariness and a tendency to a decline. All these symptoms may not be present in any particular case, but the presence of any one of them shows the necessity for prompt treatment. And there is no other treatment so sure and so speedy as that through the blood-making qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pils. They are the one thing needed to maintain the health of growing girls and women of mature years.

Here is a bit of positive proof of the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind. Miss Clara Fraser, Thessalon, Ont., has been brought back to health and strength through the timely use of this medicine, and gives expression of her gratitude as follows:—"I feel it a duty as well as a pleasure to tell you what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me. They have restored me to health, if, indeed, they did not save my life. I was suffering greatly from anaemia. I lost flesh and always felt tired and nervous. At last I grew so weak I had to remain in bed. The doctor did not seem to help me any and I was growing weaker, and my heart was bothering me. At last a friend who called to see me said she had read of a similar case restored by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and urged me to try them. I felt helpless but decided to take her advice, so my mother got me a supply of the pills and I began taking them. It was not long before I began to find benefit from the use of the pills, and in less than two months my health was restored. In fact I was in better health than I had ever enjoyed before. I strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all who are weak and run down, for I feel sure they will not be disappointed."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FARM NEWS AND PROBLEMS

NATIONS UNITE TO STOP SPREAD OF CORN BORER

Concentrated Effort Being Made This Year To Check Progress.

GREAT MENACE.

Discovered in U. S. A. in 1917, Pest Has Multiplied Rapidly.

(By Israel Klein, Science Editor, NEA Service.)

The corn borer menace in the United States and Canada has grown to such tremendous proportions that a concentrated international and interstate effort is being made this year to check its progress.

Authorities from Canada and the United States, from the various corn growing states and from interested scientific institutions are combining their ingenuity and resources to stamp out this pest.

Although they have so far succeeded in slowing up the advance of the corn borer, the infested area has spread to threatening limits. Already well intrenched in the area around Lake Erie, the borer threatens to spread out faster than ever into the more thickly cultivated corn area of Iowa, and the surrounding corn belt.

Quarantine, education and even laws of enforcement are being tried to halt this enemy. Yet somehow or other, the insect has already found its way as far south as Marion county, Ohio, over the watershed between Lake Erie and the Gulf of Mexico, whence a flood, or just heavy rains, may carry infested corn stalks to new regions of attack.

Going Only Eight Years.

The rapidity of this advance is shown by the history of the pest in America.

Although believed to have come in from Europe about 1909 or 1910, it wasn't discovered until 1917. Then it was found to have covered an area of about 100 square miles around Boston.

Five years later, the area covered by the corn borer went up to nearly 8000 square miles, covering eastern Massachusetts and New Hampshire for nearly 3000 square miles, a 2500 square mile area around Schenectady, N. Y., and more than 2500 square miles along the southern edge of Lake Erie.

In the three years since the fall of 1922, this 8000 square mile area has grown into an infested region of more than 40,000 square miles in the United States alone, despite the utmost efforts of the government to check the borer's advance.

Quarantine, law enforcement, education and laboratory methods were applied. Eight different types of corn borer parasites have been let loose over certain areas. Yet the progress of the insect hasn't shown any slackening.

Spreading in Canada.

Canada, too, has been almost helpless against the advance of this corn enemy. It crossed the border in 1920 and settled in Ontario, on the other side of Lake Erie. Now it is said to have covered an area of 20,000 to 25,000 square miles, and it's threatening the more productive corn district to the north and west.

Strict quarantine is established, especially during summer. Every automobile leaving the watched corn area is stopped so that no corn is removed. Massachusetts has gone so far as to enforce the plowing under of all corn stubbles. And a strong campaign of education among farmers and city folk is being carried on.

The seriousness of this menace isn't over emphasized when it is realized that as many as a million corn borers in the dangerous caterpillar stage may be present in an acre of land, that the moth developed from it cannot be stopped from flying off and landing in a fresh uninfested area where it lays its eggs for the borers of next year, that this is not a one-crop pest, like the cotton boll weevil, and that it has been known to attack about 200 other plants, most of them of economic value.

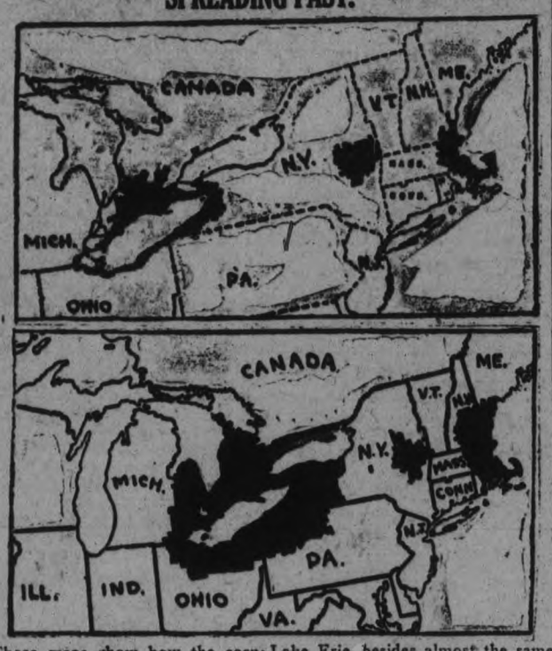
Insecticides Ineffective.

Besides, such control measures as dusting with insecticides, or developing resistant varieties of corn have been found practically useless.

The real control must come through farmers' help, in destroying the caterpillar between harvest and June, cutting the corn as near to the ground as possible burning up all unused stalks, fodder and corncobs, burning all fence rows, plowing deep and running the corn through the silage cutter.

Above all, co-operation among farmers and state and federal authorities is essential in this campaign, and in this authorities say they are aided by practically all corn growers.

SPREADING FAST.



These maps show how the corn borer has advanced in less than four years. In April, 1922, as the upper map shows, the pest had covered an area of about 8000 square miles, in New England, New York and along Lake Erie, besides almost the same area in Ontario. Now, the lower map shows an infestation of more than 40,000 square miles in the United States and nearly 25,000 square miles in Canada.

Goose Flies Around To Neighboring Farms

WESTWOOD, June 3. — A remarkable goose owned by Benjamin Cardwell has succeeded in drawing the attention of different farmers in the surrounding country. Unlike its fellow mates it possesses the art of flight, and in nature it resembles that of the wild goose. It has been known to fly in mid-air from one farmyard to Another. One farmer, in whose hen-house it had taken refuge for the night, attempted a capture but was unsuccessful, the goose escaping through a small opening and immediately taking flight.

BEST VARIETIES OF VEGETABLES

Experimental Farms Give List of Good Types To Plant.

VERY PRODUCTIVE.

(Experimental Farms Note.)

While a much longer list of varieties might be given, the following includes those which have been found to be suitable over a wide area of Canada.

Asparagus.—The Mary Washington has been found very satisfactory from the standpoint of disease resistance and is a very satisfactory cropper. Beans.—Pencil Pod Black Wax, Round Pod Kidney Wax, Stringless Green Pod, and Hodson Long Pod Wax, with Kentucky Wonder Wax and Golden Cluster Wax as pole sorts. Beets.—Flat Egyptian as an early sort and Detroit Dark Red. Cabbage.—Golden Acre as a round-headed first early, followed by Copenhagen Market, Enkhuizen Glory as mid-season, with short-stem Danish Ballhead for winter storage. Cauliflower.—Early Snowball and Early Dwarf Erfurt. Carrots.—Chantenay and Danvers. Corn.—Pickaninny as first early, followed by Early Malcolm and Golden Bantam. Cucumbers.—Davis Perfect. Celery.—Golden Plume. This variety will, it is believed, take the place of the old reliable Golden Self-blanching on account of its vigour of growth and freedom from disease. Early Blanching Fordhook is a very promising green variety which procudes very thick, meaty leafstalks of exceedingly good quality. Lettuce.—Grand Rapids, Iceberg. Muskmelons.—Hearts of Gold or Hoodoo, Miller Cream or Osage, Bender Surprise and Emerald Gem. Onions.—Yellow Globe Danvers, Sweet Spanish, Red Wethersfield and Red Globe. Peas.—Thomas Laxton Blue Bantam, Lincoln, Stratagem. Parsnip. — Hollow Crown. Radish — Scarlet Turnip White Tip, French Breakfast. Rhubarb.—Ruby and McDonald. Spinach.—King of Denmark and New Zealand which is a perpetual variety. Squash.—Golden and Green Hubbard and the Acorn Squash, the flesh of this small variety somewhat resembles sweet potatoes in texture and flavour. They are very productive. Tomatoes. — Alacrity as the first early followed by Earliana, with John Baer and Bonny Best for the main crop.—F. T. Ritchie, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

RECORD CROP CONDITION.

"Soil, seed, season and cultivation are the determining conditions which produce a record corn growth," sais C. S. Nelson of Freeman, Mo., who was able to grow 115 bushels of corn an acre on a five-acre farm. Nelson gave his farm the most careful and detailed attention.

Cows which freshen in the fall will give 10 per cent more milk and 15 per cent more butterfat than the same cows which freshen in the spring, according to dairy extension workers.

CONDITIONS GOOD.

Red Deer Farmer Says Crops Have Had Plenty of Moisture.

In a letter received on Wednesday from Mr. Sam Blakely, Red Deer District, Alberta, he states that seeding was all finished on the first of May, and that the crops in his vicinity are looking fine, there having been plenty of moisture.

PIGS NEED MINERALS.

Experiments show that pigs, when allowed to self-feed, seldom get enough minerals and as a result their bones are weak. It is a common belief that pigs will seek a balanced ration, but these tests showed that special care has to be taken to see that the animals get proper food nourishment.

HARDIEST FRUITS FOR CANADIAN CLIMATE PICKED

Department of Agriculture Recommends Varieties of Great Hardiness.

MOST RELIABLE.

Some Varieties Succeed Well If Protected in Winter.

(Experimental Farms Note.)

While hardiness in fruits is important in all parts of Canada, it is not much thought about where the climate is mildest. There is a very large part of Canada, however, where hardiness is the chief consideration and the varieties to be grown must be carefully selected if they are to withstand the very severe winters.

Investigations, conducted by the Dominion Experimental Farms, show that among apples, the best and most reliable to plant, except on the prairies or other places where it is coldest, are Yellow Transparent, Melba, Duchess of Oldenburgh, Wealthy, and McIntosh. For the prairies those most likely to succeed are Hibernal, Blushed Calville, Anisette, Charlamoff, Patten and Lowland Raspberry.

The hardiest and best plums ar among the improved varieties of the native, American and hybrid plums. Some of the most satisfactory in Eastern Canada are Cheney, Omaha, Elliott, Emerald and Waneta, and for the prairies Cheney, Assiniboine, Mammoth, Sapa, Opata, Tom Thumb and Champa. The latter is called a cherry but is more plum-like. There are no really hardy cherries of good quality.

All the grapes of good quality require to be protected in winter but a few of these, which are hardy enough when given a little protection with soil and are early enough to ripen, are Early Daisy, Moore Early, Winchell, Brighton, and Lindley. Of the hardiest varieties needing no protection in most places the Beta is the most noted.

Among bush fruits, some of the best hardy varieties are:

Black Currants—Climax, Saunders, Kerby.

Red Currants—Perfection, Red Cross.

Gooseberries — Downing, Poorman, Silvia.

Raspberries — Herbert, Newman, King, Brighton, while Viging is promising.

The hardiest and best strawberry of good quality is the Senator Dunlap, which is popular from the Atlantic to the Pacific in Canada. Another variety which does better than others in the most exposed parts of the prairies is the Dakota.—W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturist.

WOMAN FARMER.

Mrs. S. A. Burnham of Quinton, Okla., owner of 1,000 acres of land, plans to do all of her own farm work. At present she is learning terracing and plans to terrace her land with her own efforts.

BIG PRODUCTION.

C. M. Scovil, Oklahoma farmer, has made a successful record with five four-year-old cows during the last seven and one-half months. These cows produced a total yield of 7,000 pounds of butterfat during this period.

WARNS AGAINST WEEVIL.

Growers who plan to plant strawberries the coming season are warned by the Department of Entomology of the experiment station against purchasing plants infested with the strawberry root weevil. Land already infested with the weevil is best planted to grain the first year ater plowing under.

YOUNG PRODUCING COW.

Milk production at 12 and one-half months by a Jersey heifer owned by H. W. Keeth of Fairfax, Okla., is believed to set a record for early milking. The heifer's calf was born prematurely and did not live, but the heifer is normal.

Many ranchers use paper twine to tie fleeces, as fragments of this come out of wool easily in the scouring process. Other twines leave bits of fiber which are difficult to remove.

Cut Corn Low and Early

The importance of cutting corn as low and as early as possible is hown by this table compiled from tests conducted by agricultural experts of Ohio State University:

FORMER RESIDENT OF OTONABEE IS PROMINENT AMONG RANCHERS OF MERCED COUNTY, CALIFORNIA

J. A. Elmhirst, Formerly of Keene District, Manager 15,000 Acres.

HAS BIG HERDS

Has Recently Purchased Herd of 228 Aberdeen Angus Cattle.

By Peter McClung.

(This is the first of a series of articles to appear in the Merced Sun-Star dealing with Merced county agricultural industries.)

An important addition to the live-stock industry in Merced county is the herd of purebred Aberdeen Angus cows headed by 10 young bulls of the same breed, recently acquired by J. A. Elmhirst, whose headquarters for 15,000 acres of grazing and hay lands are the S. R. Fancher stock farm at Athlone, 10 miles southeast of Merced.

Mr. Elmhirst brought the cows, 228 in number, from Texas, where he bought them at a public sale of a noted herd with a purebred registration period of 30 years' standing. The bulls topped the best beef strain of the O. H. Harrison's Farm company, of Hollywood, California.

These cattle, it should be understood, are intended to form the foundation herd of a strain of beef stock best fitted for local conditions. Therefore, while they possess in a high degree that peculiar form essential to meat production, they are somewhat different from the type usually seen in the show ring.

The Best Animal.

Obviously, the best animal is the one that will produce the greatest weight of flesh as compared to the offal, with the most liberal portions of choice cuts when ready for the block. But in order to meet the forage requirements here, there must be a little more bone, necessary to greter bodily vigor, than is required by the exact type of animal best suited for exhibition and as fed for that purpose. This is because some of the local conditions such as weather and feeding cannot be taken into account in moulding a type common to all localities.

For more than two centuries breeders have been doing their best and have performed wonders in developing cattle for meat, as well as dairy production, but opportunity still remains for each different locality to add something of value to itself alone.

And I believe this is about what Mr. Elmhirst is heading for, with his herd of acclimated, vigorous Texas cows and California bulls—every one purebred, jet black and of good form, showing no evidences of any throwback quality. The Aberdeen Angus is probably the most popular of the three hornless breeds so far developed for meat production.

A Treat for Stock Lovers.

In company with Mr. Elmhirst I had the pleasure of viewing his blooded stock, the cows from a distance, as they grazed in the pasture, and the bulls at a close-up inspection in the corral. With clean, small heads, short legs, long bodies, and heavy flesh coverings of loin and sirloin and with portions of ham like a well-bred pig, these cattle, especially the male herd, present a most attractive appearance to the lover of good meat stock.

Both in form and disposition they compare with the long-horned steer, of the days of the open range, as the mustang with the thoroughbred horse. They are of uniform color in a degree about as near to perfection as the law of variation will permit.

This breed claims more carcass prizes than any other class of meat cattle. In good condition the cows will weigh about 1100. Already one of the bulls, only 16 months old, is beginning to mature.

Their rapid growth and early development fit these cattle for baby beef production, the purpose I was told for which they were acquired. I believe the owner has shown good judgment in setting up this high standard of excellence in the foundation herd, instead of stocking up with grade cows, as is the common practice.

What Can Be Seen.

But not all the things of interest on this extensive stock ranch center in the purebred herd. There are other cattle—some 6,000 being handled every year. These are both cows and steers, kept in separate pastures, and for the most part Herefords of high grade, as shown by their color and color markings. The steers are bought when yearlings, on the ranges of Arizona, Texas and Mexico, and fed here and marketed when two or three years old. "I believe in winter feeding," Mr. Elmhirst said. "Insufficient nutrition during the winter season will increase the cost of food maintenance instead of lessening it. Keeping them in good condition pays from the market standpoint as well as that of flesh yield. A daily ration of cottonseed with its 30 to 42 per cent protein, will work wonders and put them in condition to hit the high market in April."

Abundance of Markets.

The calves are taken off the cows in April, giving time for the older herd to become hog-fat for the October market. Mr. Elmhirst says he has found that there are six coast markets to play here, besides chances at Salt Lake and Ogden, and often the preliminary skirmish is highly profitable. He believes this is the best grass country he has ever seen, although he started his meat career when a boy in his father's shop in Canada, and working outward, familiarized himself with the ranges there and in Montana and elsewhere. The salt grass is green the year around, and filligree, wild oats and other grasses come on so fast that it is said a northern man seeing a herd of cattle on adequate pasture imagines they are being held in a corral.

Constantly on duty at the farm, and maintaining the last word in equipment and efficiency, the owner is able to perform the somewhat remarkable task of operating the big plant with the help of but one man employe. The fences are secure and stock have easy access to water, there being 14 artesian wells and windmill lifts. Branding and dehorning is done at the rate of 30 head an hour. A shipping station is located on the farm.

Chief among the impressions I received which make for optimistic expectations were the seeming good judgment and driving power of the owner and manager. I believe Mr. Elmhirst is going to build up a strain of meat-producing cattle here that will merit and attract nation-wide attention.

From Days of Old.

In passing I cannot refrain from saying a word about the pleasant Fancher home on this farm. Mr. L. R. Fancher lives with his nephew, A. C. Fancher, and the latter's family, maintaining residence on the old farm purely from choice, since he is president of one of Merced's prominent financial institutions. I found him a considerate and gracious host, an interesting conversationalist, looking backward over an active experience beginning here prior to the dawn of the homebuilding era by which the sturdy pioneers have reclaimed from the wilderness thousands of acres of now productive lands. He told me had ridden as cattle range the broad acres upon which the beautiful and progressive little city of Merced now stands.

While I was not interviewing Mr. Fancher for publication, I believe I am violating no confidence in making these statements. A shade-tree in the yard almost six feet in diameter, with great spreading branches, was a mere sapling when Mr. Fancher acquired the homesite of his present 5200-acre farm.

The junior Mr. Fancher finds pleasant and profitable pastime and also does his bit in helping to keep up the food supply—said by President Coolidge to be facing a demand for importation within 10 years—in poultry and egg production.

Thousands in White.

The flock contains about 1000 hens of the single-comb variety of White Leghorn, all alike as peas in a pod, showing the unmistakable signs of careful breeding. They are properly housed and have a range comprising two acres of alfalfa. In addition to pasturing this flock, the small alfalfa patch produces hay enough to supply the two family cows, I was told.

On the homestead are large barns and other good buildings and plenty of them, lawns and flowers and evidences everywhere of prosperity and contentment.

CAN'T HIDE.

The turkey might be in the straw but it's not lost! This Mr. Gobbler carries a tinkling bell with him in his wanderings. Louis Kuertz, Loveland, O., has applied the cow bell to turkeys. It used to be a mixed-up affair for him to locate his turkeys when they strayed from home, but now it's clear as a bell.

TREE SPRAYS POISON BEES

Use While Tree is in Bloom Stops Pollination.

KILL OFF BEES.

(By NEA Service.)

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Orchardists must hereafter avoid spraying their fruit trees while they are in full bloom otherwise they run a great risk of "killing the honeybee that carries the golden pollen."

Ever since fruit trees have been sprayed with arsenicals beekeepers hav been interested in the effect of this practice on the honeybee. In times past they have become excited and caused wide distribution of literature entitled "Don't Spray While in Bloom."

The U. S. Department of Agriculture now comes to the aid of the beekeepers with some results of scientific tests conducted to determine the effects on honeybees of spraying fruit trees with arsenicals. It was found that spraying fruit trees in full bloom under certain conditions is very injurious to bees.

For the tests, a large isolated commercial orchard, consisting of 700 apple trees and almost ideally located at Winthrop, Me., was selected. Ten colonies of bees were installed in the orchard. On the 25th of May, when all of the trees were nearly in full bloom, they were sprayed with a mixture of paste lead arsenate and lime-sulphur.

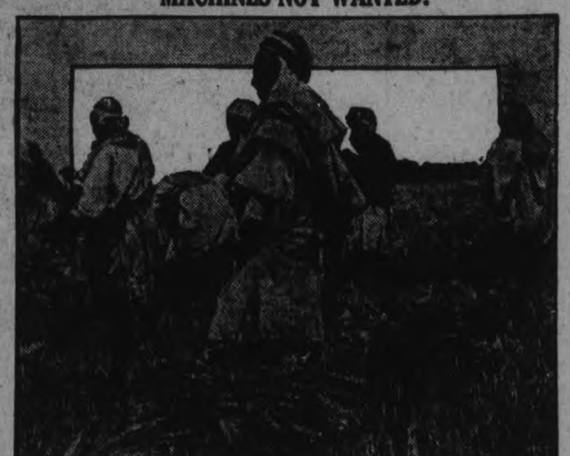
Unusual mortality of the bees was first noticeable on the second day after they had access to the sprayed flowers, and on the third day after they had been poisoned the damage was unmistakable. The heavy mortality continued as long as the sprayed flowers lasted, and in some of the colonies until all the bees had died.

Fortunately however, as shown by other tests, spraying of fruit trees at the customary time—when 90 per cent or more of the petals have fallen—bees are not injured if conditions are most favorable. The codling moth in apple orchards is best controlled by applying the first spray after most of the petals have fallen and this offers the fruit grower a leaway in his spraying schedule so that he may avoid poisoning the bees which visit his orchard.

Concrete is recommended for general repairs of sills and floors of farm buildings. This material is easy to handle and effects an extremely durable repair.

The gods sell everything good for labor.—Epicharmus.

MACHINES NOT WANTED.



In the pre-Christian era was a principal crop of some of the European countries. It was harvested with hook and sickle during the days when Abraham lived in the old world. And today the same methods are employed in wheat harvesting in India. These Indians are using the old hook and sickle to reap their mammoth annual breadstuff crop.

PRICE CHANGES KILL PROFITS FROM PRODUCE

Farmers Need Big Business Methods and Organization.

SAYS GOVERNOR.

Chief of Farm State of Iowa Tells of Farmers' Troubles.

(By John Hammill, Governor of Iowa.)

The fluctuation in the market values of farm produce creates the greatest disturbance in modern agriculture. This fluctuation is encouraged by the farmers' lack of a systematic selling organization.

The farmers of the corn belt should be organized to care for their surplus products and they should have the aid of a federal farm board.

This board should be similar to the Federal Reserve Board and have the power to act in an emergency to control surplus production through the farm organizations and either sell the products abroad without breaking the home price or hold it at home until the markets call for it.

The farmers' chief problem at the present time is the stabilization of farm produce prices.

Organization.

There is no systematic organization for the distribution of farm products. The farmer dumps his crop on a market in the fall and the price goes down. When it has all been brought in, the price fluctuates and the farmer does not get the benefits which he deserves.

An industry does not flood the market. It stores its products and keeps it until the demand to buy is there. That should be the case with the farmers but it is impossible to organize WITH the individual farmers all over the nation.

This lack of organized selling is the chief cause of the fluctuation in the price of farm products today. Farmers need intelligent, orderly and continuous marketing during the 12 months of the year.

Something must be done for agriculture to place it upon its feet. Agriculture must adopt modern business principles along with industry, finance and labor.

Legislative Aid.

Agriculture needs legislative aid in order to become stabilized. It should be granted the same benefits accorded industry, finance and labor in order to stabilize its industry and to take care of the surplus products of the farm.

Men engaged in agriculture are unable to control their production as the men who are engaged in manufacture.

The season, weather and such conditions control the amount of production.

The cost of government hasbeen continually growing. Tax burdens are on the increase, and if agriculture is to bear its fair share of obligation to the government, it must be placed in a position to do this.

Credit is necessarily essential to carry a man along and in order to function his business properly, but a man cannot get out of debt by borrowing more money. Neither can the men who are engaged in agriculture liquidate the obligations they now have unless they can get a fair price for the products which they produce on the farm.

Kingston Freak Chicken Is Gifted With Hindsight

KINGSTON, June 4.—A Barred Rock chicken passed away here recently, and in its passing hangs an interesting story. This particular Barred Rock was only hatched out this spring, but early in life it gave evidence of possessing that quality which is usually only contributed to politicians—namely, hindsight.

It was one of a number of Barred Rocks. Mr. Ewart McFarlane, of Nelson street, hatched out but this chick, by a curious freak of nature, had a peculiar system of locomotion. Instead of walking forward, it would place its head between its legs and run backward at a great speed.

As is sometimes the case, when one possesses strange talents, this bird was shunned by all his companions, and it is thought that a broken heart was the real cause of its death.

Crop Reports

The following extracts are from weekly reports of Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Brant.—Rains of past week have improved fall wheat very much but considerable has been patched or ploughed up. Alfalfa is showing wonderful growth at present. Red clover and alsike appear to have been practically all destroyed. Blossoms are very late in appearing—have been practically at a standstill during the past few days. Small fruits appear to be in very good condition and, while generally late, doing very well at present.

Bruce.—The warm weather of the early part of the week and recent showers have made a marked improvement in the appearance of fall wheat and clover. The alfalfa, particularly, has made a very satisfactory growth. Fall wheat still looks very patchy, although, as yet, the number of fields which have been re-seeded to spring grains is not large.

Carleton.—Clovers have been winter killed considerably. New seeding of alfalfa has done much better than alfalfa of one year standing. The weather has been cold and showery, thus holding up seeding operations. Work has not been started on the low, wet land. Seeding is only nicely started.

Elgin.—Fall wheat is beginning to grow but the crop will be a scattered one. clover also has suffered very much with winter killing. More care is being taken with the orchards than usual and spraying is well under way.

Frontenac.—Farmers generally are realizing that sweet clover has an important place on the farm as a pasture crop, and they are increasing their acreage devoted to this crop. The general impression is that the season is about ten days later than the average season.

Lambton.—The creameries all report big supplies of cream for this season of the year. The Lambton Creamery Company encourage the personal delivery of cream to their factory by the farmers. They have nearly 300 farmers delivering their own cream to the factory, 85 farmers visiting the factory on Saturday last. There is considerable fall wheat in farmers' hands for this season of the year. In all probability it will be fed to hogs. The price of hogs will warrant feeding wheat. Fourteen and fifteen dollars a pair is being offered for young pigs.

Lanark.—The past week may be said to have been almost ideal for spring work. The first half of the week was decidedly fine but the last two days we have had enough showers to keep the ground from drying out and yet not enough to stop farmers from seeding.

Leeds.—Blossom buds on apple trees would indicate not more than 50 per cent of last year's crop. Raspberries show about 15 per cent winter killing, but this is mainly on the top of the canes, which is usually cut off. About 75 per cent of the seeding will be completed by Saturday of this week and early fields are now showing green. Root crops were planted in large quantities this week and vegetable crops, such as cabbage, lettuce and tomatoes, have been transplanted in many cases.

Ontario.—Fall wheat appears to be about 75 per cent of an average crop. Young seeding of clover seems to be coming along well, although alfalfa, especially old stands of the crop, is badly killed out in some districts.

Oxford.—About three weeks ago Mr. Byron Jevney was appointed field man for the Holstein Club of this county. As a result of T. B. testing in the Hamilton district, and similar testing being done over in New York State, there is a very brisk demand at the present time for cattle from this country. Two carloads have been shipped out since Mr. Jevney was appointed; another carload is just now being purchased by a Hamilton man, and orders are coming in freely from across the line. The appointment of Mr. Jevney to handle this work is proving a timely one.

Fort William.—Red clover and alfalfa have wintered very well in the Fort William district. This is owing to the steady winter and late spring. It is especially interesting to note that alfalfa, which is being introduced, standing the rigorous winter very well. There are still a number of farmers in the Fort William district who have varying amounts of potatoes on hand. One farmer has about 400 bushels of good table stock or 250 of good seed stock of Irish Cobblers and Green Mountains.

VITAL FACTORS IN PICKING SEED NOT CONSIDERED

Many Growers Sell Certified Stock, Saving Bin Run For Use.

In POTATO PLOT.

Considerable Loss Through Reduction of Yield By Disease Found.

Considerable loss through reduction in yield by diseases is annually experienced by the potato grower. The steadily growing use of certified seed is contributing its quota towards improved quality and increased yields; but a critical analysis of the present attitude towards, and methods adopted with respect to, selection of seed for approaching season's planting reveals certain factors of vital importance which have hardly been accorded the consideration they well merit. Many growers are inclined to dispose of all their best certified stock, thereby necessitating the use of bin run for their own seed, assuming that such will produce a crop conforming to the certification standards the succeeding year. A bona fide seed producer should exercise the same care in grading and selecting seed for his own use as he would when offering the same for sale. Preferably, this stock should be from a tuber unit seed plot, which had been advisedly isolated, rogued, sprayed or dusted, afforded the most improved and accepted cultural practices and separately stored to obviate the possibility of becoming mixed with inferior stock. Special care should be exercised to remove foreign varieties, cut, bruised, off-type and diseased tubers.

Investigations, conducted by the Dominion Experimental Farms, show that certain diseases such as Blackleg and Rhizoctonia can be controlled in a great measure by effective seed treatment. All tubers to be treated should be soaked from one to one and a half hours in clean water to soften any hard, diseased areas and remove particles of earth clinging to the surface of the tuber-thereby permitting a readier disinfection, with formalin or corrosive sublimate, subsequently. Metal vessel, should never be used as containers for corrosive sublimate for the presence of certain metals impairs its efficacy. After the tubers have received proper seed treatment they should be placed in trays or, if more convenient, in shallor layers upon the floor of a well-lighted building where sprouting can take place. At the end of a few weeks, when the sprouts have attained a quarter to half an inch in length, a careful selection of tubers showing only vigorous sprouts should be made. All tubers manifesting a very spindling sprout should be discarded. If given reasonable handling, the sprouts will not be broken while cutting the seed or during planting.

The cutting into seed pieces should also receive careful attention. Any tubers showing a brown or black discoloration at the stem end or internally should be discarded. When a diseased tuber has been cut, the knife used should be thoroughly disinfected with formalin or corrosive sublimate before it is used again. The tubers should be cut to give sets approximately two ounces in weight with two to three eyes. The cut seed should be dusted with land plaster, air-slaked lime or flowers of sulphur, preferably the former, to dry the cut surfaces and lessen damage from heating if the weather is warm or if planting is delayed.

Observance of the foregoing methods will result in the production of better stock, higher yields and increased profits.—D. J. MacLeod, Plant Pathologist, Dominion Experimental Farm, Fredericton, N.B.

FRUIT TREES CAN BE STRENGTHENED

Train Branches of Young Trees To Bear Heavy Crops.

(By NEA Service.)

NEW YORK, June 4.—A two-year-old apple tree can be trained to grow so that the branches of the tree will not break down under the load of an abundant crop.

"The first thing to do in training the tree," says A. Freeman Mason, specialist in fruit growing, "is to select the scaffold branches.

"If an open center vase-shaped apple tree is desired, three or four vigorous branches, well distributed around the trunk and making wide-angled crotches with it, should be selected.

"The center branch, if one is present, and any additional side branches, should be cut off and three or four remaining scaffold branches should be tipped back lightly to make them of equal height.

"If a leader-type tree, or one in which a central trunk is carried up for several feet, is desired, the central or dominating branch is not removed."

A short piece of light board fastened across a turkey's back will prevent the bird from flying over a fence. Cut notches in the board and tie with a strip of cloth to each wing.

TENNIS STAR ILL TOOK APPENDICITIS

Hopes of United States' Fans Dashed When Miss Wills Took Ill.

PARIS, June 5 (Canadian Press).—The hopes of all the United States that Helen Wills, the California tennis star, would wrest the world's tennis laurels from Suzanne Lenglen at the international hard courts tourney now being played in Paris, were dashed yesterday when Miss Wills was rushed to a hospital for an operation for appendicitis.

The operation was a complete success, and attending physicians declared she was entirely out of danger. But Suzanne's title will rest secure this year, so far as the Wills' challenge is concerned, for the doctors say it will be absolutely impossible for Helen to play at Wimbledon the end of June. In fact, she will probably not be permitted to wield a racquet again until fall.

Helen thinks otherwise. Even while she was on the way to the operating table, she told one of her team-mates that she would be "all right for Wimbledon."

"Maybe I will not be able to play in the Wightman Cup matches in England, but I am sure I will be ready for Wimbledon."

The announcement that Helen's illness was diagnosed as appendicitis came as a great surprise, even though it had been known that she was out of condition and not feeling in the least well. Her play in last week's Franco-American team matches and again on Wednesday in the first round of the international tournament against Madame Golding was far from top form. She looked tired, pale and drawn.

The California girl herself thought she had over-trained.

Yesterday Helen complained that she was not feeling well, and although she suffered much pain, she hoped until four o'clock that she would be able to meet Miss Bouman of Holland in the second round singles.

The famous St. Andrews golf course in Scotland has records of the game as far back as 1552.

INDIANS LOSE OUT IN SIXTH

Were Leading 4 To 0 When Cogs Cut Loose and Scored Nine.

By calling in reinforcements—and there appeared to be reserves aplenty within hailing distance—Cognawagas rubbed off a deep coating of kalsomine and defeated Curve Lake at the Exhibition Park last evening . the score of 9 to 4. Up to the end of the fifth, the Indians had fielded cleverly, and had succeeded in bombing Johnny Wilson off the hurling heap, the score reading 4 to 0. In the 6th, without a / warning the blow fell. Rooke sent up a fly to C. McCue in right field. McCue got under the ball, caught the Spalding and allowed it to drop. Crary got a one-base clout and Smith was throw out at first. Coppaway, who had been performing after the manner of "Hap" Harrison, sent the ball back to the catcher to head off a runner and two of them scored, when the ball wen. high to the grandstand. That allowed the Cogs to get away and they never stopped until nine runs had been packed away. Merritt Taylor, who had pitched a fine game, could not withstand the stampede of his support and gave way to Muskrat with two gone and seven runs across.

The Curve Lake players were as mum as the first gentleman of the Province of Ontario, but to a lot of fans, the Cogs had a big advantage over their opponents. They were able to trot out two youthful batteries; they were able to plug holes in the infield and garden, and included in the lot were three players from the Royals of last season, and another good recruit from the City League. However, it was only a ball game and the Curve Lake athletes—the majority of whom are around the 30 years mark—several are older — went away satisfied that they had given the youngsters a bad scare.

The Indians will be back again next Tuesday evening for their home game with Keene. These two teams are playing their games at Exhibition Park to avoid the long trip between Curve Lake and Keene. The other reason for the repeated appearance of the Indians here, is the scheduling of games before th opening it the fishing season during which time most of the players act as guides. After Tuesday. their remaining games in the first half are at Curve Lake, both on Saturdays. This will carry them over a period of nearly three weeks without a trip.

Crary, who was with the Royals last season, and is playing second base for the Cogs, was their star performer last evening. Besides showing some snappy fielding, he had the longest hit of the game, a three-bagger to left. Wilson on the firing line, was touched up rather freely in the third, when three runs were scored but Harvey Smith was steadier, during the three frames he worked.

Merritt Taylor and Jonas Jacob were a formidable battery, while the Curve Lakers were in the hunt, and Coppaway at first, L. McCue in middlefield and Muskrat at short, did some good defensibe work.

Inside Sporting Dope

By A Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Sad doings, them, at the local ball yard Sat., eh Mac? When the Bellevillians come along and knock us off with a 2nd string pitcher making our lads look buffaloed at the bat, it ain't just what you'd call a rosy opening for the season. They was few bright spots. Mayor Holloway showed 1 when he took off his new straw skimmer to go out and throw the 1st ball, but His Worship covered up the shining patch again as soon as he was thru, and the proceedings was drab thereafter. The game served to introduce 2 of our political celebrities, Mister Bradburn as a batter and Mister Peck as catcher. The Mayor's control not being Government control, Mister Bradburn swatted the ball so that the Federal member didn't have no chance to show whether he's a catcher or not. Too bad, too, cause he's been sifting on the bench down there at Ottawa for 3 or 4 months and Sat. looked like his chance to bust in.

As an opening day the function lacked something. The customers was not as numerous as usual, and most of them seemed to be sitting there waiting for disaster to hit the Petes. They had a kind of a "We know you're going to blow up somewhere between now and the 9th" expression on their maps that was felt by the members of Mister Johnson's squad, which played good but lifeless ball for 4 innings, and then blew.

WHEN SHE BUSTED.

The brake in the Sat. game come in the 5th when Mister Hagerman of the visitors started to steal third, while our Mister Helson was softly humming "Don't Wake Me Up; Let Me Dream," and our Mister Ross pegged the ball high into left field. Now, it ain't quite clear which 1 of the 3 showed the worst baseball on this play—Mister Hagerman for trying to steal third when he shoulda been out by 5 feet, or Mister Helson and Ross for their part in the episode—but it's easy to say which got the most benefit outa it, for the mishap put the skids under the old ball game. After that Belleville win as easy as it seems to have been to drive a truck load of smuggled silks past a Canadian customs official.

Many a bootlegger the day after a convention has more stuff left than this Mister Goyer showed on the hilltop for Belleville during the 6 frames he worked, but anyway, he had enough to baffle most of the homesters, and when it looked as if he might not last the journey, Mister John Ouellet stopped the Petes in their tracks.

Right now it looks as if some 1 don't throw some sand in the Kingston gear box them Ponies is going to make a runaway out of the Central race. What they done to Belleville Wed. was a crime, the Gerow men being walloped 18 to 0. Of course, it rained all thru the battle, but they wasn't anybody holding any umbrella over the Ponies either, and they made Mister Gerow's men look like 30 cents waiting for the change.

THE DANFORTHS ARE COMING.

We is going to be entertained next week with a visit from the Danforth ladies' softball team. This outfit of good-looking young women is about the snappiest girls' ball team in the Dominion, and the local Mabels will hafta to be extra good to keep them in sight, according to Toronto reports, which, of course, ain't always reliable. We get our weather forecasts from there and you all know about them. Anyway, the visit of the Danforths oughta to be a event full of interest to all and sundry and will attract a big crowd of customers to the Stevenson Park next Wed. evening. And for the good name of Peterboro, let us be fair to the fair visitors. The fans should give them a hand for their good work and an even break all along the line.

By the way, Mister Sporting Editor, did you notice the way Mister Ray Rose crossed me up last Sat. Here I was pointing out that he was more at home at 2nd base and he goes out there to short-stop and looks like a combination of Rabbit, Maranville and Travis Jackson. I'm going to lay off them all. Even the Washington Senators ain't win a serious since I picked them to repeat in the American race.

Well, anyway, Mac, as all the umpires says when they pull a boner, "I call 'em as I see 'em."

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

OFFICIAL OPENING SEYMOUR LEAGUE

All the Teams Are Getting Ready for the Big Event.

BURNBRAE, June 5 — With the official opening of the Seymour Baseball League only a few days away speculation is rife as to the strength of the various teams. When Rylstone and Burnbrae face the barrier on Wednesday evening next at 6.15 p.m. at the fair grounds a good crowd will be on hand to see these old rivals in mighty combat. The last encounter between these teams will long be remembered as one of the most exciting and well-played games on Campbellford grounds. Burnbrae emerged victorious at the end of seven innings by a score of 2 runs to 1 with only one minor error chalked up against either team. The line-up of the Rylstone team will be much the same as last year Heath, their speed ball artist will likely do the heaving with Kerr in reserve. Injuries have affected the team to a certain extent. Roy Fry, regular outfielder last year, will be out of the game with a sprained ankle while Hazlett, the good centre fielder, nurses a bad hand the result of an old injury.

Burnbrae will present most of last year's line-up with Carl Haig of the 1925 Hoards squad acting as relief hurler and regular infielder. Johnson, last year's third baseman, has not practised as yet but will undoubtedly get into the game as he is in first class shape from playing softball. Eagleson, the reliable first string pitcher is teaming up well with his old battery-mate, Hume. These two have a few records from last year to surpass as Eagleson had one no hit no run game to his credit also one three hit and one four hit game. The rest of the team have been practising faithfully and start the season with confidence.

When English Line and Trent River meet on Friday evening some new faces may be seen. The Line team has been revamped and a number of town men will probably receive permission to play. Those mentioned: DeCarroll, Cowell, Ibey and Blakeley. Those with the pick of last year's team should make a snappy aggregation. They too have had some real good practices.

The Trent River boys say prospects are very uncertain but they can be relied upon to come across with a bunch of pennant contenders. Although the Christie Brothers are not available to start the season they have in Ruttan a promising young pitcher while Atkinson can be relied upon in the pinches. Armour, their regular catcher has not reported yet and the burden has fallen on Inkster.

Altogether prospects look bright for a succesful Seymour League season and fans and players can help it along by coming to the games promptly at 6:15 so that there will be no unnnecessary delay thus giving rise to disputes. It is probable that a collection wil be taken at some of the games to help to defray expenses as last year some of the clubs had to put on lawn socials to provide necessary funds.

BASEBALL GOSSIP

All members and prospective members of the Kiwanis Juvenile and Midget Baseball team are requested to attend a practice to be held in King Edward School grounds on Monday night at 6 o'clock.

DUKE OF YORK TO PLAY TENNIS

Will Take Part in Tournament at Wimbledon This Month.

AN INNOVATION.

LONDON, June 5 (United Press) —The Duke of York, second son of King George, today entered the doubles play in the Wimbledon tennis championships, which begin on June 21.

York's partner will be Wing Commander Louis Grieg, R.A.F., who holds the honorary title of "Gentleman Usher to the King." Grieg formerly was Comptroller and Equerry to the Duke. It will be the first time that Royalty has ever competed at Wimbledon.

ENGLISH ELEVEN TIES AUSTRALIANS

Aussies Were Hard Pressed and Were Forced To Limit.

BIRMINGHAM, England, June 5 (Canadian Press).—The Australian cricket team received a shock yesterday in their match with a North of England eleven when they were pressed hard and were compelled to use all their defensive powers to get a creditable draw. After the North of England team had compiled a first innings total of 239, the Australians continued their first innings. Root, the Worcestershire bowler, who had already accounted for two wickets, was practically unplayable, and as a consequence the Antipodeans were disposed of for a paltry 105. He had the very excellent aberage of seven wickets for forty-two runs. The North of England second innings had produced 77 runs for one wicket when Carr, the English captain, declared. The Australians were faced with arrears of 211 and eighty-five minutes of batting. With the recollection of what had happened before them, each player batted cautiously. At the end three men had been disposed of for 110. Even at that things looked ominous for the Australians for a few moments. Two wickets went for only ten runs. Then Andrews infused backbone into the batting, and, with the assistance of Macartney, played out time.

With the first Test match scheduled to begin a week from to-day, interest in the tour of the visiting Australian cricketers has become intense, and their performances are the sole topic in the sporting world. The attention of all followers of the game is now focussed on the encounter that will open here to-day, when the Australians will come up against their first real trial in their series with the Senior Counties. The champion Yorkshire eleven will engage them, and a hard struggle is anticipated.

The indifferent showing of the Australians against the North of England selected team in the game which was drawn at Birmingham yesterday has encouraged Yorkshiremen in the hope that England's premier cricket county will be the first to inflict defeat on the tourists, although it is feared that the absence of Sutcliffe, who was compelled to retire from the game at Birmingham Thursday with a torn ligament in his right leg, may handicap the home side somewhat.

BRITISH GOLFERS ROUT AMERICANS

Overwhelming Victory Practically Clinches the Championship.

WENTWORTH, England, June 5 — (Canadian Press). — Sweeping through five thirty-six hole foursomes at the Wentworth Country Club yesterday, Great Britain's professional golfers put utterly to rout invading pros from the United States and won every match. Abe Mitchell and George Duncan led the British forces to victory by hanging the horrible score of 9 to 8 on the redoubtable Walter Hagen, captain of the United States team, and his equally famous partner, Jim Barnes.

The matches are being played for the Rider Cup, emblematic of the professional golf team championship of the world, and Great Britain's overwhelming victory yesterday practically clinches the trophy. To win the tournament it would be necessary for the United States to win eight out of ten singles matches to-day, a feat which even the U. S. golfers themselves admit is too much.

With the exception of the Mitchell-Duncan affair, the British won all their matches, 2 and 3.

TORONTO LADY WINS ONTARIO GOLF TITLE

Mrs. Whittington, Toronto Ladies City Champion Adds New Title.

LONDON, June 5 (Canadian Press).—Mrs. E. W. Whittington of the Toronto Golf Club, the present holder of the Toronto ladies' city championship, added the Ontario Provincial title to her record here yesterday, when she defeated Miss Margaret Walsh, a clubmate, by 5 and 3, in the eighteen-hole final of the tournament that has been held at the London Hunt Club. The new champion got away to a flying start, taking the first hole by a stroke, when Miss Walsh sent her drive into the river, and continuing her winning streak for the next five holes. At this point Miss Walsh, who undoubtedly suffered from nervousness throughout the match, caught her game and halved the seventh, won the eighth and then halved the ninth to make the turn five down. Miss Walsh won the tenth and halved the next hole, only to lose the twelfth. When the thirteenth was halved, Mrs. Whittington was dormie five, but Miss Walsh kept the match alive by winning the short fourteenth, and she had a chance to carry the winner farther at the fifteenth, but tossed away her chance by a poor approach, and Mrs. Whittington took the hole to terminate the match and a most successful tournament by 5 and 3.

TOOT OF CALLIOPE IS STILL ABSENT

Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Continue To Elminate Parade in Favor of New Sensations.

350 TRAINED HORSES NOW WITH SHOW

Because of the continually increasing size of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Combined Shows, the managing directors have again been obliged to eliminate the usual street parade.

"It was a case of continuing to eliminate this feature or being obliged to reduce the size of the show" said one of the advance agents today, "so the parade is still absent and now we are able to present an even bigger circus than that which toured America in 1925. There are now five herds of performing elephants instead of three, and three additional troupes of trained horses. This immense aggregation of performing animals occupies twenty-two specially designed railway cars. A corps of more than sixty trainers and assistants who accompanied the animals to this country, attend them.

More than 350 performing horses are presented on the great new program of 1926. Two hundred of these thoroughbreds, each ridden by an expert, are exhibited at one time in a marvelously beautiful Equine Ballet. Another display presents five big troupes of liberty horses. These are performed simultaneously, three companies in the regular rings and two in rings improvised for the purpose on the steel structured stages. The latter is an absolute innovation never before attempted under the "big-top."

"That there may be room for the added facilities and yet retain all the rings and stages heretofore used in presenting the human side of the performances, it has again been necessary to enlarge the main tent. Thus everything is bigger—everything heavier — harder to handle than in 1925.

"There can be no time for a street parade. The immensity of the new circus requires every hour of the morning and all the people of the show to get it in place.

"The elimination of the circus street parade had been under consideration since the two great shows were merged. The bigness of the combined institution rendered it most difficult to get the ponderous equipment and properties on the show grounds and still give the street pageant at anything like the advertised hour. Indeed there were many days when the parade had to be cancelled entirely. Thus, the sidewalk crowds were disappointed after waiting patiently for hours.

"Now there are no more such occurrences. There will be no more waiting at the big show entrance for belated doors to open. Everything begins on time.

"What about the small boy who used to follow the calliope? Why he and the grown-ups will find more free sights on the circus grounds between sun-up and lunch time than any street parade ever offered. We have more than forty elephants, the menagerie is bigger than ever and the scores of animals, are easily the finest specimens ever seen in America."

Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey will exhibit here Friday, June 25.

HELPFUL HINTS GOLFING STARS

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH GOLFERS' MAGAZINE, CHICAGO

WALTER HAGEN—IMPORTANCE OF HANDS.

The hands play an important part in every golf shot.

If held too losely when hitting the ball, the stroke is going to be spoiled. On the contrary, if one holds onto the club with a death-like grip at the beginning of the stroke, it will be reflected through your whole body and stiffen every muscle used in making the swing. If the hands loosen the grip on the top of the swing the club-head falls too far over the shoulder and is thrown out of line.

Thus the utmost care must be taken in the proper use of the hands. The hands guide the club on its journey at all times from the very beginning to the end.

When the ball is hit, the hands should hold the club as tightly as possible. The grip on the club gradually tightens as the club-head speeds on toward the ball. At no time should the club be held so lightly that it will wabble and turn in the fingers.

Usually the left hand takes a firm hold on the club, with the fingers gripping the handle, of course. The right does not grip quite so much. If it did you would lose all sense of touch, which is a very necessary thing in the golf swing.

Diamond Disputes Decided

BY BILLY EVANS

What change, if any, has been made by the rules committee relative to what a substitute pitcher must do before he can be removed from the game?

By the addition of six words to section 3 of rule 33 all chance for argument in this situation has been eliminated.

The old rule said when a relief pitcher was sent in he had to pitch until the batsman was either retired or reached first.

In a certain major league game several years ago, with the bases filled and two out, the manager of the team in the field sent in a relief pitcher. After throwing one ball to the batsman he caught the runner on first napping, retiring the side.

In the next half inning the manager desired to send in a pinch-hitter for the pitcher who had retired the side by catching the runner on first napping. The opposing team contended that according to the rules he couldn't be removed, since he had not pitched until the batsman was retired or reached first.

It was a technical question, not based on common sense, but to avoid it coming up again the rule now reads, in addition to the old wording, these six words, "Or the side has been retired."

C.G.E. GIRLS' TEAM IN GREAT SHAPE

Ladies' Softball Game With Danforth on Saturday Will Be Fast.

C.G.E. girls are taking their game with Danforth on Wednesday most seriously. They had a fine practice on Thursday night with the boys' team of Park Street Baptist Church, and Manager Pilling is quite satisfied with the team at the present time.

Last year Peterborough won from Danforth 9-8 in a 10-innings game, when Miss Childs pitched a wonderful game, but according to the box office score, Miss Vincent had more strike-outs than Miss Childs.

Miss Vincent and Miss Mortimer, the C.G.E. battery, are working like a machine, and expect to give Danforth a troublesome time.

Cathie Taylor at first base, Audrey Evans at second, Mabel McLaren or Annie Logan on third, and Edith Greenhalgh on short stop, makes a very smart infield. The outfield is looked after by Clara Conners, Florence Greer, Violet Langton, Adean Janeway, Mildred Mortimer and Margaret Todd. Maisie Nixon broke her finger at a practice and will not be able to play, otherwise she was playing her usual good game. Messrs. Alec Kay and Jim Coursey have consented to umpire the game. The officers of the C.G.E. ball club will leave the corner of Charlotte and Park Streets at 4 p.m. to meet the Danforth Club on the Highway and lead them into the city. Through the kindness of Miss Littlefield and Miss Brownscombe, Danforth will be served with a light lunch at the Y.W.C.A. before the game.

After the game the C.G.E. Club will banquet Danforth ladies at Hooper's Palm Rooms.

She Could Hardly Do Her Housework Nerves Were So Bad

Mrs. I. M. Parks, Consecon, Ont., writes:—"I had heart and nerve trouble, and became so short of breath I could hardly do my daily housework, and was so nervous I could not think of staying alone, as every little sound I heard felt like a shock to me.

I Saw MILBURN'S HEART NERVE PILLS recommended, so I tried a box, and after taking the second one I am now feeling like a different woman."

This preparation has been on the market for the past 32 years and has achieved a wonderful reputation for the relief of all heart and nerve troubles.

ST. JAMES' SCHOOL KEEPS ANNIVERSARY

Celebrates Also Re-opening of School After Renovations and Repairs.

The Sunday school anniversary and re-opening services of St. James' church will be held to-morrow. The anniversary was formerly held in January, but this year has been transferred to June 6, and will hereafter be held in the month of June.

St. James' has a large, flourishing school, the attendance this year registering as high as 420, the highest on record. Arnold E. Prest has been superintendent since its inception in 1908.

The S. S. Hall was built in 1908 and this spring was thoroughly renovated. The interior decoration is in silver grey with ivory relief. The woodwork which is of Georgia pine, has been varnished and hardwood flooring (birch) laid on the entire ground floor. The exterior of both church and school is also being painted, the color being stone grey. The cost of renovations will be approximately fifteen hundred dollars, and to meet this cost a special offering is being taken on Sunday in connection with the anniversary. Rev. A. D. Robb, Toronto, minister of the Glibe United church, will be the special preacher.

The anniversary re-opening services will also be continued next Sunday when Revs. Langford, Todd and Gordon will assist.

The Sunday School Hall has been re-named and in future will be known as Wesley Hall of St. James' church.

At the recent annual meeting of the congregation reports presented from all the different organizations showed that St. James' had enjoyed one of the most prosperous years in its history, and the pastor, Rev. J. D. Richardson, M.A., is commencing his fourth year of his pastorate under most favorable conditions.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

"GRAND DUCHESS AND THE WAITER."

Picture Version of Noted Stage Success Features Menjou, Miss Vidor.

The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," Alfred Savoir's celebrated stage success, which Malcolm St. Clair pictured for Paramount, brings to the Capitol screen next Monda, one of the most sparkling comedies of the season. The scintillating action of the story, which is laid in Paris, centres around two main characters, brilliantly played by Adolphe Menjou and Florence Vidor.

Miss Vidor of the Grand Duchess, is forced by circumstances to flee from her native land and take rooms in a prominent Paris Hotel. While attending the theatre one evening she is seen by Adolphe Menjou, a millionaire philander, who falls desperately in love with her.

Unable to gain an introduction he takes quarters in the suite of rooms direcly below hers at the hotel, hoping to attract her attention. Failing in this he finally bribes an old servant to let him act as a floor-waiter in her suite.

In his new role Menjou, thoroughly disguised in a regulation waiter's uniform, enters the royal suite with a tea cart. However in so close a proximity to the woman he adores, his presence of mind falls to zero and he ends up by spilling a pitcher of cream down Miss Vidor's neck.

Miss Vidor's rage and anger prompt her to decide an a unique form of punishment. She appoints him a member of her personal staff and proceeds to make life miserable for him by loading him wit every unpleasant task, from washing her dog to shining her shoes.

The humorous and exciting events that bring the story to a climax and eventually lead to a happy ending, form the largest and most entertaining part of the picture.

Director St. Clair has surrounded the principals with a capabl supporting cast and has staged the production with a lavish hand. Pierre Collings attended to the adaptation.

AT THE REGENT

"LIGHTNING'" SAW LIGHT AS GREATEST DRAMATIC SUCCESS BY MERE CHANCE.

"Lightnin'," the phenomenal stage success produced by John Golden from the manuscript by Frank Bacon and Winchell Smith, which has been made into a great motion picture by William Fox, was brought to the attention of the noted stage producer in a peculiar way.

The late Frank Bacon, who immortalized the role of "Lightnin' Bill Jones" on the speaking stage, was bidding Mr. Golden farewell at a railway station in Los Angeles.

"Take this with you, and read it," was the noted actor's parting sally to John Golden, and he tossed a script of his own famous play to the impressario.

John Golden assented and immediately following his return to New York, Frank Bacon was summoned The production was speedily put into rehearsal and what followed is now theatrical history.

"Lightnin'" enjoyed the longest and most lucrative run of any stage play presented on the American stage.

The most lamentable part of the success of "Lightnin'" on the stage was the untimely demise of Frank Bacon, co-author of the play and the creator of the much loved character, "Old Bill Jones."

Following a nation-wide search Jay Hunt was selected to carry-on the role to the screen. William Fox chose John Ford, director of "The Iron Horse" to weave the story.

Frances Marion, author of innumerable film stories, prepared the script for "Lightnin'". The screen version of this phenomenal play will be shown at the Regent Theatre, commencing Monday.

LEGION TO MEET HERE NEXT YEAR

Major Winterbottom Brings Back Report From Provincial Convention.

G.W.V.A. PASSES.

Major G. W. Winterbottom, home from the G.W.V.A. and Canadian Legion Conventions, confirmed this morning the report that next year's convention of the Legion will be held in Peterborough.

There were 48 delegates, including General Sir Richard Turner, V.C., D.S.O., Dominion President at the G.W.V.A. Convention which made the decision to amalgamate with the Canadian Legion. The Provincial G.W.V.A. President, Leo Cunningham, of St. Catharines, occupied the chair, said Major Winterbottom and the deliberations were held in the Cronyn Hall of St. Paul's Cathedral, London. At 10 a.m. the President called the delegates to order, when all rose and stood at attention for two minutes in memory of the gallant dead.

Dean Tucker of St. Paul's Cathedral, offered a short prayer.

Mayor Moore of London welcomed the delegates to the city in a few well-chosen words.

Dean Tucker then addressed the convention and welcomed the delegates to St. Paul's Cathedral, pointing out that he thought that it was very fitting that the returned men should meet in Cronyn Hall, as during the war this hall had been the headquarters of the I.O.D.E. and the centre of great activity, whole carloads of goods having been made up there and shipped overseas. He also said the 1st C.E.F. Battalion, the 18th Battalion and the other units had each attended divine service in the Cathedral before entraining for overseas. After the war the flags and King's colors of the 1st, 18th, 33rd and 142nd Battalions had been deposited in the Cathedral where, since 1916 an anniversary service had been held in commemoration of Langmarche and the Armistice days. He also pointed out that whereas London had always been a military centre, so had St. Paul's always been connected with military life of the city.

General Turner in his address stated that in his opinion the G.W.V.A. had held itself too cheap, and had not advertised sufficiently the work it was attempting and accomplishing. He thought that if the G.W.V.A. decided to link up with the Canadian Legion some steps should be taken to ensure that discretion be exercised in the admission of new members as it had been found that the cause had been injured by the conduct of a very few men who had kept many others from joining.

The reading of the Provincial Secretary's report showed that the Provincial Command of the G.W.V.A. was in a solvent condition and able to liquidate all debts. At 4 o'clock the vote was taken and the delegates voted unanimously to enter the new body. The G.W.V.A. of Ontario ceased to be, and its passing was heralded by the sounding of the Last Post by a trumpeter of the Royal Canadian Regiment stationed at London.

On June 3 the Provincial Convention of the Canadian Legion was opened, with Lt.-Col. J. Keeler McKay in the chair. Besides the delegates from the defunct G.W.V.A. there were also representatives from the Grand Army of United Veterans, the Amputations, the Tubercular Veterans' Association, and one delegate from the unattached veterans, making a total of 84 in attendance.

Mayor Moore of London extended a welcome to the delegates in their new capacity as representatives of the Canadian Legion. He presented the Legion with the key of the city, humorously remarking that someone had suggested that he should give them the key of his cellar instead.

The convention then occupied itself in discussing the details of the conduct of the new organization.

APOSTOLIC DELEGATE HEARTILY WELCOMED

relations with those not of our faith are most cordial and respectful.

"For all these blessings we are most grateful to Almighty God, the giver of every good and perfect gift, and, inspired with the spirit of gratitude for the past and hope for the future, we have undertaken this centennial celebration.

"As a perpetual memento of our first Centenary, we are asking Your Excellency to bless a statue on the Cathedral lawn, of Christ our King, in the hope and with the prayer that the Kingship of Christ may be everywhere asserted — in the souls of all men, in the deliberations of communities and in the counsels of nations, that everywhere may obtain the prayer and desire of our Holy Father: "The peace of Christ in the reign of Christ."

An address tendered on behalf of the Catholic laity of Peterborough, and read by Mr. J. A. OBrien, Engleburn avenue, who was accompanied by Messrs. J. J. Duffus, F. Fairen, M. Roche and V. J. McElderry, was a welcome from the people, extended to the Apostolic Delegate the enthusiastic greetings of the parishioners. Concluding, Mr. O'Brien said:

"To Your Excellency personally, and as representing the highest spiritual power on earth, we extend a most hearty welcome, and trust that you will be able to assure our Holy Father that the faith and zeal that animated the first settlers in this district still continues to enlighten and guide their successors, and that the ambition of the Catholics of Peterborough to-day is to emulate their piety, devotion and loyalty, those stalwarts of the generations now laid at rest."

Addressing My Lord Bishop, Reverend Members of the Clergy, and Beloved Faithful of Peterborough, His Excellency replied:—

"I wish, first of all, to thank you for your kindness in inviting me to Peterborough. Long since was I desirous to visit this Diocese, not merely, My Dear Lord Bishop, to become acquainted with the field of your episcopal labours, but in view of returning one at least of the many kind visits which you have so amiably made me at Ottawa, even from my arrival in this beloved country. I wanted to tell you, here at your residence, how your attachment to the Representative of our Holy Father has not left me indifferent, and how truly and deeply I appreciate the numerous proofs of your cordial and exquisite benevolence. And this message of thanks I deliver in the name of the Supreme Pontiff, for, it is your love and devotion towards him that has caused you to show so much affection to his humble Representative in Canada.

Please accept also the sincere expression of my gratitude for the magnificent reception which you, My Dear Lord Bishop, with your good Clergy and Faithful have accorded me on my arrival. This is one more token of your devotion to the Holy See, and when, on the first occasion, His Holiness will be apprized of this splendid manifestation organized by the Catholics of Peterborough to do honour to the Apostolic Delegate, I am sure his paternal heart will overflow with joy and consolation.

I have come, My Dear Friends, to solemnize with you the Centenary of the celebration of the first Holy Mass on this privileged spot. One hundred years have elapsed since the Son of God, at the word of His consecrated minister, descended again from heaven to take possession of this ground. Of this ground our Lord Jesus Christ has then taken possession, and never since has He ceased swaying over it His sceptre of gold. Truly holy and moving is the remembrance of this historic event and worthy of being fittingly commemorated.

It is the great mystery of our Faith, a mystery profoundly consoling, that the Son of God, made Man, descends on our Altars in the offering of the Holy Sacrifice, and there dwells really with us in His Body and Blood, His Soul and His Divinity, under the appearances of bread and wine.

Are not, My Lord Bishop, the accomplishments of your sacerdotal and episcopal career due to Him, the High-Priest forever. Who has called you to the priesthood and to the episcopacy? From Him came down the light, the strength, the efficiency; from Him the graces and blessings on the labours and sacrifices of your sacred ministrations. To Him I offer my fervent prayers that He may spare you many years for the benefit of your beloved flock and of the Holy Catholic Church at large.

Dear Members of the Clergy, the efficacy of your priestly work depends on the Lord and Master of all. Who from on-high descends every day in your consecrated hands. Be therefore faithful to Him, love Him with your whole heart, and for His sake, love the Church which He has purchased with His own Blood. United with God, you will experience how good is the Lord and how generous towards you, who have the privilege of representing Him on earth in the continuation of His work for the Redemption of souls. That you may be unfailingly true to your mission, is, I assure you, my daily prayer to the Lord.

And you, Beloved Catholics, you are well acquainted with the truth that for your sake Our Lord Jesus Christ is sacramentally and really present among you. Every morning our Saviour mystically dies on our Altars, that you may share the very same mercies which would have been yours, had you been present on Calvary the day of His bloody immolation. In Holy Communion He gives Himself to you, to be your life in time and in eternity. Day and night He remains in the Tabernacle of His temples, whither He entreats you to come for comfort, light and salvation.

Two days only shall I have the pleasure to spend in Peterborough, but during the days of this solemn centenary, I will especially pray for you in earnest that the Lord, Who has granted to this city and to this Diocese the gift of Holy Faith, may keep you, protect you and bless you from the Most Holy Sacrament of His Love.

May the blessing of God rest in abundance upon the beloved Bishop of this Diocese, upon the zealous Clergy and upon all the Faithful, so that, after having honored here below, in adoration and charity, Jesus, our Saviour and King hidden in His Blessed Eucharist, we may all, on the day of eternity, see Him face to face in the splendor of His glory and in life everlasting.

Solemn Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was then celebrated by His Excellency, assisted by Rev. Father Collins of Lindsay and Rev. Father Garvey of Lakefield.

Decorations of the Cathedral and the adjoining parish buildings, and the surrounding streets for last evening's reception were extremely effective. The Papal colors of yellow and white, in bunting, shields and flags were much in evidence, alternated by scores of tiny Union Jacks. Above the main entrance of the Cathedral hangs a large Canadian flag, together with the Papal flag while the Bishop's residence, the priest's house and St. Mary's convent are decorated in the same manner, with dozens of tiny Union jacks outlining the walk on the Bishop's lawn. Across the top of Hunter street stretched a large "Welcome" sign last evening, and numbers of electric lights in colored globes added an air of real festivity to the scene.

The singing in the Cathedral last evening was an exceptionally fine portion of the programme. Two hundred children, directed by Rev. J. Finn, sang the benediction music with a notable conclusion in a four-part rendition of "Lift up Your Gates."

Adding to the general efficient conduct of the parade and the welcome ceremonies last evening, was the very fine service rendered by the police force of the city, who had arrangements well in hand, the progress of the procession, and the handling of the thousands of people who gathered about the Cathedral for the occasion, being carried out in splendid fashion by Chief Newhall and his aides.

A COMPLIMENT TO CANADA

The Canadian Pacific Purchase Nine Handsome Grand and Upright Pianos of Heintzman & Co., Limited For Use On Their Palatial Ocean Steamers.

Canada has reached a position in the world of manufacture where it is no longer necessary to go abroad to obtain the best in any line of goods. "MADE IN CANADA" is the symbol of quality today.

In no department do these conditions prevail to a greater extent in than in the manufacture of Heintzman & Company pianos. Royalty and world-great artists choose this piano when visiting the Dominion. They are found in all the great musical conservatories of Canada—meeting the most exacting demands of the most critical artists.

When great artists like Caruso, Tetrazina and Melba come to this country they assure themelves beforehand that a Heintzman & Co. piano can be placed at their disposal for their concerts and public functions. People everywhere take a pride in saying that their piano is a "Heintzman & Co."

Additional honours in this direction have some to "Ye Olde Firm", as they are familiarly known, having been established since 1850, 76 years, in a purchase recently of nine Heintzman & Co. pianos—Three Grands and six Uprights by the Canadian Pacific for use on their palatial ocean steamers sailing out from Canadian Ports on the Atlantic. Three Classic Uprights are installed on "EMPRESS OF CANADA", a style D Grand and a Classic Upright on the "MONTCLAM", "MOUNTCLARE", and "MONTROSE." WEDDING BELLS.

KENNEDY—FOURNIER.

The Church of Our Lady of Prompt Succour, Windsor, Ontario, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Monday morning, May 31st, when the marriage was solemnized at eight o'clock in the morning of Camille Fournier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Fournier, of Pembroke, Ontrio, and Mr. Harold Kennedy, son of the late Daniel Kennedy and Mrs. Kennedy, of Detroit.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her brother, Mr. Joseph Fournier, was charmingly attired in a dress of pink georgette, with hat to match and bouquet of ophelia roses. The bridesmaid, her sister, Mrs. L. D. Kennedy, wore tan georgette and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. A cousin of the bridegroom, Mr. Vincent Kennedy, of Detroit, acted as best man.

After the ceremony, the bridal party motored to the home of the bride's sister, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served to about forty of the immediate relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy left on the afternoon train for Buffalo and Nnagara Falls. On their return they will reside at 237 Hendrie street, Detroit.

IN MEMORIAM.

WATKISS—In loving remembrance of my boy, Jack Watkiss, who left us eight years ago today, June 5th, 1918.

Beyond.

It seemeth such a little way to me
Across to that strange country, "The Beyond";
And yet, not strange, for it has grown to be
The home of those of whom I am so fond;
They make it seem familiar and most dear,
As Journeying friends bring distant regions near.

So close it lies that when my sight is clear
I think I almost see the gleaming strand.
I know I feel those who have gone from here
Come near enough sometimes to touch my hand.
I often think, but for our veiled eyes,
We should find Heaven right round about us lies.

I cannot make it seem a day to dread
When from this dear earth I shall journey out
To that still dearer country of the dead,
And join the lost ones so long dreamed about.
I love this world, yet shall I love to go
And meet the friends who wait for me I know.

I never stand above a bier and see
The seal of death set on some well-loved face
But that I think, "One more to welcome me
When I shall cross the intervening space
Between this land and that one 'over there,'
One more to make the strange 'Beyond' seem fair."

And so for me there is no sting to death,
And so the grave has lost its victory.
It is but crossing, with a bated breath
And white set face, a little strip of sea,
To find the loved ones waiting on the shore,
More beautiful, more precious than before

—From Mother.

WILL CONTINUE CHURCH PAPER

Presbyterian Assembly Names Committee To Look After Record.

MONTREAL, June 5 (Canadian Press).—The Presbyterian Record will be continued as the official organ of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and for the present, at least, it will be issued as a monthly as heretofore, the General Assembly decided yesterday. A committee was appointed, however, which will in turn appoint a larger committee which body will nominate an editor and consider the future location of the Record and methods for increasing its circulation. It was suggested yesterday that the publication be moved from Montreal to Toronto, so that it would be near the general headquarters of the Church, and this suggestion met with considerable favor.

The committee named consists of Rev. Frank Baird, Pictou, N.S.; Dr. W. L. Clay, Victoria, B.C.; Dr. Ephraim Scott, Montreal, retiring editor; Dr. S. Banks Nelson, Hamilton, Ont., and Rev. James McKay, London, Ont.

After expressions of regret, the resignation of Dr. Ephraim Scott as editor was accepted, and a retiring allowance of $3,000 per year was granted.

Commissioner Alfred Maguire performed the unveiling ceremony.

VILLAGE WIPED OUT.

Eleven Families in Settlement Homeless—Few Buildings Remain.

MONCTON, June 5. Canadian Press. — Eleven families are homeless and three stores with warehouses, the Methodist church, school house and 11 dwellings, a number of barns and garages, were wiped out by a fire which raged in the little village of Alma, Albert County, about 45 miles from here yesterday. The settlement was nearly wiped out.

AROUND THE CITY.

Two outbreaks of fire which the Chief considers were the work of an incendiary occurred last night in a store room in the vacant premises of the Dick and Carew Lumber Company. The first fire broke out about 10.38 and the other at 2.20 a.m. In both cases the Fire Department had to bring the water into operation before the flames were subdued. As there was no lumber or other property stored in the building the damage was less than it might otherwise have been.

The names of two boys who caused the Department a needless trip yesterday by interfering with the bell of the Lake street bathing beach have been discovered and the boys will appear before the Magistrate in the police court next week.

The Rotary juveniles will play in Lakefield on Monday evening and all players are requested to meet at Juby's store, Charlotte street, at 5.15 sharp.

Retraction Of Promise To Grant Wife Divorce Responsible For Duel and Suicide at Castle

VIENNA, Austria, June 7 (Canadian Press).—Prince Cyril Vladimir Orloff, wounded in a duel with Baron Klinger, on the latter's estate, in Lower Austria, told newspapermen today that the Baron had retracted a promise to divorce his beautiful wife so she and Orloff could wed. The promise was made in the presence of the Baroness, the Prince asserted. He also declared that the Baroness had contracted a suicide pact with him, to be carried into effect if they could not marry. She shot herself after the duel.

Statue Unveiled in Cathedral Grounds Before Thousands of People.

CIVIC RECEPTION.

Sermons Are Preached By Bishop Fallon and Monsignor McColl.

The ceremonies attendant on the unveiling of the statue of "Christ, Our King," took place on the grounds of St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday afternoon, in the presence of over five thousand people, assembled on the grounds and on the adjoining streets. The amplifiers provided for this occasion were a welcome addition to the programme of speeches, allowing those in the audience who stood within a radius of a block and a half to hear very distinctly every word of the address delivered by Bishop Fallon, the civic address of welcome of His Excellency, delivered by Mayor Holloway, and the reply by the Apostolic Delegate. The morning sermon, given by Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl at the High Mass, was also broadcasted by the same agency to listeners in the neighboring blocks.

The weather yesterday was just as propitious as through the previous days of the celebration here of the hundredth anniversary of the saying of the first Mass in what is now the City of Peterborough. A mild, cloudy sky yesterday afternoon kept a threatening rainfall guarded carefully until with in the last few minutes of the afternoon cere- allowing only a few dr the last of those who up to meet the Apostolic Delegate, who received the majority of the thousands of people who attended the afternoon ceremony, in a general reception which took place at the conclusion of the programme.

Yesterday's ceremonies commenced with a Solmen Pontifical Mass, celebrated at the Cathedral at half past ten o'clock by His Excellency, the Most Reverend Pietro di Maria, Archbishop of Iconium, and Apostolic Delegate to Canada and Newfoundland, accompanied by a retinue of visiting bishops, monsignori and clergy, who preceded him in a furmal procession which made its way from the Bishop's residence to St. Mary's Convent, where vesting took place, thence up the main aisle of the Cathedral to the sanctuary, the celebrant and his retinue departing in the same fashion at the conclusion of the Mass.

Owners Contemplate Plan To Combat Interference

LONDON, June 7 (Canadian Press). — The Sunday Express says it understands that the mine owners contemplate a sensational plan to combat State interference in the mining dispute. The plan is to dissolve the mining association, which is the owners' organization, and thus remove the only existent national negotiating body and force the Miners' Federation to negotiate by districts with the local mine owners.

The Express points out that the policy of district agreements has been consistently pursued by the owners, and the motive of the new and remarkable move is that the owners believe the Government is about to institute some sort of temporary state control of the mining industry. The owners stoutly oppose any State interference except in the shape of a subsidy.

MINE PARLEYS AT STANDSTILL

While Miners Arrange For Support—New Proposal Rumored.

FROM OWNERS.

LONDON, June 7.—(Canadian Press).—While a meeting of the International Miners' Federation was in progress in Brussels, for the purpose of arranging further support for the striking British coal miners from the workers in continental mines, negotiations with a view to a settlement of the strike were at a standstill in London.

Word has not reached London of the receipt by Herbert Smith, president of the Miners' Federation, of a communication of Evan Williams, chairman of the Mine Owners' Association, which proposes that miners and mine owners shall get together by means of small committees representing both sides, in an attempt to bring an end to the strike deadlock. Smith is in Brussels.

THREE DROWNED WHEN CAR RUNS OFF END OF DOCK

Driver Mistakes the Dock at Belleville For Quinte Bridge Road.

TRAPPED IN CAR.

Only One of Four Young People Escapes From Closed Auto.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., June 7. — (Canadian Press).—Three people, two girls, 18 years of age, and a man, 20 years of age, were drowned here early to-day when the car in which they were driving plunged over the Government dock into fifteen feet of water. The fourth occupant of the car was saved when he managed to escape from the curtained touring car and, coming to the surface, was rescued. The drowned are: Keith and Bernice Ostrander, son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ostrander, South Bay, Prince Edward County, and Geraldine Dulmage, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Dulmage, Long Point, Prince Edward County. Roy Dulmage, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Dulmage, South Bay, and a cousin of the drowned girl, was driving the car and mistook the approach to the Government dock for the Bay Bridge road in the pitch dark and pouring rain, Dulmage, the survivor, stated.

Second Engineer Arthur Maine, of the tug John L. Russell, of Toronto, was an eye-witness. From the port hole where he was standing, Maine saw the car pass by on the Government dock. Looking out again in a moment, he saw the tail light disappear over the end of the dock 30 yards away. He ran out, shouting for his companions, and flung a rope to Roy Dulmage and hauled him up on top of the dock platform. Police and doctors were then summoned. Earl McQueen, a former professional diver, went down and recovered the bodies of the two girls. The body of the third victim, that of Keith Ostrander, was not recovered for over an hour later. The party, all relatives, were on their way home from a Sunday evening's motor trip. The parents of the victims were notified and arrived on the scene just after the bodies of the girls were taken from the water.

Rockefeller Gives Away Some Valuable Advice

TARRYTOWN, N.Y., June 7 (United News).—John D. Rockefeller gave away some good advice Friday regarding the attainment of such wealth as he possesses and good health.

"Don't worry, don't hurry, eat sparingly and take your time about it," advised the multimillionaire.

By the application of these principles Rockefeller disclosed he had been able to live 86 years.

Next month he will celebrate his 87th birthday. Rockefeller returned to Pocantico Hills from the south a few days ago. He is playing nine holes of golf in 44 from time to time, according to reliable information and feels quite spry.

Asked by a friend as to his diet, he replied petulantly:

"I'm not on a diet; I eat what I like but eat moderately. Then, too I never get up from the table in a hurry. If people will use common sense their stomachs will benefit.

"Sometimes an old friend dies but I try to make new ones," he continued.

"There is too much trouble in the world. I try to shed my worries."

Rockfeller is still giving away souvenirs—bright new dimes.

In agreeing to the joint conferences and carrying out of engineering work which would preserve the Falls, the Canadian government also asked that the commission make a study of the possibility of further diversion of water for power purposes and to this the United States government have agreed.

Doctors Flee When Girl Dies During Gland Operation Is Charge Brought To Court By Family and Police

NEW YORK, June 7 (United News).—Two doctors who performed a gland operation on a five-year-old girl fled when they learned that their patient had died under the knife, police and members of the child's family charged.

Arraigned in court on Sunday for manslaughter the physicians, Dr. Morris J. J. Jossel and Dr. David Vlenko, pleaded not guilty and were each held on $10,000 bail to await examination in the Homicide Court on Friday.

The doctors claimed that they tried for 15 minutes to revive Frieda Cohen, upon whom they had performed the unsuccessful operation at her home.

Special Delivery Letter Containing Warning Leads Police To Pennsylvania Home—Believe Slayer Was Insane Due To Financial Worries.

SON WAS VICTIM OF PARALYSIS—UNFRIENDLY FEELINGS IN FAMILY

LANSDALE, Pa., June 7.— Receipt of a special delivery letter warning that something tragic had transpired, led police to the home of Robert Norton Hill here to-day and revealed his attempt to wipe out the entire family.

Hill was found dead in the basemen with a bullet wound in his head and his wrists cut. An automatic pistol lay near the body.

A 20-year-old son, Paul, was found dead in bed. His head had been battered with a hammer and a bullet fired into his brain.

Mrs. Lillian Hill was found unconscious in her bedroom with her head battered by a blunt instrument. She was taken to a hospital where physicians feared she would die.

A note was found on the library table reading: "Notify F. W. Hill, Toronto, Ont., and Mrs. M. Morris, 157 High street, Southampton, Mass." The former is said to be Hill's brother and the latter a sister-in-law.

F. W. Hill, wealthy business man of Toronto, Canada, arrived to-day at the Lansdale home where his brother, Robert Norton Hill, yesterday murdered his 20-year-old son Paul, seriously injured his wife and then ended his own life.

The brother, brought to Lansdale posthaste by news of the tragedy, expressed belief that it was caused by temporary insanity due to financial worries. The surviving brother is afflicted by the paralysis that has crippled other members of the family.

The police of Lansdale to-day revealed that unfriendly feelings between the dead man and his murdered son had thrown them into physical conflict more than once in recent months.

While police were continuing their investigations, physicians of the Montgomery County Hospital in Norristown said Mrs. Lillian M. Hill, who was beaten and shot before Hill ended his attempt to wipe out his family by taking his own life, has a chance to recover.

She was still unconscious this morning, but a representative of the District Attorneys office was awaiting at her bedside the possibility she would revive and make a statement.

Although the younger Hill was a victim of the paralysis which runs in the family, he and his powerful father were said by the police to have come to blows more than once.

Two months ago the boy started to run away because of difficulties with his father, it was said. On another occasion, a few weeks ago, both were cut when in a tussle they crashed into a glass door panel.

Only a few weeks ago Chief of Police Woffondin received a letter from the father asking him to watch Paul because he was staying out late at night.

When the elder Hill's brother arrived in Lansdale he was accompanied by James Griffin, of 2851 Taney street, Philadelphia. Both were reticent, but Mr. Hill declared he knew of no reason for the tragedy other than financial affairs, which he knew were worrying his brother.

These worries, he said, he believed might have caused temporary insanity. Relatives of Mrs. Hill are expected to arrive late to-day from Massachusetts.

Funeral arrangements for the two dead members of the family await the decision in a Coroner's inquest, which in turn will not be decided upon until the outcome of Mrs. Hill's injuries is determined.

LABOR LEADERS DESERTED ARMY

Time For Explanations Will Come, Says Former Labor Minister.

AT RELIEF MEETING.

GLASGOW, June 7 (Canadian Press).—The leaders of Labor in the general strike deserted their army when they called off the strike, declared the Rt. Hon. John Wheatley, a Minister in the former Labor Government, who was the chief speaker at a meeting here last evening in aid of the miners' relief fund. The time would come for explanations, Wheatley said.

FATAL ACCIDENT IN BOWMANVILLE

Two Former Peterborough Men Killed When Car Hits Bridge.

THIRD ESCAPED.

BOWMANVILLE, Ont., June 7.—Canadian Press. — A fatal accident occurred yesterday morning at the eastern limits of this town on the Provincial highway, when Hugh Connors, proprietor of Connors Transport Company of Toronto and Bowmanville, was instantly killed as a result of his car colliding with a girder of the steel bridge.

Thomas Connors, Oshawa, father succumbed this morning. He had been taken to the Bowmanville hospital with several fractured ribs and internal injuries.

William Connors, Peterboro, brother of Hugh, who sat in the front seat, had a miraculous escape, with only minor bruises and cuts about the face.

YOUNG FARMER BURNED IN BARN HE SETS ALIGHT

After Attacking Wife and Son of Owner He Fires Building.

SOMETIMES INSANE.

Attempt To Chloroform the Family of Former Employer Is Unsuccessful.

SMITH'S FALLS, June 7 (Canadian Press).—The coroner has decided that no inquest is necessary in connection with the death of William Clarke, 24-year-old farm hand, who was burned to death on Saturday afternoon in a barn on the farm of Chambers Empey, in the Township of Wolford. Clarke is believed to have set fire to the barn, seeking this means of death after he had drugged the six-year-old Empey boy and attacked Mrs. Empey, who, however, was able to escape. Letters which he had written when he was in Ottawa, but which were never mailed, indicated his infatuation for Mrs. Empey. They were found in his belongings. Before coming to this district, Clarke worked in Brockville.

Setting fire to the barn of his former employer, to escape capture after an unsuccessful attack on Mrs. Empey and her young son, Clark was burned to death near here on Saturday afternoon. In the absence of Mr. Empey, Clark visited the farm and, enticing the boy to the barn, attempted to chloroform him. The mother, coming into the barn to seek the child, was also attacked. Apparently frightened by her screams, and failing to chloroform her, Clark released both his victims. They escaped to a neighbor's house. When they returned with assistance, they found the barn on fire. The charred remains of Clark were later discovered in the ruins. Clark was subject to fits of insanity.

Non-Union Reporters Chased From Miners' Relief Meeting

LONDON, June 7 (Canadian Press).—At the cessation of the general strike on May 12, one of the biggest newspaper firms in Glasgow determined to reorganize its staff on a non-union basis. The sequel came last evening, when the audience at a meeting in aid of the miners' relief fund, held at the City Hall, protested vigorously against the presence of "scab" reporters from these newspapers. The disorder continued until the reporters objected to retired voluntarily.

WOMEN FOUND IN GAMBLING DEN

Police Raid Bronx Apartment on Complaints of Husbands.

KEEPER ARRESTED

NEW YORK, June 7.—(United Press).—Women dived for windows and under beds and several fainted early Saturday when detectives raided an apartment in the Bronx.

Twenty-five women and five men were in the place. Police arrested Mrs. Gussie Braunberger, wife of a real estate man, on a charge of keeping a gambling establishment.

Husbands of numerous Bronx women had complained to the police that their wives were losing heavily in the place and wanted it raided. Two of the husbands volunteered to sit in the game and get evidence, which enabled the police to raid.

BUILDINGS DESTROYED.

Fifth Fire in Two Weeks Believed To Be of Incendiary Origin.

DAUPHIN, Man., June 7 (Canadian Press).—Three buildings were destroyed in a spectacular fire Saturday, which for a time threatened to spread to a lumber yard. Heavy loss was sustained by Shaw Brothers, distributors of farm implements and machinery. Their warehouse was gutted. The outbreak, which is the fifth within two weeks, is believed to have been of incendiary origin.

PROVINCIAL PREMIERS DISCUSS QUESTIONS TO BE CONSIDERED AT CONFERENCE OF PROVINCES

Fields of Taxation and Succession Duties Form Main Subject.

PROVINCIAL ECONOMY.

Prince Edward Island Seeks Larger Subsidy From Federal Government.

OTTAWA, June 7 (Canadian Press).—The Provincial Premiers met in private conference here this morning for the purpose of fixing the agenda for the conference which will probably last several days. The Premiers of all the provinces are present except Premier Brownlee of Alberta. The preliminary agenda centres around the questions of succession duties, fields of taxation, and Provincial subsidies from the Federal Government. The central purpose of the conference is unofficially said to be Provincial economy and by means of a meeting in the next few days, it is hoped, to arrive at some programme by which the Provincial taxes will not overlap. The matter of succession duties is particularly acute because estates, other than real estate, are sometimes twice taxed, heavily, once by the province in which the estate is, and the second time by the province in which the heir resides. It is felt that there must be some readjustment in these cases. Prince Edward Island is anxious to secure a larger subsidy from the Federal Government, and Premier Stewart will probably bring this subject before the conference and ask their support in the matter.

Canada May Protest Shooting On Border

LOWELL, Mass., June 7. — (Canadian Press).—An official protest from Canada to the United States loomed to-day as a possible sequel to the border shooting. Dr. J. A. Labelle, a Montreal surgeon, who was summoned here by telegraph to treat the son of Albert Beauchamp, of Montreal, and who was fired upon by alleged Customs agents, had the step under consideration.

The physician, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Beauchamp, was speeding here to the bedside of Alceide Beauchamp, when the automobile in which they were riding was pursued by a machine which had been parked on the road near Swanton, Vermont. A bullet seared Mr. Beauchamp's arm and the machine was riddled.

BODY IS TAKEN FROM NIAGARA

Only Clue To Identity of Mutilated Remains Is Wedding Ring.

CORPSE UNCLOTHED.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 7 (Canadian Press).—The body of an unidentified woman was taken from the Niagara River on Saturday night. The body was unclothed, and the right leg was off at the knee. The face was badly mutilated, and the only clue to the identity of the woman is a gold wedding ring, with "Rosa, 1883," engraved inside.

MANY INQUIRIES FROM FLORIDANS

California People Also Ask About Holidays in in Ontario.

MANY TOURISTS.

That Florida and California are not getting things all their own way in the exchanges with Canada is evident from the number of inquiries received from these states by the local Chamber of Commerce for information as to the possibilities of renting summer cottages around the Kawartha Lakes. F. G. Stinson, the secretary, reports that the desire of the inquiries is, in nearly every case, to secure accommodation in the wilds away from the crowds. The indications are that this district will be visited by tourists from many states as well as from other parts of Canada.

RAISE SUNKEN SUBMARINES

Patents have been taken out and plans have been sent to Washington for examination by submarine experts and naval authorities.

Boy of 9 Tries Suicide With Gift Rifle; Had Been Taunted By Playmates For Dullness

BALTIMORE, June 7.—William H. Granholm, 9 years old, of Riverton, probably holds the record as the youngest person who ever tried suicide. William shot himself last night with a rifle which was a birthday gift from his grandfather.

Backward in school, the boy was the subject of daily heckling by playmates, and had been sent to bed as a punishment before he tried to die.

The bullet entered his breast below the heart, tore through the stomach and intestinal tract and came out of his back.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Granholm, found it embedded in the bedroom wall after William ran into the yard, crying:

"I shot myself; I won't die, though—I won't die."

Regaining his senses momentarily the lad said he shot himself accidentally when he dropped the rifle.

Relatives and police gave little credence to the statement.

It was stated that the child was treated for convulsions a few years ago at Johns Hopkins Hospital. He was released after physicians believed a cure had been effected.

Mrs. Granholm said her boy is only in the first grade, despite his age. Thus he was the butt of taunts which wounded deeply and made him morose.

A box of cartridges was found by the bed, seeming to indicate deliberation in an attempt at suicide.

GILMOUR MEMORIAL.

At the morning diet of worship in the Gilmour Memorial Church, the subject was "The Personal Note of the Gospel," the sermon of Rev. W. S. Edgar being based on Matthew 21 45, "When the chief priests and the Pharisees heard His parables they perceived that He spake of them."

"In this chapter, we have Christ in the midst of His foes. He had roused their opposition by driving the traders and money-changers from the Temple. The chief priests and Pharisees claimed the right of control of the Temple: they were the custodians of the House of God. If anything was wrong with the Temple, they considered themselves to be the parties to put it right. They asked Christ by what authority, He cleansed the Temple. Our Lord answers their question by asking another, 'The Baptism of John, was it of Heaven or of men?' They could not answer Him. Thereupon Christ said neither would He answer them. Then he proceeded, by means of two parables to show up their character and conduct, and to reveal their doom.

"No doubt they listened intently to the utterance of the parables without perceiving their drift, but at length, it flashed into their minds that He was referring to them. If there is one thing more than another, that must excite the admiration of men as they read of these encounters between Christ and His enemies, it is the Savior's utter fearlessness. These men were the most powerful and influential men in the land. They held the positions of trust and authority. They had wealth, education, power and influence, and it was no light thing for Christ to challenge them in the way He did. He hurled His denunciations at them, He confounded them in debate, He exposed the hollowness of their religious pretentions, and He revealed the hypocrisy of their character. Such a course of conduct must inevitably lead to His death, and the surprising thing is that they permitted Him to live for three years.

"It is possible that in many of His discourses and parables in which He exposed them under a figure of speech, they failed to perceive He was alluding to them, but evidently, in the two parables recorded in this chapter, they did realize the import.

"Ministers are sometimes accused of being too personal in their preaching. Whether a minister should be personal or not, is a matter in which we might differ in opinion, but there are no two opinions as to the fact that Christ was personal in His preaching.

"The Gospel itself is personal. We may hear it without realizing its personal bearing. The ministry of our Lord was an intensely personal ministry. Philosophers deal with truth in the abstract and apply it in a general way: they deal with groups rather than with individuals, but Christ addressed himself to the man, the person and applied the truth to the individual heart and soul.

"Nothing is accomplished until we have appropriated the truth and made it our very own. Until that is done all the preaching in the world, will benefit us very little. The most powerful and elegant presentation of the Gospel will only tickle our ears and please our fancy.

"The time comes when we do realize that the truth is addressed to us. It makes its way down through the crust of our indifference and sin, and we recognize, as by a lightning flash, its meaning and importance.

"Two results generally follow this revelation of the truth. It makes some angry. This was the effect it had on the chief priests and Pharisees and it aroused their opposition to a greater intensity. They sought to lay hands on Him, but they feared the people who looked upon Him as a prophet. We find this happening again and again, both in the Old and New Testaments. When John the Baptist rebuked King Herod for his wicked life Herod threw him into prison. Men still act after this fashion. They are angry with the revealer instead of with the things revealed.

"In others the revelation produces real penitence. This was the effect it had upon David. When Nathan, the prophet, confronted him with his great sin, saying, 'Thou art the man,' David did not fly into a rage and order the arrest of the prophet, as he might have done. No, he truly repented, confessed his wrong-doing and cried, 'I have sinned against the Lord,' Indeed, this is the great purpose God has in view when He makes His truth known to us. He desires to break down our pride, remove our prejudice and soften us into true penitence.

"A personal truth requires a personal faith to appropriate it. We do not believe on salvation by proxy. No mere sprinkling of a few drops of water on a child's forehead can make it a child of God, or an inheritor of the Kingdom of Heaven. Scripture teaches that when a person reaches years of discretion and exercises a personal faith in Christ, then, and only then, is he a fit subject for Baptism which in the New Testament signifies immersion and not sprinkling.

"In the Gospel, the truth is offered to you in a person—the man Christ Jesus, who declares Himself to be the Way, the Truth and the Life. He is the Way back to God along which every penitent soul must come. He is the Truth incarnate which all need, to deliver them from the bondage of darkness and error, and He is the life of the soul required, by all who are dead in trespasses and sins—the life that is life indeed. Christ is all this. He is offered to you now. He can only be received by faith. Receive Him now. Then all things shall be yours, for ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's."

Finger-Print Photography.

Photographs of finger-printes have been used frequently in the police courts, and some remarkable examples of the work have been shown by the police, notably some enlargements of finger-marks left by a burglar upon a candle he omitted to take away with him. The little piece of candle was insignificant compared with the valuables stolen, but it gave a clue to the burglar who was afterwards convicted, thanks to the police photographers who have made a study of the photography of finger-prints. In another case at the Old Bailey a well-known judge asked for some details of this branch of photography, when he was told by the Yard's expert that they now had a collection of over 400,000 finger-prints, and no two of them were alike. Finger print photography was introduced into Scotland Yard is 1901, since which date 200,000 persons have been identified by them, and on an average 15,000 people a year are identified by this method. The Court of Criminal Appeal has decided that the evidence of finger-prints alone might be sufficient to secure a conviction.

SPANISH MEMBER IS NOT ATTENDING

Marquis de Leon Stays Away From League Council Session.

GENEVA, June 7. United Press. —A telegram from the Marquis Quinones De Leon, Spanish representative of the League of Nations Council, that he would be unable to attend the present session, created a sensation as the body assembled to-day. It is the first meeting which he has not attended since the League was founded.

It is interpreted as being an interpretation of Spain's intention to carry out her threat not to interest herself in affairs of the League if she is not given a permanent seat on the council.

DODGE BROTHERS WILL NOT CLOSE

Manager Believes Government Will Give Industry Relief.

TORONTO, June 7. — Canadian Press. — That Dodge Bros.' Canadian factory would not close down its plant in Toronto because of the tariff reductions on automobiles, was the statement made to-day by E. P. Clarkson, the Canadian manager of the company.

"We are carrying on business because we believe that the government will do the right thing," he said. We eblieve that the Government does not want to drive the motor industry out of Canada, and that it will ultimately give such relief as is necessary for the continuance of the automobile manufacturing business of the Dominion."

ANGER AND FEAR

What happens to you when you are angry? What changes take place in your body when you are frightened or shocked?

To answer these questions, Mortimer J. Adler and George O. Schoonhoven, graduate students of the psychology department of Columbia University, New York City, have devised an entirely new instrument which they call a pupilometer.

This unique machine, described in Popular Science Monthly, measures the dilation of the pupil of the human eye in its reaction to various emotions. The subject sits in a dark room, his eyes pressed against a sort of stereoscope, and looks into a large box covered with black cloth. A cap is fitted over his head, keeping his eyes fixed on the lenses. Strapped over his chest is a pneumograph to record his breathing. Over the left wrist is a rubber sack inclosed in a cloth band. This measures the pulse.

Facing the subject is an experimenter, who observes the pupils of his eyes. The lenses are crossed with fine hair-lines, so that the width and height of the pupils can be measured exactly, and the changes are recorded by adjusting screws on a small dial. The motions of the screw are set down on a rotating cylinder. The various parts of the apparatus attached to the subject end at this same cylinder, in little needles that make marks on the drum as it goes around.

When all is ready, the drum is set revolving, and rows of parallel zig-zag marks appear on the drum, showing the subject's normal breathing, his pulse, the normal size of the pupil, and the time.

Then, at a signal from the experimenter, the assistant, standing behind the subject, does something startling. He may shoot a pistol, drop a heavy weight, or send an electric shock through the subject's body. The subject's eye pupils dilate or contract, and this is recorded automatically on the cylinder at the same time with the other measurements. The pupil measurement is an accurate guide to the response of the nervous system to what excited it.

"At present no one really knows what an emotion is," says Mr. Schoonhoven. "If we can get variations in blood pressure, pulse, breathing and nervous reactions, we shall have facts from which to draw valuable conclusions."

The British Women's Athletic Association announces that a woman who would be both beautiful and fit must secure 60 hours' sleep a week, eat anly fresh fruit between meals, drink a pint of milk, relax for 30 minutes, and take an hour's outdoor exercise daily.

GILMOUR MEMORIAL.

At the morning diet of worship in the Gilmour Memorial Church, the subject was "The Personal Note of the Gospel," the sermon of Rev. W. S. Edgar being based on Matthew 21: 45. "When the chief priests and the Pharisees heard His parables they perceived that He spake of them."

"In this chapter, we have Christ in the midst of His foes. He had roused their opposition by driving the traders and money-changers from the Temple. The chief priests and Pharisees claimed the right of control of the Temple: they were the custodians of the House of God. If anything was wrong with the Temple, they considered themselves to be the parties to put it right. They asked Christ by what authority, He cleansed the Temple. Our Lord answers their question by asking another, 'The Baptism of John, was it of Heaven or of men?' They could not answer Him. Thereupon Christ said neither would He answer them. Then he proceeded, by means of two parables to show up their character and conduct, and to reveal their doom.

"No doubt they listened intently to the utterance of the parables without perceiving their drift, but at length, it flashed into their minds that He was referring to them. If there is one thing more than another, that must excite the admiration of men as they read of these encounters between Christ and His enemies, it is the Saviour's utter fearlessness. These men were the most powerful and influential men in the land. They held the positions of trust and authority. They had wealth, education, power and influence, and it was no light thing for Christ to challenge them in the way He did. He hurled His denunciations at them, He confounded them in debate, He exposed the hollowness of their religious pretentions, and He revealed the hypocrisy of their character. Such a course of conduct must inevitably lead to His death, and the surprising thing is that they permitted Him to live for three years.

"It is possible that in many of His discourses and parables in which He exposed them under a figure of speech, they failed to perceive He was alluding to them, but evidently, in the two parables recorded in this chapter, they did realize the import.

"Ministers are sometimes accused of being too personal in their preaching. Whether a minister should be personal or not, is a matter in which we might differ in opinion, but there are no two opinions as to the fact that Christ was personal in His preaching.

"The Gospel itself is personal. We may hear it without realizing its personal bearing. The ministry of our Lord was an intensely personal ministry. Philosophers deal with truth in the abstract and apply it in a general way: they deal with groups rather than with individuals, but Christ addressed himself to the man, the person and applied the truth to the individual heart and soul.

"Nothing is accomplished until we have appropriated the truth and made it our very own. Until that is done all the preaching in the world, will benefit us very little. The most powerful and elegant presentation of the Gospel will only tickle our ears and please our fancy.

"The time comes when we do realize that the truth is addressed to us. It makes its way down through the crust of our indifference and sin, and we recognize, as by a lightning flash, its meaning and importance.

"Two results generally follow this revelation of the truth. It makes some angry. This was the effect it had on the chief priests and Pharisees and it aroused their opposition to a greater intensity. They sought to lay hands on Him, but they feared the people who looked upon Him as a prophet. We find this happening again and again, both in the Old and New Testaments. When John the Baptist rebuked King Herod for his wicked life Herod threw him into prison. Men still act after this fashion. They are angry with the revealer instead of with the things revealed.

"In others the revelation produces real penitence. This was the effect it had upon David. When Nathan, the prophet, confronted him with his great sin, saying, 'Thou art the man,' David did not fly into a rage and order the arrest of the prophet, as he might have done. No, he truly repented, confessed his wrong-doing and cried, 'I have sinned against the Lord,' Indeed, this is the great purpose God has in view when He makes His truth known to us. He desires to break down our pride, remove our prejudice and soften us into true penitence.

"A personal truth requires a personal faith to appropriate it. We do not believe on salvation by proxy. No mere sprinkling of a few drops of water on a child's forehead can make it a child of God, or an inheritor of the Kingdom of Heaven. Scripture teaches that when a person reaches years of discretion and exercises a personal faith in Christ, then, and only then, is he a fit subject for Baptism which in the New Testament signifies immersion and not sprinkling.

"In the Gospel, the truth is offered to you in a person—the man Christ Jesus, who declares Himself to be the Way, the Truth and the Life. He is the Way back to God along which every penitent soul must come. He is the Truth incarnate which all need, to deliver them from the bondage of darkness and error, and He is the life of the soul required, by all who are dead in trespasses and sins—the life that is life indeed. Christ is all this. He is offered to you now. He can only be received by faith. Receive Him now. Then all things shall be yours, for ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's."

Finger-Print Photography.

Photographs of finger-printes have been used frequently in the police courts, and some remarkable examples of the work have been shown by the police, notably some enlargements of finger-marks left by a burglar upon a candle he omitted to take away with him. The little piece of candle was insignificant compared with the valuables stolen, but it gave a clue to the burglar who was afterwards convicted, thanks to the police photographers who have made a study of the photography of fingerprints. In another case at the Old Bailey a well-known judge asked for some details of this branch of photography, when he was told by the Yard's expert that they now had a collection of over 400,000 fingerprints, and no two of them were alike. Finger print photography was introduced into Scotland Yard is 1901, since which date 200,000 persons have been identified by them, and on an average 15,000 people a year are identified by this method. The Court of Criminal Appeal has decided that the evidence of fingerprints alone might be sufficient to secure a conviction.

SPANISH MEMBER IS NOT ATTENDING

Marquis de Leon Stays Away From League Council Session.

GENEVA, June 7. United Press. —A telegram from the Marquis Quinones De Leon, Spanish representative of the League of Nations Council, that he would be unable to attend the present session, created a sensation as the body assembled to-day. It is the first meeting which he has not attended since the League was founded.

It is interpreted as being an interpretation of Spain's intention to carry out her threat not to interest herself in affairs of the League if she is not given a permanent seat on the council.

DODGE BROTHERS WILL NOT CLOSE

Manager Believes Government Will Give Industry Relief.

TORONTO, June 7. — Canadian Press. — That Dodge Bros.' Canadian factory would not close down its plant in Toronto because of the tariff reductions on automobiles, was the statement made to-day by E. P. Clarkson, the Canadian manager of the company.

"We are carrying on business because we believe that the government will do the right thing," he said. We eblieve that the Government does not want to drive the motor industry out of Canada, and that it will ultimately give such relief as is necessary for the continuance of the automobile manufacturing business of the Dominion."

ANGER AND FEAR

What happens to you when you are angry? What changes take place in your body when you are frightened or shocked?

To answer these questions, Mortimer J. Adler and George O. Schoonhoven, graduate students of the psychology department of Columbia University, New York City, have devised an entirely new instrument which they call a pupilometer.

This unique machine, described in Popular Science Monthly, measures the dilation of the pupil of the human eye in its reaction to various emotions. The subject sits in a dark room, his eyes pressed against a sort of stereoscope, and looks into a large box covered with black cloth. A cap is fitted over his head, keeping his eyes fixed on the lenses. Strapped over his chest is a pneumograph to record his breathing. Over the left wrist is a rubber sack inclosed in a cloth band. This measures the pulse.

Facing the subject is an experimenter, who observes the pupils of his eyes. The lenses are crossed with fine hair-lines, so that the width and height of the pupils can be measured exactly, and the changes are recorded by adjusting screws on a small dial. The motions of the screw are set down on a rotating cylinder. The various parts of the apparatus attached to the subject end at this same cylinder, in little needles that make marks on the drum as it goes around.

When all is ready, the drum is set revolving, and rows of parallel zig-zag marks appear on the drum, showing the subject's normal breathing, his pulse, the normal size of the pupil, and the time.

Then, at a signal from the experimenter, the assistant, standing behind the subject, does something startling. He may shoot a pistol, drop a heavy weight, or send an electric shock through the subject's body. The subject's eye pupils dilate or contract, and this is recorded automatically on the cylinder at the same time with the other measurements. The pupil measurement is an accurate guide to the response of the nervous system to what excited it.

"At present no one really knows what an emotion is," says Mr. Schoonhoven. "If we can get variations in blood pressure, pulse, breathing and nervous reactions, we shall have facts from which to draw valuable conclusions."

The British Women's Athletic Association announces that a woman who would be both beautiful and fit must secure 60 hours' sleep a week, eat only fresh fruit between meals, drink a pint of milk, relax for 30 minutes, and take an hour's outdoor exercise daily.

ATTACK MENACE OF STORMS AND BERGS

Greenland Expedition To Study Atlantic Hurricanes at Their Birthplace.

Less spectacular, perhaps, than the stampede of birdmen to cross the Pole by air, yet equally abounding in possibilities for enriching the world, are the expeditions of scientists into the Far North this summer. Their goal is to solve the riddle of the weather, to fathom mysteries of the earth's magnetism, to plumb uncharted seas,—in short, to stake the claims of science to new wonders wherever they may be found.

Knowledge of inestimable value for the safety of lives at sea, for example, writes Edgar C. Wheeler in Popular Science Monthly for June, undoubtedly will result from the Greenland expedition of the University of Michigan, led by Dr. William Hobbs, professor of geology. With a party of twenty scientists, Dr. Hobbs journeys by boat to the coldest and most desolate land on earth, there to study at their source the twin perils of the North Atlantic—the terrific storms which during the last winter have swept down with unequaled fury on ships at sea, and the icebergs which are a constant menace to navigation.

We believe that the source of both these is to be found in the great dome of perpetual ice which caps almost the entire continent of Greenland. Here, he tells us, is the refrigerator of the earth, the "North Wind Pole," where high currents of warm air from the equator are sucked down, as if through a gigantic ventilating shaft, cooled and hurled back again toward the equator in the form of hurricanes that hold ocean vessels at their mercy.

Taking two amphibian planes to transport supplies, Dr. Hobbs will establish four wireless equipped weather stations, one of them in the heart of the ice cap. At the latter station, braving intense cold and terrific winds, two of the party will remain throughout next winter, when it is expected they will be able to send out warnings of severe storms at least a day in advance of their arrival in the shipping lanes.

In like manner the birth of icebergs will be observed, and experiments will be made to find some method of lessening their menace.

One of Britain's greatest surgeons is Professor Louise McIlroy, who is also professor of surgery in one of the important medical schools.

CAMPBELLFORD GREETS LEGATE

Citizens Gather at Station as Most Rev. P. di Maria Passes Through.

HAVE BAND OUT

CAMPBELLFORD, June 7 — There was a large number of people congregated at the station on Friday evening when the Peterboro train came in, to greet His Excellency Pietro Di Maria, Apostolic Delegate, who was passing through on his way to Peterboro, for the anniversary services to be held there on Sunday.

His Excellency spoke a few words of greeting to the people, thanking them for their attention. He also thanked the members of the band who were present to play while the train was here. The crowd lustily cheered His Excellency's speech and the band played "O Canada," and continued playing until the train was gone. A large number from Campbellford attended the services in Peterboro on Sunday.

SPEEDERS HALTED BY ROAD MAGNETS

A u tomatic Device Slows Down Autos to Safe Gait at Grade Crossings.

A novel and fascinating idea came to Charles Adler of Baltimore, Md., one evening not long ago, as he sat by his labratory window and watched the twinkling lights of commuters 'trains flashing by in the railroad yards below. He contrasted their orderly operation with the helter-skelter rush of home-going automobiles on the road that crossed the railroad tracks at the end of the yard.

"Why not," he thought, "apply a little signal engineering to the problem of preventing auto accidents at grade crossings? Surely there must be some way to keep the reckless driver from committing suicide—force him to drive carefully whether he wants to or not."

Adler set to work to solve the problem. As a result, he has invented a system that automatically slows down the fast-driven car as it approaches the railroad crossing. No matter how hard the driver steps on the throttle, the car will not travel at a speed greater than fifteen mils an hour until it has passed the crossing.

The device, described in the June Popular Science Monthly, consists essentially of a powerful magnet concealed in a concrete box beneath the surface of the roadway at the proper distance from the railroad crossing. As the approaching car passes over a magnet, the latter operates a system of relays and a governor so designed that it will allow current to flow through the automobile ignition system at speeds below fifteen miles an hour, but it cuts it off when the car is travelling faster than that rate.

This action continues until another road magnet at the danger point is reached, when the ignition circuit is restored to its normal path. The road magnets are made up of flat strips of magnetized steel, placed side by side in the concrete beneath the road surface.

This remarkable invention may help to solve other important traffic problems besides that of the railroad grade crossing. Controlling magnets could be placed at any point where slow and careful operation of automobiles is necessary for public safety.

BRITISH GOLF PROS OVERWHELM YANKS

First Time in History That United States Have Taken Such a Drubbing.

WENWORTH, England, June 7 (Canadian Press)—Overwhelmed in a riot of magic golf the United States team of ten professionals captained by Walter Hagen was vanquished 13 1-2 to 1 1-2 points in the two-day matches against British professionals headed by Ted Ray in the competition for the Ryder Cup.

Of the five foursomes played Friday and ten singles contested Saturday at Wentworth the United States won only one solitary match, Bill Melhorn defeating Archie Compston while Emmet French managed to halve with Ernest Whitcombe, thanks to a masterly finish. But in every other contest the British players scored heavily.

The rout, which began with the foursomes and continued uninterrupted in the singles over the hills and valleys of this picturesque course left Hagen's warriors strewn over greens so far distant from the clubhouse that it was with great difficulty they reassembled for the speechmaking ceremonies by Ambassador Houghton.

Never in the history of International golf matches between Great Britain and the United States taken such a drubbing. Only one United States player was ever up on his opponent, and only two matches reached the home green.

The History of Belt Making is STARRED With Goodyear Achievements

INDUSTRY today stands debtor to Goodyear for money-saving, time-saving, profit-making developments in industrial rubber goods—belting, hose, packing, valves.

Those who remember industrial conditions ten years ago will remember that Goodyear forced on industry's attention the virtues of a new kind of rubber belt.

The Goodyear "sealed seam" eliminated ply-separation.

Goodyear produced the all-weather Klingtite farm belt which forever took the belt troubles out of farm work.

Goodyear first used tire tread stock for the cover of a conveyor belt—stock so tough that it immediately added greatly to the life of the belt.

Goodyear, too, used this same tread stock to give industrial hose the protection it needs against abrasion and rough handling.

Goodyear developed the hose construction which eliminated the costly, trouble-making wire winding.

Goodyear pioneered the production of special hose for special uses.

This policy of development and advance is continuous with Goodyear. It never ceases. Any time you consult a Goodyear man, he is able to advise you with the knowledge of the latest development of Goodyear engineers. For any problem of belting, hose, packing, valves which you must meet, get in touch with the Goodyear Industrial Goods dealer or with the nearest Goodyear branch. MONDAY, JUNE 7, 1926.

A CHAMPION LIFESAVER.

Mr. Jack Murphy, Smith street, who has been the hero of a large number of gallant rescues of drowning persons, has added another to his list of brave deeds.

Last week he went to the assistance of six-year-old Stanley Smith as the youngster was going down for the third time and brought him safely to shore.

On several occasions the Examiner has urged that the bravery of Mr. Murphy should be publicly recognized.

This latest exploit adds force to the demand.

Life-saving medals have been presented—and rightly so—to many citizens who have saved one life.

Mr. Murphy's list runs into double figures, and yet no official recognition has been made of his gallantry and presence of mind.

The Examiner trusts that his splendid feat in saving the life of Stanley Smith will bring fresh attention to Mr. Murphy's remarkable life-saving record.

THE G.W.V.A. PASSES.

The Ontario Command of the Great War Veterans' Association has passed into history, voluntarily dissolving itself to make way for the Canadian Legion, which is expected to bring together the ex-service men of the country in a new and more closely knit association.

The G.W.V.A. has done great work on behalf of the returned soldiers and the dependents of those who gave up their lives in the war.

Its course has not been smooth.

It was difficult work to keep the ex-service men enthused and to hold their interest.

Other organizations of returned soldiers entered the field and took their share of veterans.

Many returned men, bewildered at the number of veteran organizations, declined to ally themselves with any one of them.

Yet throughout all this difference of opinion, this launching of fresh associations, the G.W.V.A. carried on and was able to bring about some splendid legislative reforms in the interest of the men who fought and of their families.

Even among returned men themselves, however, the full value of what the Great War Veterans has been able to accomplished is not appreciated as it should be; perhaps it will be more completely realized as time passes.

The G.W.V.A. is gone—the Canadian Legion is in possession of the field.

Le roi est mort; vive le roi.

NO MORE PARADE.

Remember the little shiver of excitement that ran up and down your spine when the man on the big circus wagon used to bellow in trumpet tones, "Hold your horses! The elephants are coming."

Those days are gone forever.

The circus parade has been abandoned by the big organizations.

Peterboro is to be visited by the "world's biggest shows" this month, and alas, there is no longer any mention of the "glittering, glorious, gorgeous two-mile-long parade" that used to bring you out on the street at 8 o'clock for a procession that was billed for 10 and finally arrived at noon.

The parade is no more, and with its passing goes one of the biggest thrills in child life.

The new generation has many advantages over the old; the boys and girls of today have many opportunities that were denied their parents.

Ninety-nine times out of a hundred the youngsters of 1926 out-score the oldsters.

But in this one respect the veterans have the inside track.

The new crop may never see a circus parade, and looking back into the past and recalling the still fresh impressions of glittering wagons, blaring bands, funny clowns, calvacades of riders on beautiful horses, a glimpse of rare wild animals in open cages, the mystery of what might be hidden behind the shutters of the closed wagons, elephants, camels, and then the last wonder of all, the calliope, we'll say they've missed something.

Some of the romance of the circus has gone out with the parade.

ENFORCING THE LAW.

A correspondent of the Border Cities Star says that a number of United States visitors have been complaining of Canadian laws, particularly traffic regulations and the way they are enforced.

It is not likely that the number of such complainants is large, for the majority of our tourist friends are perfectly willing to respect our laws and to do their utmost to carry them out.

On our part we cannot afford to do anything but insist that the regulations adopted, to make traffic conditions as safe as possible, must be obeyed both by our own people and by the stranger within our gates.

Even the desirability of stimulating the tourist traffic cannot justify a relaxation of our regulations in favour of visiting motorists, and the Examiner is sure that most of them would not think of asking us to do so.

The traffic egulations must be enforced impartially and firmly, but let us hope that they are administered with judgment and courtesy.

Those officials entrusted with the regulation of traffic along Ontario's highways should be carefully chosen and instructed to enforce the traffic laws in a manner that will make driving safer and yet will not antagonize motor tourists.

A fair, courteous enforcement of traffic rules is what the Province expects of its traffic officials.

THE RIGHT TO LIVE.

In South Bend, Indiana, twins were born joined together. They were the second such case known to medical history, and they have become an ethical as well as a political problem. Life for them is a hopeless existence, and yet they flourish. "Kindly death," is the reported prayer of their parents. But they do not die, and public opinion is against taking life, even of helpless cripples. Yet two doctors have come out openly in favor of it in the case of the "Siamese Twins."

That raises a question as broad as the human race, says the Border Cities Star. Has every human being a right to live? Civilization, in its science and religion, says that all have, that they have moreover an equal right. The little Indiana twins have done no wrong, they have committed no sin. Not even retribution could be pleaded as an excuse for putting them to death. In the eyes of others, life must be misery for them. Yet who is to say so until their minds are developed? Perhaps they will grow to be intellectually congenial. In that case life would hold something, even if they are burdens on society.

The lives of the little twins in themselves are of small importance to humanity for in all probability they will contribute little to the world. Yet related to their fate is the destiny of thousands of other hopeless cripples. To remove them would cheapen by so much the value placed on human life. It would be the thin edge of a moral wedge. It would, in fact, lay down an unwritten law that murder is justified if legalized first. No such law can be laid down without sidestepping the belief, as old as religion itself, that human life is a law of God. That is the issue raised in the disposition of the little Indiana twins. It touches the mightiest resources of man's faith.

WAR DEBT LENIENCY.

That was a notable Memorial Day address that was made on Monday by Major-General John F. O'Ryan, Commander of the 27th American Division in the World War, speaking at the Memorial exercises of Northern Westchester County at Mount Kisco, New York, when he argued for leniency in the matter of war debts.

"Our soldiers in the war were splendid," he said. "Our dead were sacrificed in a great and worthy cause. Our maimed and wounded contributed in no small way to our pre-eminent position of power. But a reasonable measure of modesty, I may say, decency, demands we should remember that our Allies did all we did, and more.

"We cannot speak of our 50,000 dead of the World War with too much reverence, but we should not make of that sacrifice a boast of the measure of our contribution. If our dead could be resurrected and were to form column and march by us here today at the rate of 10,000 an hour, it would take five hours for them to pass this spot. What an impressive spectacle that would be of the destruction and waste of war! But what about the French? If their 2,000,000 of dead were to follow them, also passing at the rate of 10,000 an hour, marching day and night, more than eight days and nights would pass before we saw the last of their column.

"And this is not the whole story. We loaned France some billions of dollars for war purposes. We ourselves entered the war in April 1917. It was not until July, 1918, more than a year later, that we were holding any appreciable part of the line. But we were one of the allied and associated powers during that year 1917-1918.

"By all the rules of sportsmanship it was up to us, with our great man-power, wealth and resources, to take over at once a lion's share of the fighting line. We did not do so. We were not prepared. General Pershing was strong enough to prevent such a tragedy, and so the American Army of nearly 4,000,000 of men was trained and disciplined, and in America, while the French, in addition to holding their own long line, held our line too, aided by the British. In other words, during that year thousands of French and British boys and men died while serving as substitutes for American boys.

"Who cared about money in those momentous days? We spent money freely and we loaned it freely to our Allies. It went into the common pot of sacrifice and endeavor. But it was no substitute for the lives of those French and British boys who died that our boys might train in security. French and British families of the dead don't think so. Neither do you. But now it turns out that we did not put those moneys, or any part of them, into the pot. We want back our money—all of it—and with interest. We stand upon the fact that technically the moneys were loaned and must be repaid.

"Is this attitude right? Is it sportsmanlike? Isn't it our duty to acquaint ourselves with such facts as I have mentioned? Americans believe in the 'square deal.' We invented the term. It isn't that our people knowingly are playing the role we are now playing toward Great Britain and France, but that we haven't taken the trouble to ascertain the facts, to learn the point of view of Europe, to understand the relation between the two columns of marching dead. The fathers and mothers of Europe know the relation and their grief-stricken memories will continue to carry it.

"Now, isn't it better, isn't it more enduringly profitable, on this memorial occasion, to reflect with some measure of Christian humility upon our shortcomings, rather than to blare out hallelujahs of admiration for our own rectitude and material accomplishment?

"The fighting phase of the great world struggle, the phase which ended with the armistice, did not terminate the struggle itself, the struggle for a better world. But we then quit, and left the rest to struggle on, to organize the world for peace, without us, to rehabilitate destroyed areas and to revive industry. Is it any wonder that so many of the people of Europe whose hearts we held in firm allegiance at the time of the armistice now feel that they have been disillusioned?

"So, I feel that every dictate of Christian principle demands that we profit by such occasions as this to take stock of ourselves—to determine whether we are so doing as we would be done by—to resolve that our struggle for material gain should be mellowed by the spirit of service, to remember that 'He who would be exalted among you let him be the servant of all'."

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Peterboro gave freely to the Salvation Army Saturday, because the Salvation Army has always given freely to Peterboro.

No, gentle reader, there is no special speed limit for the Chemong Road. In fact, some motorists drive there as if there were no limit at all.

This young fellow Babe Ruth seems to be developing considerably into a long distance hitter.

The British professional golfers were evidently determined that the United States was not going to set up a monopoly in international competitions.

Punch, commenting on the amount of money spent in Canada by American tourists, suggests that this sum includes the deposit on the bottles.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 7 (Canadian Press).—Brisk new upturns Saturday in the value of wheat lifted the market to about 6 cents a bushel above prices current on Thursday. Crop reports, both foreign and domestic, were disquieting. The wheat market closed strong, 1 1-8 to 2 7-8 net higher, corn unchanged to 3-8c up; oats showing 3-8 to 1-2c gain, and provisions 2 to 30c advance.

Top quotations of the day in the wheat market came shortly before the finish. Right from the outset demand was active, and the trend was manifestly upgrade, helped by the fact that the Liverpool market was rising in the face of big world shipments estimated at 15,400,000 bushels against 11,691,000 bushels last year. Meanwhile, European wheat prospects especially in Germany and Poland were reported as apprehensive with conditions for rye in all European countries unfavorable. Added to the force of this situation was distinct anxiety over the outlook for the new winter wheat crop in Kansas.

With higher temperatures predicted and advices at hand that wheat in some parts of Kansas is beginning to fire, assertions were made that a large part of the expected crop in Kansas would shrink rapidly in the absence of good rains at once. One forecast from railroad sources was a minimum of 125,000,000 bushels, which would be much smaller than earlier figures. Under such circumstances, big speculative traders who have been on the selling side of the market made haste to reverse their position. Broader participation on the part of the general public was also a good deal in evidence. Offerings were chiefly from holders able to realize a profit.

Corn and oats sympathized with wheat, but were held back by slowness of cash dealings, whereas good milling wheat is in keen request.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, June 7 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market Saturday continued quiet. The trade in grain on spot for domestic account was only moderate and the tone of the market was firm.

The feature of the spring wheat flour market was the strong undertone, but prices failed to show any change. The trade volume was small. The movement of winter wheat flo was also slow and prices were well maintained.

The demand that developed for millfeed on Friday from the United States was again in evidence Saturday and a fair business was transacted. Prices were firm. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was quiet and the feeling was steady.

A stronger tone prevailed in the egg market and prices were marked up 1 to 2 cents per dozen. The receipts were 3,601 cases.

A fairly active business was transacted in butter and prices closed a fraction higher. The receipts were 4,442 packages.

The cheese market was quiet and prices were well maintained. The receipts were 10,460 boxes.

APPOINTMENT OF PRINCIPAL FOR KNOX COLLEGE IS PENDING

Prospect That Agreement Will Be Reached Easier Than Was Expected.

OUTSTANDING EVENTS.

Toronto Pulpits Occupied By Ministers in Attendance at Assembly.

MONTREAL, June 7 (Canadian Press).—The general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, somewhat behind its business schedule as the result of extended debates last week, faces busy sessions for the closing days of the meeting today and Tuesday. The most controversial item still facing it is the appointment of a principal for Knox Presbyterian College, Toronto, debate on which has already occupied two sederunts. A decision is expected to come Tuesday morning when the matter comes up again, and although determined stands have been taken by the advocates of both the nominees, Dr. Thomas Eakins, acting vice-principal, and Dr. R. W. Dickie, minister of Knox-Crescent Church here, there is prospect that an agreement will be reached easier than was expected. Rev. D. T. L. McKerroll, Toronto, expressed the opinion Saturday that "The matter could be cleared up in five minutes in committee meeting and it is understood a meeting of an unofficial committee is taking place over the week-end."

The opponents of Dr. Eakins have referred to reports of his alleged "Rationalism" in matters of faith, while his supporters declare that he has made full declaration of his belief in the tenets of the Presbyterian Church. They catergorize statements against him as inuendos which those expressing them are not able to make into formal charges. The debate has at times been warm with strong allegations being passed back and forth, but the general wish of the assembly as expressed has been that the debate should be frank and the choice when made an unanimous one.

Outstandin events of the assembly since it opened Wednesday night have been the election of the moderator, Dr. A. J. MacGillivray, Guelph, Ont.; the resignation of Dr. Ephraim Scott, Montreal, as editor of The Presbyterian Record; decision to keep The Record as the official organ of the church, and continue it as a monthly publication; and reports showing wide development in home mission activity.

City pulpits were largely occupied yesterday by ministers in attendance at the assembly.

FATAL ACCIDENTS NEAR SHERBROOKE

Two Drowned From Launch —Three killed at Level Crossing.

SHERBROOKE, Que., June 7.—(Canadian Press). — Five persons are dead and two more are in the hospital as the result of two accidents which occurred here Saturday. A drowning accident in the Magog River claimed two lives, while three other lives were taken when an automobile was struck by a train a short distance outside the city limits.

The dead are O'Neil Bergeron, forty-five years of age, and Charles Young, 38 years of age, drowned, and Henry Hebert, Mrs. Aime Couture and Hector Pari, all of this city. Those in the hospital are Sylvio Poulin, of Sherbrooke, and Miss Flossie Raymond, of Magog.

The drowning accident occurred about eight o'clock Saturday evening. Bergeron and Young, accompanied by Sylvio Poulin, were trying out a new motor boat, and it is believed that, travelling at a fairly good rate of speed, they attempted to take a sudden turn, with the result that the boat took a plunge into the river, taking its occupants with it. Poulin was saved by Donat Trottier, also of this city, but the other two drowned.

Efforts to locate the bodies have been unsuccessful.

The second accident occurred about ten-thirty o'clock Saturday night, when an auto driven by Henry Hebert, of this city, and containing Hebert, Mrs. Aime Couture, Miss Beatrice Raymond and Hector Pari, was struck by an engine and caboose. This occurred off the Lennoxville road, a short distance outside the city limits. Mrs. Couture and Pari were killed outright, while Hebert, the driver, died a short time later in the St. Vincent De Paul Hospital. Miss Raymond received very serious injuries, and her condition is considered critical.

THAWS APPEAR TOGETHER AGAIN

Resume Role of Friends After Twenty Years—Dine at Hotel.

SON WITH THEM

ATLANTIC CITY, N.Y., June 7.—(United Press).—The Thaws appear to have buried the hatchet. Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, and Evelyn Nesbitt, the wife over whom he killed White, resumed the role of friends again today after almost twenty years. With them was their 15-year-old son, Russell Thaw, whose paternity Thaw questioned when he and Evelyn were divorced.

Both refused today to discuss whether they had affected a complete reconciliation or simply had decided to end the state of "armed neutrality" which has kept them apart.

Atlantic City was astonished last night when Thaw, Evelyn, and Russel, with a lawyer, appeared at a big hotel and dined together, like friends after a long separation. The purpose of the meeting, both Evelyn and Thaw declared, was to frame a strong denial of a Chicago story that a boy named Russell Thaw had entertained feminine companions in a lavish fashion and neglected to pay his hotel bill. "There have been many troubles—only this is too cruel, for my son has never been in Chicago except when he was with me", was the text of a signed statement given out by Evelyn after the dinner.

ENGINEERS DECIDE ON WAGE INCREASE

General Chairmen Fix Amount To Be Asked of Railways.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 7.—(Canadian Press).— The general chairmen of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Saturday ratified the amount of wage increase to be demanded by the membership of the railways. Although the amount was not divulged it is reported it will be from $1 to $1.60 a day, the same as that asked by the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors. The Eastern railways have rejected the demand of the trainmen and conductors. This would indicate that the firemen and engineers demand would meet a similar fate. and that the entire wage question will be brought before the mediation board to be appointed by President Coolidge under the Watson Parker Act.

The Characters and Situations in this Story are entirely fictional.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

JOHN PARRISH, secretary to HARRY MORTON, has started going about with chorus girls in Toronto. Parrish's life hitherto has been singularly correct.

Morton, himself a man of the world, is worried about Parrish, and takes into his confidence Nona, a Toronto stage girl who loves Morton, and AUDREY, Morton's ward, who has been in love with Morton also.

Morton's home is in Peterborough, but he maintains an apartment in Toronto.

He goes to the Bon cabaret, and finds Parrish there with a little blond chorus girl.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XLV.

Parrish stood up, angrily.

"You let me and my affairs alone!" he said, the veins on his forehead distended, his face flushed.

Morton turned to the girl.

"Let me escort you to the coat room," he suggested, extending his arm.

She rose uncertainly, glancing first at her escort, and then at Morton.

Parrish pushed her into her seat.

With his mouth close to Morton's ear, he said: "Just because you pay my salary, you can't take charge of my life. I tell you to get out of here!"

Morton stepped backward, and with a motion of his head, summoned the proprietor, who was watching the little drama.

"I'm afraid you will not be able to serve this young man and young lady here," said Morton, suavely.

The restaurant man glanced at the couple at the table.

"Certainly not," he agreed. He bowed deferentially to Parrish. "We cannot serve you this evening."

The young man's brow was black with wrath. Raising his voice, he delivered an ultimatum. "You get a waiter here right away or I'll start in to wreck this place."

The proprietor made an almost imperceptible movement of his hand. Three waiters came alongside, and clustered themselves about Parrish. The dancers on the floor looked at the group curiously.

"We will step outside," the restaurant man proceeded, as if there had been no interruption.

Propelled by the waiters, Parrish moved toward the door, protesting loudly. The crowd laughed.

Morton, following quietly behind, escorted the young woman.

"Has he been drinking much?" he asked.

"A little," she told him. "He isn't used to it."

Parrish was handed his coat and hat, and was urged up the steps to the street level. The girl calmly took her own wraps, and waited for Morton. They joined the frantic Parrish on the sidewalk.

"Cab, sir?" asked the doorman.

Morton helped the girl into the taxi, and thrust Parrish after her. Then he climbed in himself. Asking the girl her address, he gave directions to the driver, and the door slammed shut.

"I quit my job," stormed Parrish. "You can get another lackey to do your errands for you!"

"Shut your mouth, you ass!" ordered Morton, coldly.

He was sitting between Parrish and the girl. Turning to the latter, he asked:

"Has he given you any money?"

"Just a ring," she told him.

"What business is that of yours?" Parrish roared. "You're not my guardian. It's my money I'm spending."

"Let us hope so," returned Morton. "We'll look into that tomorrow."

He settled back comfortably, and absent-mindedly spun his cane between his hands, as the cab swung through the dark streets. Parrish had relapsed into a moody silence. At length they drew up before the door of a bare-looking building, whose steps sagged with the weight of years.

Morton reached into his pocket, and drew forth a treasury note.

"Take this for your time this evening," he said to the girl.

She accepted the money, and tucked it in her bosom.

"I'm sorry to spoil your friendship, but I'm afraid he can't come out with you again," Morton proceeded.

"I'll see you tomorrow night," interposed Parrish.

The girl laughed, as she swung on her heel and ran up the steps. "Bye-bye, you poor fish!" she called, as the cab started on.

"She means you," supplemented Morton, grimly.

Parrish moved back into his corner, and sullenly held his peace while they went to his own lodgings.

"Goodnight," said Morton, as the young man left the cab.

Parrish did not reply.

Morton was waiting for Parrish when the latter entered his employer's office, earlier than usual the next morning.

Standing with his back to the door-jamb, Parrish kept his eyes fixed on the floor. Morton eyed him a while, speculatively.

"How much money have you borrowed?" he shot at the young man.

Parrish did not lift his gaze.

"Three hundred dollars," he mumbled.

"Where?"

"From the men in the office here."

Morton drew out his pocket checkbook, and filled one of the blanks.

"Cash that and pay them, you infernal idiot," he said, tossing the green slip across to Parrish. The young man stepped forward, took the check and put it in his pocket. He remained leaning against the edge of the table, his shoulders sagging.

"Sold your car, I suppose?"

Parrish nodded. "Seventy-five dollars."

"Sell anything else?"

The young man shook his head negatively. "Didn't have anything else to sell."

"How much did you pay for that ring?"

Parrish blushed. "Thirty-five dollars. I got it at an auction."

"Real value, ten dollars, I suppose," commented Morton. "Well, you're going to pay me back that three hundred in installments. It isn't a gift. About fifteen dollars a week will be right."

He leaned back in his chair, with his hands clasped behind his head.

"What started you on this jackass line of adventures, anyway?"

Parrish rubbed his fingers on the walnut table, broodingly.

"I got tired of being laughed at." He pulled a chair to him, and sat down, with his face turned toward the window. "You laughed at me, and Miss Morton laughed at me, and the chorus girls, there at your house, acted as if I were a boob."

He hung his head, as he continued: "You go out with that kind of girls." He spoke over his shoulder, without looking at the older man.

"I do," confirmed Morton. "But I didn't start in life that way. My career is fixed. What I do with my leisure time, at my age, has nothing whatever to do with my fortunes. What you do with your leisure time has everything to do with yours."

Leaning across the table, he struck it sharply with his knuckles.

"You've got to decide now whether you're going to be a wreck or a success. Are you prepared to stop this idocy, and buckle down to work, and amount to something?"

"I'd better go somewhere else," Parrish said, drooping in his chair. "Miss Morton doesn't like me."

A smile appeared for an instant on Morton's lips, and was gone.

"She doesn't like the sort of man you're getting to be," he said. "I'm sure of that."

The other defended himself. "She didn't like the kind of man I WAS. She showed it in everything she did."

Morton arose and walked around the table, halting before his secretary.

"You were pretty green, weren't you?"

"I suppose so," the young man groaned.

"Cock-sure of yourself." Parrish was silent. "Inclined to tell other people what they should do, and what they shouldn't." Parrish shifted uncomfortably as his employer went on. "Had a little sst of rules of life, which everybody else should live up to."

Morton paused. Then: "Do you wonder that you antagonized her? Sometimes I was tempted to throw you out of the window, myself."

He turned away, and strolled to the window.

"But most young men go through that period. You weren't worse than most, I believe," he added.

Parrish for the first time met Morton's eye, as the other surveyed him.

"I learned something from those chorus girls at that," he announced.

He almost smiled as he went on. "They're so blamed WISE! I felt like an infant with them, at first."

Morton laughed. "'The proper study of mankind is man'," he quoted. "And one thing they DO study is men!"

Walking over to Parrish and taking him by the shoulder, he terminated the interview.

"You got off cheaply enough—your savings, plus three hundred and seventy-five dollars. It's a low price for a liberal education. Now run along. As the young lady said last night, you're a poor fish, but I think you'll undergo improvement."

Shame-faced, the young man withdrew, closing the door softly behind him.

Morton rubbed his chin reflectively, picked up his open check-book and placed it in his desk, and with an enigmatic smile, took his hat and stick and passed into the outer hallway.

Nona's company, which had been rehearsing piece-meal, the chorus in one outlying hall, the principal dancers in another, and the singers in an auditorium maintained by one of the music publishing houses, had gathered for its first rehearsal together. Opening night was only a few days away.

Morton and Audrey were sitting in a box in the darkened theater. The company was on the stage, gathered about the producer, while he talked animatedly to the stage manager.

At last a young man in the orchestra pit banged upon the piano. Principals withdrew into the wings, followed by the chorus. The producer had descended into the orchestra, where he sat beside the pianist.

The overture finished, the chorus danced onto the stage, wheeling at the rear, and lining up before the dimmed footlights.

"Stop!" A shirt-sleeved man ran from the wings. "Go back and do it again. You dance like a bunch of cows!"

The girls retreated, and again made their entrance. Once more they were told to withdraw.

The rehearsal started in the early afternoon. It was dark when Audrey and Morton left the theater. Nona had appeared three times, in her brief practice costume, had done her dances, bowed, and vanished. Still the rehearsal scarcely had begun.

"Poor things!" sighed Audrey. "How hard they do work!"

"They'll be there until after midnight," Morton told her. "They'll work eighteen hours a day, until the show opens."

They were moving across the sidewalk toward their waiting car.

"Daddy," said Audrey, "I want to tell you something."

SCHUBERT'S SERENADE

Written First on Menu While Composer Was in Beer Garden.

Franz Schubert, like Beethoven, was accustomed to carry with him a note book in which he could jot down musical ideas as they happened to occur to him. Many a beautiful theme would have been lost had it not been for this practical habit of these great composers. There are times when the muse is asleep, when the ideas will not come; then it is that such a note-book becomes valuable and the inspirations of other times may rouse the dormant muse.

Wherever Schubert happened to be, in the city or in the fields, in the tavern or the beer garden, did a valuable idea occur to him, out came the note-book, and it was hastily scratched down for further treatment. When he was seized by an idea it must go down on the first scrap of paper that came to hand. This was the manner in which that beautiful and well-known "Standchen" first appeared, though it is also told of "Hark, the Lark."

One Sunday, during the summer of 1826, Schubert, with several friends, was strolling about among the suburban villages in the vicinity of Vienna. As was their custom, they stopped at a beer garden, where they sat chatting and enjoying the good company they found. Schubert picked up a book of poetry one of his acquaintances had laid down, and, after turning over the leaves, suddenly stopped and, pointing out a poem, explained: "Such a delicious melody has just come into my head: if I but had a sheet of music paper with me!"

One of his companions hastily drew a few staves on the back of the bill-of-fare and passer it to him, and in the midst of the hubbub of a German beer garden Schubert wrote out that beautiful melody.

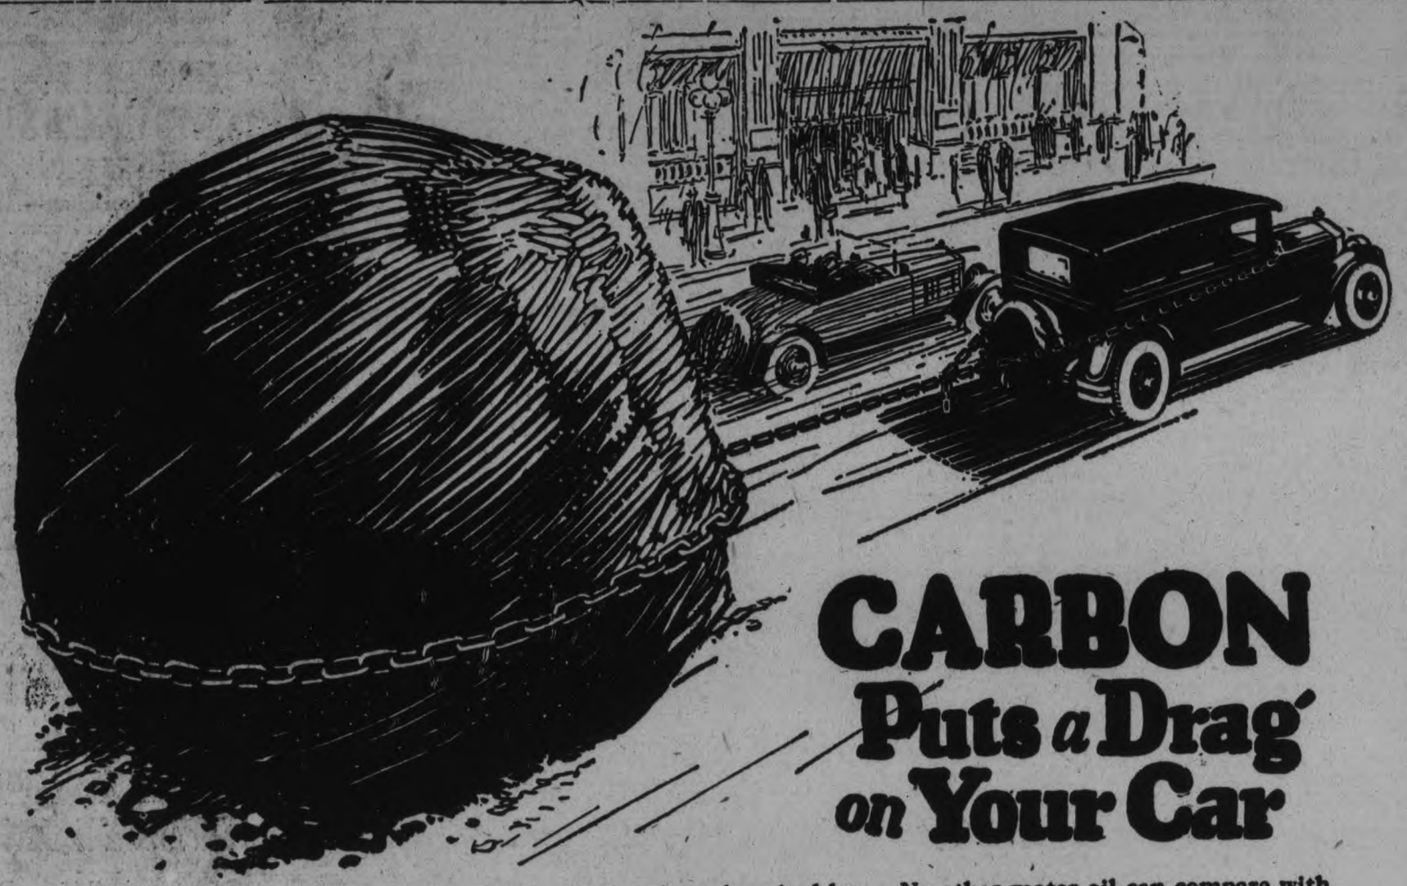
WONDERFUL GAME SANCTUARY FOUND

Captain Atkinson Discovers a Secret Valley in Northern Ontario.

KENORA, June 7. Canadian Press—A mysterious valley, containing all the necessary features corresponding to the lost valleys famous in fiction, has been discovered by Captain N. A. Atkinson.

Captain Atkinson yesterday filed claims at the local record office covering the strike he is reported to have made near Wingiskus Lake, between Red Lake and the Manitoba boundary. The valley is near his claims, he said. Entrance is difficult and hard to find, and at present a deep secret, although the captain says he will divulge it to the game authorities with a view to having the abundance of game protected. It is entirely surrounded by cliffs and precipices. Vegetation is rich, and bears, caribou, moose and other animals are so plentiful and tame that they can be easily shot with a revolver. A "Garden of Eden" is how the prospector described it.



CARBON Puts a Drag on Your Car

HARD, gritty carbon, deposited by poor lubricating oil, prevents your motor from delivering the full power it was built to give.

Carbon makes your engine "knock" and miss, and causes pre-ignition. It takes the real pleasure out of motoring; because your car no longer responds to the accelerator as it should.

There is only one motor oil that successfully combats carbon—Marvelube, the new process Imperial Motor Oil!

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES

Carney. Rev. G. Maher was hearer of the Crucifix, and Rev. J. J. O'Brien, assisted by Rev. H. Black, was Master of Ceremonies.

Bishops, monsignori and priests present in the sanctuary, all of whom took part also in the afternoon ceremonies, included His Grace, Rt. Rev. Neil McNeil, Archbishop of Toronto; Rt. Rev. M. F. Fallon, D.D., Bishop of London; Rt. Rev. J. Ryan, Bishop of Pembroke; Rt. Rev. Monsignor Buenos of Prince Rupert, B.C.; Rt. Rev. Monsignor O'Sullivan of Toronto, president of St. Augustine's Seminary; Rt. Rev. Monsignor McDonald of Glengarry; Rt. Rev. Monsignor Blair of Toronto; Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl; Rev. Dr. O'Gorman of Ottawa; Rev. Father Cline of Toronto; Rev. Father Englert of Hamilton, Rev. Father Dowdell of Pembroke; Rev. Father Lemons of Ottawa, secretary of the Delegate; Rev. Father Garvey of Lakefield; Rev. K. Corkery of Cobourg; Rev. Father Scanlon of Grafton; Rev. P. McGuire; Rev. K. Killen; Rev. J. Moloney, and Rev. A. Coughlin, of the Redemptorist Order, Toronto.

The music was a special portion of the Pontifical High Mass at the Cathedral. The "Schola" of St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto, composed of eleven young men especially trained in the singing of Gregorian Plain Chant, led by Rev. J. E. Ronan, Professor of Music at the Seminary, sang the Proper of the Mass, and several Latin motets, including the "Ecce sacerdos magnus," rendered as the Apostolic Delegate entered the church. Their singing was beautifully done, as was the singing of the Ordinary of the Mass by St. Peter's choir, which was augmented by members of the other two Catholic church choirs of the city. The singing of the large choir was led by J. Minicolo, with Miss Hurley playing the organ.

Monsignor McColl's Address.

Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl delivered the sermon at the morning Mass, taking as his text a verse from the forty-fourth chapter of Ecclesiates' "Let us praise men of renown and our fathers in their generations."

"The Mass," said the Monsignor, "is the foundation and the cornerstone of our holy religion. It is simply the continuation of the Sacrifice of Christ upon the Cross, continuing the Sacrifice of Calvary from the rising of the sun to the going down thereof."

The trials of the early settlers, the difficulties they encountered in coming out to a strange land where they had to endure all sorts of hardships, after leaving their native land and friends behind, were enumerated by the reverend speaker. A three months' journey brought them from the Cove of Cork to their new home, over two thousand souls, setting out to conquer the wilderness with the aid of only a few rough tools. Forests were cleared of enormous trees and humble homes were erected in the wilderness by these men of indomitable spirit, and here they "reared large families in small houses."

"Labour," said Monsignor McColl, "is one of the greatest contributions to the foundation of a really religious life. St. Benedict, one of the masters of the spiritual life, required that each of his monks should labour at least five hours daily at hard, manual work. The labours of these early settlers were sanctified by their prayers and by their holy, innocent lives."

The great disadvantages in educational matters endured by the pioneers were mentioned, but some of those early teachers, declared the speaker, were splendidly educated in the colleges of the Old Land, and did their utmost to impart to their scholars in the old log schoolrooms the knowledge stored in their own brains.

In those days, worship of God was carried on under conditions that were adverse to worship, but on account of the great faith that was in them, these people persevered, and their children were brought up in the fear and love of God. The mothers of long ago were nurses also, and did not need the splendidly-equipped hospitals of modern times, and, small as the house was, and large the family, there was always room for one more, should that one be an aged person or an orphan.

The Bishops of Peterborough.

Going on to speak of the several Bishops who have ruled here since the raising of the district to the site of an Episcopal See, Monsignor McColl said "Bishop Jamot, the first Bishop of Peterborough, was intensely loved by the people here. He was a man of sacrifice, and his name is green in this city today. He belonged to a noble class of men, the missionaries from old France, and he set a noble example for those who were to follow him.

"But the noble quality of this Episcopal See has been maintained in his successors, under whose guidance the parish has progressed, education has developed, and, above all, the piety of the people has increased. Bishop Jamot was succeeded by Bishop Dowling, who was here for the short space of two years, and was followed by Bishop O'Connor, who had a long rule of twenty-four years. He was a prayerful man, and a prudent man, one who understood his people, and who made progress always to correspond with what the people were able to bear.

"Now we have our present Bishop, who will have reigned for thirteen years in the Fall. Those who went before have planted, but he has nobly watered, as you know yourselves. Under him, our institutions have been commenced or improved, and, like everything else that he does, there is a perfection and finish to his work in this respect. He has also done much for our schools and our hospital, one of the finest in the country.

"We should learn much from the men who settled here a hundred years ago. We should copy their faith and self-denial, their great resourcefulness, their perseverance, and their ability to withstand difficulties. The Catholic man should always be a tolerant man, because the foundation of religion is charity. Catholics believe that there is only one true religion, established by Jesus Christ and inspired by the Holy Ghost. We Catholics cannot change or disbelieve that, but still we should be tolerant of those who do not believe as we do. To be tolerant we do not have to give up our principles. Toleration is not necessary with those who believe as we do, but in getting along with those who differ from us.

"We should consider the advantages we possess when compared with our forefathers, but we must remember that all this ritual today, offered up as it is for the glory and honor of God, is not more worthy in His sight than the services they held in the little log shanty down by the river. We are merely doing the best we can with our advantages, as they did with what they possessed in those days. Let us be, as they were, loyal to Our Blessed Lord. Let us emulate their sound faith and devotion and their loyalty to the legitimate authority of the land in which they lived. In following out our holy religion, we must not neglect to train our men and women to be good citizens. We should keep their example ever before us, and, as I believe they are with us today in spirit, so, if we keep the faith and fight the good fight as they did, we shall receive the reward that we honestly believe has been theirs."

At the conclusion of Mass, the Apostolic Benediction was conferred on the congregation by His Excellency. A large crowd filled the Cathedral to the doors.

In the Afternoon.

The afternoon services were very impressive, and were attended by thousands of people who listened with attentive interest to the discourse by Rt. Rev. M. F. Fallon, D.D., Bishop of London, the Civic address to the Apostolic Delegate, delivered by His Worship, Mayor Holloway, and the reply, and witnessed the unveiling of the bronze statue of "Christ our King" on our lawn, also taking part in the Solemn Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament which was offered up on an improvised altar placed against the outer, eastern wall of the Cathedral. The altar was draped with yellow and white, and adorned with lighted candles and vases of red tulips and pink roses. His Excellency was assisted in the Benediction by Rev. V. Corkery and Rev. C. McCarney. Benediction music was sung by about three hundred of the children of the Separate Schools of the city, and the Seminarians from St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto, also sang "Tu es Petris" during the unveiling of the statue, which was performed by His Excellency immediately after his arrival, attended by a large retinue of visiting clergy and acolytes, in procession. During the unveiling ceremonies, the People's Chimes rang out in the appropriate music of "Christ, the Church's One Foundation."

On a platform placed on the lawn, draped with numbers of large Union Jacks and small, brightly-colored pennants, the dais of the Apostolic Delegate was placed, with seats for his attendant priests. Here the amplifiers whose aid made the addresses distinctly audible to the vast concourse, were also in position. A sermon was preached by Bishop Fallon, following the unveiling of the statue, and this was followed by a Civic address delivered to His Excellency by Mayor Holloway, who was accompanied by Aldermen Phelan, Cotton, MacDonald, Denne and Turner.

His Excellency, replying to the address of welcome, assured the Mayor and the citizens generally of his pleasure in being present on this occasion, and, speaking of Bishop O'Brien, said: "He is thoroughly a man of God, a real shepherd of souls, ready for an sacrifice for the welfare of his people."

Speaking of the city itself, and of its thriving and prosperous condition, His Excellency went on to say that he had observed here, as elsewhere in Canada, the possibilities and wonderful opportunities offered by Canada to its people, and concluded with the proffer of his best wishes to all the citizens.

The Question of Christ.

"Who do people say that I am?" was the text taken from the 16th chapter of the Gospel of St. Matthew, by Bishop Fallon, as the basis of his discourse. In clear, forceful language, with all the eloquent oratory and smoothly flowing periods for which the Bishop is noted, this momentous question of the Saviour to His followers was analyzed for his hearers.

"A humble Galilean peasant, son of the Maiden Mary and assumed son of the carpenter Joseph, sprang suddenly into the limelight. His whole life was only thirty-three years in length and of this he gave only three years to His public mission. Christ at this time was anxious to know what public opinion said of Him, and He asked this question of His disciples. The answer of some declared Him to be Elias, returned to earth, or Jeremias, or the recently martyred John the Baptist. It was only Peter who answered: 'Thou art Christ, the Son of the living God.'

"Today, that question, if it were asked, would be quite as urgent, quite as pertinent, quite as opportune, as it was when it fell first from the lips of Christ Himself. There are various ways in which that question would be answered today, but it cannot be escaped. Here or hereafter, in glory or in shame, you will have to answer this question: 'What do they say of Me?' Christ was not satisfied with the role of prophet, nor with that of Elias or Jeremias. He was something more stupendous than any of these.

"Today, in answering that question, there are various theories advanced. There are those who believe that Jesus was a remarkable character, but merely human. And there is the modernarian, tainted with the ancient heresy, who says that Jesus was the most remarkable moralist that the world ever knew, but that there was a time when He did not exist, and therefore He cannot be called God."

Christ came down from heaven, not only for redemptive action on individual souls, but to establish a new kingdom, of which He was to be the supreme king, the eternal lawgiver and the everlasting protector. The prince of the Apostles was a poor fisherman, without wealth or standing, or political influence, and his companions were men of his own stamp. But Christ said to them: "Go and teach all nations — teaching whatsoever I have commanded you. And behold, I am with you, all days, even to the end of the world." That was the plan upon which His kingdom was established. There never had been anything like it in the annals of the world. It was based upon absolute, unswerving obedience: "He that heareth you, heareth Me." There was never so original or so sublimely audacious a plan set before human minds, either before or since. The constitution of the Church of Christ was absolutely original, in that it did not take into consideration the hate of its enemies, or ask for the support of its friends.

The Christ of History.

"To a certain extent, the world has taken up the gage of battle against Christ. It tries to pick flaws in the kingdom which He established upon this earth. It is said of Christ by a certain element in society that He is too dogmatic. They want the Christ of history. Angered by His restraints, feeling the sting of His rebukes, they cry: "Away with the Christ of dogma." They know that He proclaimed truth unswervingly, and there is nothing so dogmatic as truth, also that He fixed obedience as a condition of membership in His kingdom. They know that He divided, with startling effect, all the old codes and standards. It came to be true that there was not in all the world anything that would not be judged by the light of the sayings of Jesus.

"The Christ of history, according to the Bible, was a man of marvellous power, surrounded along His way by miracles, with the power of stilling the tempest and bringing inanimate bodies back to life. There is the Christ of history, according to the Bible."

Concluding, the Bishop said: "I beg of you, even those of you who do not belong to the Catholic Church, I beg of you, in the name of the Holy Father, of our common Christianity, and in the name of our native land, that you honor Christ, the Founder of Christianity, who has taken empires off their hinges and changed the current of the world's history. It is to that Jesus, the wonder-worker, that this celebration is dedicated. I ask you, all of you, as you pass this statue that stands, not only on grounds adjacent to the Roman Catholic Cathedral, but in a very public place, to take off your hat and say: 'Jesus Christ, I adore you, and I cling to you in the hope of eternal salvation.' The story of Jesus is a lovely and pathetic one. It touches the heart. The faith of the Catholic Church is that Jesus Christ was the son of Mary, and therefore human, but that He was also the eternal Son of the eternal Father, and therefore was divine. Peter, with his weakness, but with his wonderful enthusiasm, the man who was always ready to struggle and, if need be, die for His Master, cried out in the language that alone is Christian, the language that can bring all Christian people around the Cross and around the throne of Christ: 'Thou art Christ, the Son of the living God.'"

The following is the text of the address delivered to His Excellency in the name of the citizens of Peterborough, by His Worship, Mayor Holloway:—

"Your Excellency:—

"On behalf of the citizens of Peterborough I desire to give you a very cordial welcome to our City. We are always pleased to welcome visitors, and especially to open our doors to a distinguished visitor occupying an exalted position such as Your Excellency holds.

"This is the second time that Peterborough has had the honour of welcoming the Apostolic Delegate, as your predecessor was here thirteen years ago. This occasion is one of especial interest, as you have come to grace the centennial celebration of the foundation of the Catholic Church in Peterborough, which has, for one hundred years, ministered to the people of your faith in the city and district.

"We are pleased that the head of the Peterborough diocese, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, whom you have so kindly come to assist in this celebration, is a native of this city, one whom we were glad to see honoured by being raised to the high position he occupies, and who, while devoting himself to the spiritual interests of his people, is always ready to assist in any good work for the community.

"We are glad to be able to tell Your Excellency that we have a splendid city to live in. Respect for law and order is a marked characteristic of the people, and there is an excellent feeling among all classes. This, along with the natural advantages which we possess, has resulted in the growth of the city. It is very little over a hundred years since the first settlers located on the site of Peterborough, yet we have a city with manufacturing and commercial institutions which would be creditable to any city, and everything that is needed to make the City a desirable place of residence. In this development of the city and in the promotion of good feeling we are glad to say that Catholics have taken a prominent part.

"We hope that Your Excellency may have an enjoyable visit and may carry away pleasant souvenirs of your visit to Peterborough."

Arrangements for handling the crowds were well looked after yesterday afternoon by Inspector Reid of the city police force, and his aides, all of whom did their best to keep the people from trampling on the unfenced, newly laid-out flower beds. It was an orderly and attentive audience that filled the spacious Cathedral grounds to capacity at the afternoon ceremonies.

Immediately after the conclusion of the ceremonies, the visiting clergymen and Seminarians from Toronto were entertained at a banquet given by the Knights of Columbus in their club rooms on Simcoe street.

One of the interesting portions of the Celebration was the ceremony on Saturday afternoon, when children of the three city parishes, to the number of nine hundred, assembled in St. Peter's Cathedral to welcome the Apostolic Delegate.

The address to His Excellency was read in loud, clear tones by small Eugene Snider, and was later presented by Clare Sullivan. His Excellency, replying to the Children's welcome, granted them a holiday on Monday, and gave them a brief discourse, adjuring them to remember at all times the virtues of obedience, prayer and purity of heart.

Solemn Benediction was then solemnized by the Apostolic Delegate, assisted by Rev. V. Corkery and Rev. C. McCarney.

Singing by the assembled children, led by Rev. J. Finn, was especially pleasing. The selections included the "Ecce Sacerdos," "O Salutaris," a "Te Deum," sung during the Benediction, the "Tantum Ergo," "Laudate" and "Vivat."

This morning, at eight o'clock, the official close of the Celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the saying of the first Mass in Peterborough was made in the solemnizing of Pontifical Requiem Mass for the repose of the souls of all who have died here during the past century. His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, was the celebrant, Rev. V. Corkery was deacon, Rev. G. Maher sub-deacon, Rev. P. Costello High Priest, Rev. P. Butler and Rev. C. McCarney, honorary deacons, and Rev. J. J. O'Brien, Master of Ceremonies, assisted by Rev. H. Black. The singing by the Children's Choir of about three hundred voices was led by Rev. J. Finn.

The Apostolic Delegate left on the noon C.N.R. train today, in the special coach provided for him through the kindness of Sir Henry Thornton.

An interesting old document that has a connection with this celebration in the city is in the possession of Mr. James Lynch, Hunter street. It is the Registrar's record of the various transfers, over the space of nearly a century back, of the parcel of land where one of the first old Catholic churches of the city is said to have been situated, on the block which at time extended back from what is now George street nearly to Mr. James Murty's store, on the north side of Hunter street.

ONE MAN KILLED IN KNIFE BATTLE

Compatriot in Port Arthur Jail Facing Murder Charge.

BOTH AUSTRIANS.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., June 7.—(Canadian Press).—As the result of a fight with knives, an Austrian named Ivan Striblinski, aged 50, is lying dead in the local morgue, and another Austrian, named Peter Razkorn, is in Port Arthur jail with a charge of murder hanging over him. The fight occurred on Saturday evening, in McIntyre Township, a few miles distant from Port Arthur. The two men had lived there all winter, having rented the Wilson homestead. They were cutting pulpwood when an argument occurred, it is said, and the men quarrelled.

COL. R. E. BIRDSALL IS ON RETIRED LIST

Given Full Rank of Colonel on Retirement From Active Militia.

HASTINGS, June 7.—Congratulations are being extended to Col. R. E. Birdsall, who has recently received word from the Militia Department to the effect that he had been placed on the retired list with promotion to the full rank of Colonel. The first of his military life was with the 57th Battalion of Peterbrough, and he has been an officer of the Canadian Militia for 47 years, being in command of the 40th Northumberland Battalion at Cobourg for some time.

ROTARIANS ARE URGED TO AID THE BOYS' CAMP

Each Member Asked To Take Responsibility For One Boy.

MR. DOBBIN'S TALK.

Tells Rotary Club About Economic Conditions in Quebec.

Peterboro Rotarians were urged by Rotarian Tom Dutton at today's luncheon to take a greater interest in the boys' camp and to each assume the responsibility of making it possible for a boy to spend a week or two at camp. The committee hoped, Rotarian Dutton explained, that so far as possible it was honed to have the boys earn their holiday instead of having their way paid for them by Rotarians.

Past President John Seels appealed for support for the Rotary Carnival, and also urged the members to show more interest in the Rotary baseball team.

The speaker to-day was Rotarian F. H. Dobbin, who explained that he appeared in the role of an emergency ration, inasmuch as it had been honed to have either Bishop Fallon of London or the Bishop of the Yukon to address the club.

Rotarian Dobbin first dealt with the history of the Rotary Club, which he is to prepare, and asked that an editing committee be appointed.

He took as the subject of his talk economic conditions in the Province of Quebec, expressing the opinion that it would be well for Ontario if her Provincial legislators took the same paternal interest in the economic welfare of the people of the province as was shown by the Quebec Government. Rotarian Dobbin's review of conditions in Quebec was full of interest in his hearers. He showed how closely related to Quebec's problems were industrial conditions in the New England States, and then investigated these conditions to show the changes that had come about in recent years. He also dealt at some length with the advent of the Aluminum Company into Quebec and upon the new conditions created by that enterprise.

Mr. Dobbin was given a hearty vote of thanks for his address.

A committee, composed of the past presidents of the club, with Rotarian V. J. McElderry, a chairman, was appointed to confer with Rotarian Dobbin as to the form the contemplated history was to take.

MEMORIAL GIFTS WERE DEDICATED

At Morning Service at Murray Street Church Yesterday.

At the morning service in the Murray street Baptist church yesterday, Dr. C. W. Rose, on behalf of the congregation, accepted two memorial gifts, one from the relatives of the late Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Mann, and the other from the husband and daughter of the late Mrs. James Montgomery.

The sum of five hundred dollars was recently given to the church by J. Willan Mann, the father of Dr. Mann, and Mrs. Christina Simmons, the mother of Mrs. Mann, in response to a suggestion that such a gift to be used for the purpose of adding to the comfort and convenience of the choir, and for perpeuating the memory of Dr. and Mrs. Mann, would be appropriate and acceptable.

This money has been used to provide a wardrobe for choir gowns, the thorough decoration of choir apartments, furnishings in the way of pictures, "The Light of the World," and "The Last Supper," mirrors, table, window hangings, lamp shades and other minor things.

The pictures of Dr. and Mrs. Mann have been placed in the room used by the choir; also a memorial tablet, with the following inscription:

In remembrance of Dr. John Burritt Mann, and Mary Simmons Mann, who served God and mankind together in life, and entered into their larger service together, September 25th, 1925.

A kindly friend and ministering Physician, Deacon and Chairman of the Music Committee. He expended his life doing good.

This Memorial was accepted with sincere thanks to the donors. Mr. J. Willan Mann and Mrs. C. E. Simmons, and with the assurance that the choir would greatly appreciate through many many years this thoughful provision for their comfort in connection with their ministry of music.

The memorial to Mrs. Montgomery took the form of a handsome pulpit Bible, bearing the following inscription:

"Presented to Murray Street Baptist Church in memory of Mrs. James Montgomery, a faithful member of exceptional gifts for many years, by her rusband, Mr. James Montgomery, and daughter, Miss Mayme Montgomery."

"June 6, 1926."

Dr. Rose expressed the thanks of the congregation.

BRITISH CONSUL SIGNED PAPERS

Alleged That He Received $1,000 a Cargo For "Fake" Certificates.

AT MEXICAN PORT.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 7.—(Canadian Press.)—Liquor shipments to Mexico via Vancouver, which apparently got no further than San Francisco, were discussed in the Customs probe this morning. The matter before the committee was that involving the shipment of 6,000 cases of liquor, by Hiram Walker and Sons, of Walkerville, to a firm at Ensanada, Mexico. It was not made quite clear this morning whether or not this shipment reached Mexico, but it was alleged that W. D. Madden, then British Vice Consul at Ensanada, Mexico, who signed the landing certificate, received $1,000 a cargo for signing similar certificates which were "fakes."

R. T. Ferguson, counsel for Hiram Walker and Sons, insisted that his clients had acted in perfectly good faith throughout this transaction. They were just as much surprised as the Canadian Customs to learn that Madden had been signing these false certificates, he said. R. L. Calder, K.C., counsel for the committee, suggested that the matter might be looked into further by the Customs authorities. If the log of the "Prince Albert" (the vessel which supposedly took the 6,000 cases to Mexico) could be obtained, it would probably show whether or not the liquor reached Ensanada.

The building stands on the shore of Lake Leman, on a beautiful site donated by the Swiss Government, not far from the site selected for the future home of the League of Nations, with which the Labor Bureau is affiliated.

PORT CARLING, Ont, June 7 (Canadian Press).—The Butterfield Mill Building, an old landmark in Port Carling, used by the Port Carling Boat Work, Limited, for the storage of boats, etc, was destroyed by a fire of mysterious origin at an early hour on Sunday morning. The Port Carling Boat Works, Limited, had stored in the building forty-five rowboats and one launch, all new, of their own, besides fifteen launches and two cars belonging to other parties. The losses are approximately as follows: Mrs. B. Butterfield on the building, $2,500; the Port Carling Boat Works, Limited, $3,500; other parties on launches and cars in storage, $6,000.

300 NATIVES DIE OF STARVATION

Survivors Eat Friends and Dogs Along Bering Coast.

ARMS TAKEN.

NOME, June 7 (Canadian Press).—Three hundred natives at Indian Point, Siberia, across Bering Strait from Alaska, died from starvation last winter, and those who survived ate their comrades, relatives and dogs, Captain Ira Rank of the motor ship Trader reported here yesterday after a trading cruise to the islands in the Bering Sea. The vessel arrived on Friday.

Captain Rank said many of the natives killed their wives and children with knives and then themselves to end their miseries. He declared that the natives on the Siberian coast must depend entirely upon ammunition and guns to provide their necessities for life, and that these were taken from them by the Soviets, who feared an uprising.

The Woman's Day

Written by a Woman for Women.

Touching brightly on woman's every major interest in life from books and babies to politics and psycho analysis.

(By Allene Sumner)

BEING A BEAUTY.

"What colors become me most?" s a question received by Cynthia Grey more frequently, perhaps, than any other. One general answer might be, according to costume authorities, "study your hair and eyes, match and contrast. The best rule is to bring out color of eyes more than any other feature." If you have bright brown or black eyes, dark hair, and high coloring, wear warm flaming colors, yellow, orange, rose, henna. If your eyes are blue-grey wear cool shades of jade and dull blues and greys.

THE CALLING CARD.

Time was when calls and calling cards had a dignity and seriousness of position not accorded them in this hurry-up world when invitations to the most formal affairs are apt to be telephoned, and social letters written by typewriter. Simpler rules prevail about the calling card than in the old days when etiquet decreed a certain number of cards for various occasions, with corners turned variously to denote different things. One card suffices for any occasion now, and corners are NEVER turned down.

LACE SHOWER.

Lace lends itself to bridal showers. Write invitations on round lace paper doilies. Decorate with maiden hair fern on lacy corsage plates. Have table favors of small corsages on lace holders, decorate with Queen Anne's lace and have shower gifts in lace or wrapped in lace doilies.

WIVES "EASY TO LIVE WITH."

Qualities in a wife which make her "easy to live with," as told by husbands to Montayne Perry, author, include "knowing when and when not to ask a man to do little chores around the house," "how to stretch the money," "taking time off to play," "a sense of proportion—not making a life tragedy out of a steak spoiled because a man doesn't get home on time to dinner."

HELEN WILLS' TENNIS FROCK.

It is not too much to assume that a girl who plays tennis for championships as does Helen Wills, would also be the girl who knows what a tennis player should wear for comfort and style. Helen Wills' ideal tennis dress is a sleeveless, low V-necked jumper overblouse of white broadcloth or crepe, worn with a color-striped white skirt, pleated, very short, and very full.

The Home Kitchen

SUMMER MENUS AT SMALL COST.

Summer is the time to live healthily, happily and at small cost. We may cut the meat bill to a quarter the usual amount and not miss it. Two vegetable dinners, two fish dinners, a chicken dinner, an egg and nut dinner, a spaghetti and cheese dinner don't sound like starvation, and the butcher furnishes but one dinner during the week.

First Vegetable Dinner.

Jellied Tomato Soup.
Peas, Scalloped Potatoes, Fried Cauliflower, Sweet and Sour Beets.
Pulled Bread.
Hearts of Lettuce, French Dressing.
Brown Betty Pudding, Hard Sauce.

Second Vegetable Dinner.

Fresh Cream of Pea Soup.
Baked Asparagus, Stuffed and Baked Tomatoes, Boiled Onions.
Corn Muffins.
Watercress and Onion Salad.
Lemon Pie.

The vegetables for either dinner may be prepared in the morning and the dinner gotten in a half to three-quarter of an hour. For the pulled bread, take a small fresh baker's loaf, trim off all the crust, then with a fork pull off good-sized pieces and just before dinner put them in the oven to heat through and lightly brown. Cheese may be added to the escalloped potatoes, if liked. A cheese dressing may be used with the salad instead of a plain French dressing.

In the second dinner, the asparagus is boiled tender before it is put on a buttered baking dish, dusted with pepper and salt, dotted thickly with butter and sprinkled lightly with a few crumbs mixed with a little grated cheese, then browned quickly in the oven.

First Fish Dinner.

Shrimp Canape.
Baked Fillet of Sole.
Baked Potatoes, Boiled Asparagus.
Cucumber Salad.
Fruit Pie.

Second Fish Dinner.

Cold Clam Broth.
Curried Lobster.
Potato Salad, Peas.
Hot Biscuits.
Fruit Cobbler, Hard Sauce.

The chicken dinner should be cooked after the manner best liked in the family, with appropriate vegetables, a simple salad and a home-made ice cream dessert.

Nut and Egg Dinner.

Cold Chicken Broth.
Eggs in Tomato Curry.
Baked Potatoes, Summer Squash.
Deviled Egg Salad with Walnuts.
Floating Island.

Spaghetti and Cheese Dinner.

Sardine Canape.
Spaghetti in Italian Dressing.
Baked Onions.
Rolls.
Tomato and Cucumber Salad.
Strawberry Shortcake.

The Summer squash may be boiled and mashed, or it may be baked in the shell. For the deviled egg salad, the eggs are deviled as usual, then they are chilled. When ready, slice the eggs onto the lettuce, strew with finelly chopped walnuts and mask with mayonnaise.

Fulness Refuses to Be Sat On and Comes to the Front

Young girls end the Spring in silk and begin the Summer with a generous supply of cotton Georgette and cotton voile dresses. Charming color, hand or machine shirring in the front section and sleeves, the new Eton collar and a narrow belt make a self-trimmed frock eminently satisfactory from the style standpoint and of such negligible cost that it is easy on the always overtaxed dress allowance. For taffeta, which is very new, you can make it without the sleeves and with an organdy collar. Printed Georgette is adorable with the collar and sleeves of Georgette matching one of the colors in the print.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

TUESDAY, JUNE 8.

A lively and interesting day is forecast from the predominent rule of important planets. Business generally should be active, and there is prospect of an abrupt change or an unexpected opportunity. And these, while holding some promise of benefit, are also beset with dangers, since the finances are in jeopardy and also new projects are menaced, unless they relate to matters of diplomacy or may be managed with finesse, as the subtler faculties are under good stimulus. Care for the health.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate an important year, with unexpected opportunities. These may call for radical change and although they carry some benefits, yet they are not unqualifiedly endorsed, since new projects are under baneful ruling and also the finances are subject to hazard. Matters calling for intrigue, diplomacy or subtle handling are favored. A child born on this day should be versatile and clever, succeeding through finesse, diplomacy or intrigue. Its peculiar talents may gain success for its undertakings.

Divided skirts for golf and tennis are really to be worn in Europe this year; Paris dress designers have used to treat them as a joke, and are making some ingenious models.

WILDWOOD MOVIES

A Rusty-Can Honeymoon

In June, of a morning,
Oh, what will we see?
Please tell us, O Nature Man.

The Robins are nesting away in a tree,
A warbling wren fills a rusty can;
With buzz and abumble
The old Queen bee
Is gathering pollen as fast as she can;
The Catbird, a mocker, is jumbling his tune,
And the Bridegrooms of Birdland
All know it is June.

All the wild folks had heard of the trouble in the rusty can, but nobody had seen it, so the Bluebird was requested to go and interview the naturalist and borrow the movie reel of the event, as it was hinted that he had hidden behind a bush and had taken the pictures, unknown to Mr. and Mrs. Wren.

Happy Bluebird came back and said it was all set for the pictures, and Bruin, the Bear, was to go over and fetch them, which was done. Judge Owl gave the reel the once over, using a dark cave for a studio, and as evening drew on, the wild folks began to assemble for the show.

There was a flicker of light on the screen, then a huge picture of Judge Owl appeared, with one eye closed, so that was a sign that he had been half asleep when he reviewed it. At any rate, the story promptly followed, with the old rusty can sitting on the post at the edge of the woods, a hole in its bottom.

Mr. Wren sang, then brought a stick; then he sang, then he brought a stick. This was kept up until the can was almost full of sticks. Then Mrs. Wren arrived and went inside to lay the eggs. Now, Mr. Wren had one more big stick that he had planned to take inside, and, not knowing his wife was in there, he tried to go in, pulling the stick with him. The stick stuck on the jagged edge of the hole and jolted the can. Down fell the can from the post, can, sticks, birds and all, and Mrs. Wren was raging!

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

(By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Oklahoma.)

That a man or business that ruins their credit by neglect to answer statements or pay bills, hurt themselves.

That it often hurts them so badly that they fail to recover.

That to damage credit is bad business.

That it means when they need some thing they can't get it.

That every person or firm needs credit at times.

That to abuse the credit they have is poor business.

That it is betraying the confidence reposed in them.

That when credit is lost no time should be lost in paying up and getting right.

That paying up is the only way to get right.

That when they get right again, they should stay right.

Good credit often saves a job, a business, and sometimes it saves the loss of all.

HER OWN WAY

A GIRL of TODAY

A MISTAKE.

"I cannot come to dinner tonight, Mr. Robinson," I said glibly, for he had asked me with an air that made me realize that he did not think I could possibly refuse him. "I have an engagement."

The man bent toward me "With Mr. Hathaway?" he murmured, and his voice and expression implied anything that I might make of it.

I smiled inwardly as I bowed my head, knowing that the man before me thought I was going with Mr. Hathaway, Senior, instead of Jerry.

I let him think so, not realizing that I would have reason to regret it some time later.

"Perhaps you will go with me some other evening," he suggested.

"Perhaps."

"You certainly know how to do it," he said softly as he moved away.

"Do what?" I asked innocently.

"You know how to lead a man on, my dear. No wonder Hathaway is in love with you."

"I felt the eyes of all the girls upon me as I moved away from the end of the counter where I had been talking with Mr. Robinson. The glance of one of them, who had charge of the hosiery department right across from me, seemed particularly malignant. If looks could have seared I would have been blistered.

"Look at Sarah Smith," whispered Angie Horton as she took down some boxes of handkerchiefs behind me. "How she does hate you."

"Why should she hate me?" I asked quietly, as she went past to her customer.

"Because the boss has been rather nice to her lately and I think she had an idea she was going to be Miss Cleaver's successor," explained Angie. "But you see I called the turn. You're elected, my dear. You're elected."

I could not answer back for the pretty girl who had bought the handkerchiefs of me in the morning was standing on the other side of the counter in front of me.

This time she was embarrassed and blushing. For the life of me I could see no reason.

"I've got to have another dozen of those handkerchiefs," she said.

"Have you? I'm glad. That means business for me, you know."

"You see I didn't give them to Bud after all," she confided. "I gave them to someone else."

I smiled at her and said nothing. In fact I opened my mouth to say something, but fortunately I remembered that it wasn't the place of a sales person to appear too curious.

PHONES IN CANADA DOUBLE IN DECADE

British Columbia Leads the Provinces in Percentage of Phones.

This week the grand total of Bell telephones in operation in Ontario and Quebec reached the six hundred thousand mark.

Simultaneously with this announcement, Manager Northgrave gave out some interesting figures of telephone development in Canada, just compiled by the Statistical Department of the Company. The total telephones in operation in all Canada as of December 31st, 1925, was 1,148,770, an increase of 64,806, or 5.9 per cent during the year. Canada's development has now reached 13.1 telephones per hundred of population.

Of the provinces, British Columbia still leads with 18.1 telephones per hundred inhabitants. Ontario is next with 17.4: then follow Saskatchewan with 13.2, Alberta 11.9, Manitoba 11.5, Quebec 9.7, Nova Scotia 7.6, New Brunswick 7.5, Prince Edward Island 4.8 and Yukon 4.8.

Quebec had the greatest gain in 1925, viz., 9.6 per cent: Ontario next with 7.4 per cent, and then British Columbia 6.5 per cent.

Of the Canadian telephone systems, the Bell Company is apparently growing most rapidly. For 1925 the Company's increase was 6.8 per cent, and the British Columbia Telephone Company next with 6.0 per cent.

Ten years ago (December 31st, 1915) Canada had 553,032, as compared with the present figure of over 1,148,770 — over 100 per cent increase within the decade.

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

It would be a dreadful thing if we had to set aside all our fond ideas and long-established conclusions. Yet hardly a day passes but somebody challenges a pet thought of ours.

For instance, along comes Dr. Charles M. Wharton, in charge of health and physical education at the University of Pennsylvania, crying out against the wild scramble for health by unnatural means."

"Exercise as a panacea for all human ills is dangerously overrated," he says.

You will be interested in some other statements of Dr. Wharton. "Reducing and starvation diets are assaults on health. The latest fad in the name of physical culture is the early morning exercise by radio and it selects the worst time of the whole day for heavy exercise."

The doctor professes to be appalled by the number of physical defects and weaknesses he finds developed by overindulgence in athletics in preparatory schools.

"Someone should cry a halt against this wild scramble for health by unnatural means." Both in school and out of it Dr. Wharton thinks there is a real abuse of exercise.

I fully agree with this well-known physical trainer. It is a pity that a well-balanced sense of proportion cannot direct the efforts of persons who enjoy systematic physical exertion. After all, it goes back to that injunction of old: "Be temperate in all things."

In the world of physical welfare it is always true that "enough is enough." The things which in moderation are good for you may be extremely dangerous if indulged in excessively.

Mild physical exercise, in the form of some appealing game or procedure, will do everything for you, provided it is taken regularly. A much more strenuous method is likely to produce undue strain and result in permanent harm.

A form of daily exercise which is carried on safely and helpfully may be extremely dangerous if undertaken once or twice a month. The soft muscles and heart may be damaged by the unaccustomed effort.

Children, growing and unsettled physically, cannot endure the strain of hard training. What may be perfectly safe for college students may be entirely too strenuous at the preparatory school age.

It stands to reason that middle-aged persons who have permitted themselves to grow stout cannot undertake the violent exercises which have been laid out for younger and stronger people. Fat has replaced most of the heart muscles and it cannot stand up against strenuous effort.

Now, don't go to the other extreme and give up exercising. Take the middle course. Give yourself the joy and benefit of gentle effort in some manner which holds your interest.
